Centralia Station

NEW DEVELOPMENT ANNOUNCED: Designed to Create Jobs, Generate Tax Revenues and Expand Retail, Education and Medical Spaces

By Amy Nile
anile@chronline.com

The Port of Centralia is launching a new major development just south of the Mellen Street interchange aimed at creating jobs, generating tax revenue and expanding business in the Hub City.

The proposed 43-acre development on the south end of Long Road will take advantage of the new infrastructure being built as part of the Washington State Department of Transportation's upgrades to Interstate 5.

The multi-use development is being designed to combine major retailers, community college facilities, medical offices, tech warehouses and sports fields and to attract other businesses to the area.

The project, dubbed Centralia Station, will connect with the Hub City's rich railroad history by including historical photographs and heirlooms and installing lamp posts and concrete styles similar to those downtown.

"It's a little different than anything we've done before," said Kyle Heaton, the port's executive director.

The project will create hundreds of jobs during construction and, upon completion, Centralia Station businesses will potentially employ more than 350 people permanently.

"The bottom line is Lewis County is in recession," Heaton said. "If you're not going to invest in your town, why would anyone else?"

Silent Auction Planned for Cancer Patient

A silent auction to benefit cancer victim John Halvorsen will be held 1-5 p.m. Sunday at the Red Barn Studios west of Chehalis.

Halvorsen, a Chehalis resident, and his family have been longtime members of this community. He previously owned Properties Plus and Rentals Etc. in Centralia and was co-founder of Acres of Hope, which has provided more than 100,000 pounds of food to the Lewis County Food Bank Coalition. He also is the chair of Alder House, a Centralia assisted living facility for mentally handicapped young adults.

Halvorsen's cancer and subsequent chemotherapy and radiation treatment have limited his ability to work. He has medical insurance through his job at Sunbird Shopping Center, but the deductibles, uncovered medical costs and inability to work have devastated the family finances.

The Red Barn Studios are located on Goff Road, just off state Highway 6, 3.6 miles west of Interstate 5.

For additional information, call Jason Dix, 219-6525; Joe Ritchey, 807-3310; or Duane Taylor, 269-3021.

Ground Broken for Event Center and Sports Complex

CONSTRUCTION: Public Facilities District Hopes to Complete Project in One Year

By Kyle Spurr

kspurr@chronline.com

Brandon Hansen / bhansen@chronline.com

After more than five years of proposing a hub for regional indoor sports in Centralia, community members gathered Friday morning to break ground on the Lewis County Event Center and Sports Complex on Pioneer Way and Allen Street, just west of the woods in Fort Borst Park.

"Let construction begin," Mayor Bonnie Canaday said before digging a ceremonial shovel into the ground with other public workers involved in the project.

The 70-foot high, 75,600-square-foot building will accommodate multiple types of indoor sports, including basketball, volleyball, baseball, soccer and wrestling, among other events.

The event center and sports complex will cost about $3.9 million, which includes completing the metal structure with concrete floors, according to the Lewis County Public Facilities District.

"If we all put our minds to a goal we can accomplish great things," PFD Chair Todd Chaput said to the more than 30 people who came out to the groundbreaking.

The PFD, along with the city of Centralia, Centralia School Board and the Lewis County Event Center, LLC — a private group that includes Thorbeckes FitLife Center managing owner Dale Pullin — have been working together to develop the complex at Fort Borst Park in Centralia.

Kaufman Brothers, out of Olympia, is the primary contractor for the construction.

Chaput said construction on the event center and sports complex is planned to begin early next week. The entire project is expected to be complete in one year, Chaput said.

The PFD has $4.1 million to use for construction. However, the complex will remain empty until the PFD finds funds to cover the final interior phase, PFD treasurer Rose Bowman said.

Bowman said the board is about $1 million short of funding the interior construction.

The PFD will continue to submit for state grants, Bowman said, and work with the Lewis County Commission, which founded the PFD in 2007.

Sex Offender Registers to Live in Chehalis

By The Chronicle

A Level 3 sex offender has indicated he will live on the 900 block of Logan Hill Road in Chehalis by registering with the Lewis County Sheriff's Office.

A news release states David Lee Brosius, also known as David Lee Posey Jr., was convicted in Lewis County Juvenile Court of two counts of indecent liberties by forced compulsion and two counts of fourth-degree assault with sexual motivation on April 6, 2004.

David Lee Brosius
sex offender

The case involved Brosius making forced sexual advances toward a 13-year-old girl he was not related to, according to the release. He also pleaded guilty to assaulting two different 14-year-old girls by hitting their butts with his hand. Additional sex offenses were dropped as a part of a plea agreement.

