Robertson enjoys Washington County Fair experience

BY JEFF YODER
The News

WASHINGTON

It was a busy week at the Washington County Fair for Hunter Robertson, a member of the Limecreek Livewires 4-H club. His family brought seven goats to the fair this year, including a wether that placed fourth overall as a market goat.

"This year was the first year I ever bought my own wether," Robertson said. "I learned a whole bunch of new things involved in (raising) wethers. It's a completely different ballgame compared to just does."

Robertson learned to feed the animal four to five times a day. He would increase the amount of food per day by a quarter pound if the goat was able to finish it all.

"If you feed him more frequently throughout the day and smaller portions, the animal is able to absorb the nutrients better," Robertson said. "They pretty much are like a body builder. I had to put them on a bulk and then I had to put them on a cut. I had to exercise him everyday — he does sprints with me."

A heat advisory on Monday provided an extra challenge for fair participants.

"We made sure we had all the fans running and if they were getting noticeably hot, we would just wash them down," Robertson explained. "For wethers, you have to brace them and hold their head up. He's flexing his muscles constantly so he's getting really hot. We didn't have a cool pad, so I took one of my t-shirts, ran it under cold water and set it on his back and his chest so that he could cool off. We had to do that multiple times."

Robertson has been involved in 4-H since he was able to join as a fourth grader.

"I started off with rabbits," he said. "It warmed me up to everything at Fair. It teaches you responsibility. Even though it's just a rabbit, you have to learn how to feed it and take care of the hair."

He said that one of the most rewarding aspects of raising animals for the fair is working with his family.

"We got very close to getting fifth overall with a doe that we raised, and I find that very fulfilling," he said. "So, I know we're doing it right. And it's not one person who did it — my family did it. So, we take a lot of pride in what we do."

In addition to his fourth overall market goat, Robertson had a doe that earned third in its class. His sisters Brielle and Kennah got third and fourth with young does and two older does placed first — progressing to be champion yearling doe.

Robertson said that the character students are developing through participation in FFA and 4-H is incredibly valuable for the future.

"Being in 4-H and FFA, it teaches you a sense of urgency and responsibility and animal welfare and nutrition," he said. "Some of these kids in 4-H are smarter than a lot of adults I've met, and if they're already smart enough in middle school and high school, it's going to give them a boost when they graduate or go to college."
