

Father John J. McKenna Pastor Emeritus of Sloatsburg Parish

Father John J. McKenna, pastor emeritus of St. Joan of Arc parish in Sloatsburg, where he served for 18 years, died Sept. 21. He was 97.

Retired Auxiliary Bishop Gerald T. Walsh celebrated the Funeral Mass Sept. 25 in the chapel of the John Cardinal O'Connor Pavilion in the Bronx. Msgr. William V. Reynolds delivered the homily.

Father McKenna was pastor of St. Joan of Arc from 1979 until his retirement in 1997. He also served as parochial vicar on Staten Island at Our Lady Star of the Sea,

Father John J. McKenna

1971-1979 and St. Mary of the Assumption, 1955-1971; St. Margaret Mary, the Bronx, 1953-1955 and St. Joseph's, Yonkers, 1947-1948. He taught at Cardinal Hayes High School, the Bronx, 1948-1953.

Born in Manhattan, he studied for the priesthood at Cathedral College and St. Joseph's Seminary, Dunwoodie. He was ordained in 1947.

He earned a master's degree in education from Fordham University.

Interment was at Calvary Cemetery in Woodside, Queens.

Journalist Cokie Roberts, Lifelong Catholic

Cokie Roberts, a broadcast journalist and political commentator who spoke publicly about her Catholic faith and admiration for the Sacred Heart sisters who taught her, died Sept. 17 due to complications from breast cancer. She was 75.

Mrs. Roberts, who died at home in Bethesda, Md., was an Emmy award-winning reporter, author and frequent keynote speaker at Catholic college graduations. She was described as "a true pioneer for women in journalism," by James Goldston, president of ABC News, her longtime employer.

She was inducted into the Broadcasting and Cable Hall of Fame and was listed as one of the 50 greatest women in the history of broadcasting by the American Women in Radio and Television.

She started her radio career at CBS and in 1978 began working for NPR covering Capitol Hill, where she continued as a political commentator until her death. She joined ABC News in 1988 and during her three decades there, she was a political commentator, chief congressional analyst and co-anchor of the news program "This Week" from 1996 to 2002.

She was born in New Orleans with the full name Mary Martha Corinne Morrison

Cokie Roberts

Claiborne Boggs and was nicknamed "Cokie" by her brother.

Mrs. Roberts attended Catholic schools in New Orleans and Bethesda, run by the sisters of the Society of the Sacred Heart. She wrote eight books, including one with her husband, Steve Roberts, also a journalist, called "From This Day Forward" about their interfaith marriage. Steve is Jewish.

Her roots are both political and Catholic. She is the daughter of Hale Boggs, the former Democratic House majority leader and representative from New Orleans, who died in a plane crash in 1972. Her mother, Lindy, was elected to fill his seat and served nine terms. Lindy Boggs, who died in 2013, also served as U.S. ambassador to the Vatican.

In a 2014 interview with America magazine, Mrs. Roberts said: "There is no way to talk about my faith absent the Society of the Sacred Heart. The women who were my teachers and remain my dear friends mean the world to me. They took girls seriously in the 1950s—a radical notion..."

She is survived by her husband, children Lee and Rebecca, and six grandchildren.

Archbishop Wilton Gregory of Washington, D.C., offered the Funeral Mass Sept. 22 at St. Matthew Cathedral. —CNS

Corrections

An ad in the Catholic High School Open House section in the Sept. 12 issue listed an incorrect date for Mount St. Michael Academy's Open House. It will be on Sunday, Oct. 20, from noon to 3 p.m.

An article about St. Joseph's Seminary, Dunwoodie, in the Sept. 12 issue stated the Franciscan Friars of the Renewal, who send seminarians to Dunwoodie, do not include a pastoral year. The friars, in fact, complete at least seven years of formation, including pastoral formation, before they begin the seminary.

An appointment story in the Aug. 29 issue gave an incomplete name for St. Margaret of Cortona and St. Gabriel parish, the Bronx, where Father Sandro Leyton Rodriguez is now parochial vicar.
