

HIGHER EDUCATION MEDIA FELLOWSHIP

The Higher Education Media Fellowship aims to increase the number of journalists with the tools and networks to provide richer and more comprehensive coverage of postsecondary education, particularly career and technical education (CTE) with topics including data sourcing and analysis, best practices for covering underrepresented communities, and the intersection of postsecondary education and civic learning. The Fellowship program is sponsored by the ECMC Foundation and administered by the Institute for Citizens & Scholars.

Applications are open until February 1, 2025

This fellowship was an amazing opportunity to dive into a CTE-related topic that I'm passionate about and to expand my journalistic skills. With the professional development opportunities, this fellowship will continue helping me grow as a journalist for years to come.

THE FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

- Each ECMC Foundation Fellow in the Higher Education Media Fellowship program will be awarded $10,000—$5,000 as a stipend and $5,000 towards the reporting project.
- The six-month, non-residential program begins with an expenses-paid postsecondary career and technical education (CTE) symposium.
- Following the symposium, Fellows must complete a reporting project, such as a special report or series.
- Fellows will also attend a CTE Collaborative Convening hosted by the ECMC Foundation in the fall.