As a result of the agreement, he was sentenced to 104 weeks of confinement in juvenile rehabilitation, with a suspended sentence, so he could complete sex offender treatment. The suspension was revoked based on another conviction on June 15, 2004 of unlawful imprisonment with sexual motivation that involved the sexual assault of a 15-year-old girl. Since turning 18, he has also been convicted of robbery and residential burglary.

Brosius is described as a white male with brown hair and brown eyes, according to the release. He is approximately 6-foot-2 and weighs about 230 pounds.

Because of the multiple offenses and different victims, Brosius has been identified as a high risk to re-offend individual, which warrants community notification, according to the sheriff's office.

Sex Offender Registers to Live in Centralia

By The Chronicle

A Level 3 sex offender has indicated he plans to live on the 500 block of North Tower Avenue in Centralia by registering with the Lewis County Sheriff's Office.

Seth R. Liebich
sex offender

A news release states Seth R. Liebich, 24, was convicted in 2004 as a 16-year-old in Lewis County Juvenile Court for indecent liberties and forcible compulsion with a 19-year-old woman who was considered developmentally delayed.

Liebich was sentenced to 104 weeks in custody and completed a sex offender-treatment-program as an outpatient. Based on his inability to control his compulsion and a history of sexually inappropriate behavior, he was categorized as a Level 3 offender.

Liebich lived in Thurston County after being released from custody following his 2004 conviction. He is described as a white male with blond hair, blue eyes, 5 feet, 4 inches tall and 230 pounds. The sheriff's office identified Liebich as a high risk to re-offend individual, which warrants community notification.

Lewis County Holds Annual Flood Planning Meeting

PREPARING FOR THE WORST: Event Brings Together Local Leaders, Weather and Transportation Experts

By Lisa Broadt

lbroadt@chronline.com

One table and a dozen folding chairs sufficed for a Lewis County flood planning meeting 10 years ago, recalled Sheriff Steve Mansfield on Friday.

But hard work — and some devastating disasters — have drawn more people into the planning process, and that change is a boon to all in the Chehalis River Basin, Mansfield told the approximately 200 attendees at the Annual Pre-Flood Preparation Meeting.

Presented by the Division of Emergency Management, the meeting was held on Friday morning at the Veterans Memorial Museum in Chehalis and included representatives from the Washington State Department of Transportation, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the National Weather Service.

The power to prepare for floods soon will be available on your personal computer, said presenter Matt Hyatt, of Lewis County GIS, during his demonstration of the county's Hazardous Vulnerability Mapping Program.

Recently completed, the interactive software allows a user to explore flooding scenarios through a variety of criteria. It will be loaded onto CDs and DVDS and made available to the public, for free, by the end of the year.

Opening the mapping program reveals a clickable map of Western Washington.

Flanking the main screen map is a column of inundation maps, created from historical data and modeling. Also included in the side column are criteria commonly seen on maps: streams and rivers, county boundary lines, dams, railroads, land parcels, pipelines and points of interest like police, fire and hospital facilities.

Toggling the various criteria layers them onto the map.

"It instantly redraws as you do that," Hyatt said.

Using the program, someone in Bucoda could, for example, explore what would happen to local roads — during a fair weather event or during a flooding event — should the Skookumchuck Dam fail.

For ease, commonly used criteria have been bookmarked in a menu at the top.

"Since everyone has certain areas of interest, we established bookmarks. If your main interest is in Napavine, you can jump to Napavine. We did that for all of the cities, general unincorporated towns (and) ports," Hyatt said.

The program also includes a tool that allows a user to click on the map and learn the x,y coordinates of that location.

According to Hyatt, it's a feature that could prove helpful in an emergency.

"You can switch to degrees, minutes and seconds if you're giving information to a first responder," Hyatt said.

The program is designed to be accessible to the average person, and, because it does not require an internet connection, the durable software will remain functional during an emergency.

"You can feel free to really beat it up and put it through its paces," Hyatt said.

Accompanying the software will be an instruction sheet that describes how to use the program and what data it includes.

Lewis County GIS plans to have the free program distributed by the end of the year; the Department of Emergency Management will coordinate dispersal.

AVERAGE CONDITIONS COULD SIGNAL ABOVE AVERAGE FLOODING, EXPERT SAYS

By Lisa Broadt

lbroadt@chronline.com

Neutral isn't necessarily good.

Rather, neutral rainfall and temperatures — the pattern predicted for the next few months — has preceded the majority of the major flooding events in the Chehalis River Basin, said National Weather Service meteorologist Ted Buehner during the Annual Pre-Flood Preparation Meeting Friday.

"Neutral years rank number one for our big flood events," Buehner said. "This is, predominantly, when we get our atmospheric river."

