Gladstone, OR, May 9, 2017 - Anne McCallister, local Certified Professional Organizer® and member of the National Association of Professional Organizers (NAPO), was presented with the prestigious 2017 Special Service to NAPO Award at the association's annual conference held in Pittsburgh, PA. McCallister was recognized for her work as the NAPO National Education Committee Co-Chair. McCallister, of Inside the Box Organizing, Gladstone, OR, along with co-chair Jennifer Truesdale, CPO®, Charleston, SC, were presented the award on Thursday, April 27, 2017, by the association's National President, Ellen Faye, CPO®. Their combined efforts have made a difference in advancing the organizing and productivity industry through strengthening the educational offerings in NAPO University and pioneering new endeavors for Specialist Certificate programs in Residential Organizing and Workplace Productivity.

The co-chairs' latest project is the creation of the Business Resource Track which provides new organizing and productivity entrepreneurs with tools for growing and maintaining successful consulting businesses. McCallister says "If I risk speaking for both of us, we were shocked, honored, overwhelmed and tickled pink. Many wonderful NAPO volunteers contributed so much time, energy, and expertise long before we were handed the reigns. Plus, we have the greatest NAPO Education Committee ever! They're the ones who made us look good."

Inside the Box Organizing, based in Gladstone, OR, focuses on serving small businesses, self-employed, and home office clients in the Portland Metro area. Services include project management, time management, file & paper management, as well as customized presentations and training.

Professional organizers and productivity consultants offer an invaluable service to time-crunched individuals and businesses. A professional organizer and productivity consultant provides ideas, information, structure, systems, and solutions aimed at increasing clients' productivity. Their goal is to help clients develop the skills which will lead them to more control over time, space, and priorities.

The National Association of Professional Organizers (NAPO), "The Organizing Authority®" since 1985, represents thousands of experts in organizing and productivity solutions for individuals and businesses. NAPO seeks to share information about this growing industry and to define quality standards for the organizing and productivity profession.
