Superheroes in the Victorian era: Period drama meets science fiction

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

As television genres go, two of the most popular ones as of late are science fiction and period drama. While they may seem like an odd pairing, a new series combines elements of both, and it has TV fans talking.

In Victorian London in 1896, a supernatural event leaves some people, many of them women, with unusual abilities in the premiere of "The Nevers," airing Sunday, April 11, on HBO. Laura Donnelly ("Outlander") leads the ensemble cast as "quick-fisted" widow Amalia True, who works alongside young inventor Penance Adair (Ann Skelly, "Kissing Candice," 2017) to protect their fellow gifted "orphans."

As the story unfolds, viewers will meet a variety of characters with powers — some of them amazing and some disturbing. All the while, there are those who rail against such people, who are referred to as "touched." True and Adair become champions for their kind and fight against those who would rather they didn't exist.

Created by Joss Whedon ("Buffy the Vampire Slayer"), "The Nevers" has been in the works for a few years. HBO faced some stiff competition from other media giants like Netflix, who also wanted to nab the rights to the project, but came out on top and gave the show a straight-to-series order in 2018. When the project was announced in July of that year, HBO executive Casey Bloys expressed his excitement about the series.

"We look forward to meeting the strange, multifaceted characters of 'The Nevers,' to learn their stories, see them in action and share them with our viewers," Bloys said in a statement at the time.

However, it hasn't exactly been smooth sailing for the show. Whedon had originally been tapped to write and direct, among other things, but he has since left the project. He has been the subject of much criticism lately as a number of stars have come forward with allegations of misconduct on sets, notably actors Ray Fisher ("Justice League," 2017) and Charsma Carpenter ("Buffy the Vampire Slayer"). While Whedon was the subject of an investigation by WarnerMedia (HBO's parent company) stemming from Fisher's allegations, the writer cited other reasons for leaving "The Nevers" in an official statement.

"I realize that the level of the commitment required moving forward, combined with the physical challenges of making such a huge show during a global pandemic, is more than I can handle without the work beginning to suffer," Whedon said, according to Variety, when HBO announced his departure in November 2020.

Luckily, "The Nevers" landed in the very capable hands of screenwriter Philippa Goslett ("Little Ashes," 2008), who will serve as the new showrunner and an executive producer. This will be her first gig as a showrunner, but she has made a name for herself, thanks to her work on many other projects, including "How to Talk to Girls at Parties" (2017) and "Mary Magdalene" (2018). Goslett now finds herself at the helm of one of TV's most anticipated new series, one poised to captivate viewers with its feminist message and decidedly steampunk vibe — also thanks to its Victorian-era period aesthetic and supernatural fantasy plot.

"The Nevers" features a diverse cast of characters striving to bring the story to light. In addition to True and Adair, the allies of the so-called "touched" include rich spinster Lavinia Bidlow, played by Olivia Williams ("Dollhouse"). She runs The Orphanage where many of the main characters reside. Tom Riley ("Da Vinci's Demons") appears as Lavinia's geeky brother, Augie. Zackary Momoh ("Seven Seconds") portrays West Indian physician Dr. Horatio Cousens.

Other characters include James Norton ("Happy Valley") as Hugo Swann, a pansexual young aristocrat who runs a posh secret club; Pip Torrens ("The Crown") as Lord Massen, a former military man who's skeptical of people with powers; Nick Frost ("Hot Fuzz," 2007) as Declan Orrun, aka The Beggar King, a low-level criminal kingpin; English actor Ben Chaplin ("Snowden," 2016) as Det. Frank Mundi, a policeman with strong morals and a penchant for heavy drinking; and Eleanor Tomlinson ("Poldark") as failed singer Mary Brighton.

