

Investing for people and communities

At the heart of journalism lies an unwavering drive to improve lives.

Whether chronicling the stories of a community and its people, celebrating successes, or standing as the watchdog for truth and integrity, journalists invest their lives in working to make a difference for others.

We get you.

For nearly 139 years, AT&T has been investing in North Carolina, connecting people and communities across the state with each other and the world.

Through the latest technology, we are giving businesses an edge in the global marketplace, keeping first responders connected and delivering information and entertainment people want when and where they want it.

And we're supporting education initiatives and other ideas that spark innovations which will help communities grow and thrive.

Congratulations to all the winners of the NCPA 2017 Advertising Contest and the 2017 News, Editorial and Photojournalism Contest. Your professionalism and passion are helping our state become an even better place in which to live and work.
