Molly rapped on Mrs. Nelson's front door. Her mother and father were standing close behind. They were all anxious to find out if Mrs. Nelson knew anything about the pendant Molly had found. An eternity seemed to pass before the door finally opened.

Mrs. Nelson looked surprised to see Molly and her parent standing there. "Did you forget something?" she asked.

Molly held out the pendant to Mrs. Nelson. "I found this in the street the other day, " Molly explained. "Is it yours?"

Mrs. Nelson shook her head. "This engraving is worn, Mrs. Nelson, but it has two names on it. We know that the captain's name is Josiah… are you by any chance the Dorothea that is mentioned here?"

"Yes we do!" exclaimed Mrs. Nelson. "Molly, you all here waiting for me when I return, in beautiful Beaufort-town."

"Thank you, young lady," the captain said. "We are very indebted to you. However can we repay you?"

"But what about the back of the pendant?" Molly asked. "What does it say?"

Mrs. Nelson pointed out each word as she read aloud.

"Of course," Molly replied. "But I'll have you all here waiting for me when I return, in beautiful Beaufort-town!"

Reprinted with permission.

Use the News: When she was asked how she found the pendant, Molly explained the whole story. From print or digital editions of your newspaper, choose a story or a topic and series of stories and tell or write key events in the order they occurred. Create a timeline!

Distributed by the N.C. Press Foundation

Learn more about historic Beaufort!