Elsewhere in the cast of leading characters, Amy Manson ("Once Upon a Time") plays Maladie, the dangerous and unstable leader of a band of renegades, while Rochelle Neil ("Terminator: Dark Fate" (2019) stars as Annie Carbey, aka Bonfire, a criminal with the ability to control fire. Dennis O'Hare ("True Blood") rounds out the main cast as brutal American surgeon Dr. Edmund Hague.

Recurring cast members include Elizabeth Berrington ("Stella") as Lucy, Kiran Sonia Sawar ("Murdered by My Father") as Harriet and Ella Smith ("Hoff the Record") as Desirée.

AMC series to end after Season 4

By Michelle Rose
TV Media

Killing ‘Killing Eve’: It’s official. BBC/AMC’s award-winning cat-and-mouse thriller, “Killing Eve,” will be returning for a fourth season, but alas, it will be the last one. The series is set to bow out in 2022.

“Killing Eve” stars Emmy winner Jodie Comer (“Doctor Foster”) as assassin Villanelle and Golden Globe winner Sandra Oh (“Grey’s Anatomy”) as MI6 agent Eve Polastri. Both leads will be back, and like the three previous seasons, Season 4 will consist of just eight episodes (it is a British series, after all).

So what happens after that? Does this mark the end of the Killing Eve universe? Maybe not. Production company Sid Gentle Films is already working with AMC Networks to explore possible spinoffs. Just don’t expect them to revolve around Eve or Villanelle — any future series will reportedly focus on the series’ supporting characters instead.

“‘Killing Eve’ exploded in popular culture and attracted a dedicated and committed fan base from its very first episode,” Dan McDermott, president of original programming at AMC Networks, said in a recent statement. “Phoebe Waller-Bridge’s brilliant adaptation of the source material, the unforgettable characters given life by Sandra Oh and Jodie Comer, and the entire cast, along with our partners at Sid Gentle Films, have delivered a one-of-a-kind roller-coaster ride that has taken our breath away. . . . We look forward to what is sure to be an unforgettable final season and to exploring potential extensions of this compelling universe.”

The series was created by “Fleabag’s” Phoebe Waller-Bridge, whose overall deal with Amazon didn’t factor into AMC’s decision to end “Killing Eve.” Waller-Bridge oversaw the first season and remains on board as an executive producer, but Laura Neal (“Sex Education”) will be taking over the reins as showrunner and head writer for Season 4. Production on the final eight episodes will begin this summer in Europe for a 2022 premiere.

Keanu comics: Like the characters he portrays in the John Wick and The Matrix movie franchises, there is just no stopping Keanu Reeves.

The film actor made his comic book debut last month with the release of the first issue of “BRZRKR.” The 12-issue limited series was created by Reeves, who worked with Eisner-nominated writer Matt Kindt to develop the story. It is illustrated by Marvel artist Ron Garney, with colors by Bill Crabtree, letters by Clem Robins and character designs by Rafael Grampá.

The launch was a big success, but the bigger news here is that “BRZRKR” is already headed to Netflix — the streamer has snapped up the screen rights and is developing a feature adaptation, as well as an anime spinoff.

Per Netflix and BOOM! Studios, which published the indie comic, “BRZRKR” is the story of “an immortal warrior’s 80,000-year fight through the ages. The man known only as ‘B’ is half mortal and half god, cursed and compelled to violence, even at the sacrifice of his sanity. But after wandering the earth for centuries, B may have finally found a refuge: working for the U.S. government to fight the battles too violent and too dangerous for anyone else. In exchange, B will be granted the one thing he desires: the truth about his endless blood-soaked existence . . . and how to end it.”

Giants Being Lonely

In rural North Carolina, the stars of the local high school baseball team, Bobby (J. Irving) and Adam (B. Irving), must navigate their all-important senior year of high school as local celebrities. Director: Gear Patterson. Stars: Jack Irving, Ben Irving, Alejandro Castro Arias, Tal Chatterjee, Amalia Culp, Lola Daehler, Gabe Fazio, Lily Gavin. 2019. 81 mins. Drama.