A strong flow of atmospheric moisture, often called a Pineapple Express, is a possibility this year, the meteorologist said. That's the weather system that ushered in the devastating February 1996 flood.

"This is all about being prepared, being weather-aware," he said.

News in Brief

DeBolt Again Selected as House Republican Leader

By The Chronicle

State Rep. Richard DeBolt on Friday was elected to serve as the House Republican leader for a two-year term, beginning Jan. 14.

DeBolt was unanimously re-elected to the role during the Republican Caucus reorganizational meeting in Cle Elum. As leader, he serves as the primary spokesperson for House Republican members and is responsible for the coordination and management of the caucus agenda in the Legislature.

"I am proud to continue serving as leader and honored to have the continued support of my colleagues," DeBolt said Friday. "We are focused on providing solutions to help get Washington citizens working again, and protecting taxpayers by creating a balanced budget without taking more of their hard-earned money."

DeBolt has represented the 20th District, which includes Lewis County and parts of Thurston and Cowlitz counties, since 1997.

Account Set for Lewis County Man Who Suffered a Cardiac Arrest

By The Chronicle

An account has been set up at Security State Bank for the family of Napavine resident Jack Hertz, 44, who died Thursday night after suffering a cardiac arrest while at work on Nov. 9.

The account is set up under Jack and Shasta Hertz Family.

Donations to the account will help his family with their expenses.

Hertz was transported to Providence St. Peter Hospital in Olympia after the cardiac arrest. He never regained consciousness. He was a Washington Department of Transportation worker. Hertz is survived by his wife and four sons.

Aberdeen Decides to Fund its Share of Flood Warning System

By The Daily World

The Aberdeen City Council on Wednesday completely reversed course and authorized payment to fund an early warning system put in place by the Chehalis Basin Flood Authority.

Just a few months ago, the city mulled pulling out of the Flood Authority, a 12-member group consisting of local governments in Thurston, Lewis and Grays Harbor counties. Then, last month, the council voted to stay in the Flood Authority, but city officials said they had no plans to contribute funds to the early warning system, which has been controversial because it is internet-based and requires anyone who needs warning information to remember a password and log in.

Station: Public Meetings to Start in January

Starting possibly as early as January, the port will hold public hearings to gauge what businesses in the community would like to see come to Centralia Station.

"Is it a Target, or a Red Robin or what?" Heaton said, noting that he has already had considerable interest from tenants. "Our focus is bringing in large anchors."

Local entrepreneurs, Heaton said, can fill in the rest of the space with smaller retail shops and restaurants.

Once the port hears what businesses people would like, it will do demographic studies to determine the feasibility. Port officials will also be more prepared than on past proposals to address any public concerns.

"The nature of any development in any town over 40 people is there's always going to be a percent of people who aren't happy," Heaton said.

But most of the property owners in the area, Heaton said, so far have offered support.

The Lewis County Economic Development Council, Centralia College and the city of Centralia are working with the port on the development. They have already completed traffic studies and looked into the preliminary hydraulic work. DOT is extending the dike to protect the area from flooding. The groups have been working on the project for the last couple of years since the city finished the Gateway Corridor Study, which said the area should be redeveloped for commercial use.

"We don't move ahead until we know it's viable," Heaton said.

Centralia Station will allow Centralia College and Providence Centralia Hospital, the county's largest employer, space to expand their facilities.

Additionally, it will offer seven acres of soccer fields that double as a water retention area in January and February, nature areas, and trails that connect to the sports complex being built at Fort Borst Park. The cost of the project will vary depending on what businesses the port pulls in. After gathering public input, the port may do some preliminary work in 2013. But they will have to wait for DOT to complete the interchange project at the end of next year before major developing can take place.

"Any upgrade to the community is good for any development in the county," said Dick Larman, director of the Lewis County Economic Development Council. "We want to give people a reason not to go all the way to Seattle or Portland."

Larman said he hopes to get out his golden shovel to break ground at Centralia Station on many occasions over the next several years.

Centralia Man Arrested For Allegedly Hitting Baby

SLAPPED: Man Allegedly Admitted to Police He Hit His Child Three Times in The Head, Leaving a Handprint Bruise

By Stephanie Schendel

sschendel@chronline.com

Pete Caster / pcaster@chronline.com

Jon M. Parker appears in Lewis County Superior Court Thursday following his arrest for allegedly assaulting his six-month-old son. He has not been formally charged.

A Centralia man was arrested for alleged child abuse Wednesday after he allegedly hit his six-month old son in the head three times earlier this month, according to the Lewis County Sheriff's Office.

Police had been looking for Jon M. Parker since Nov. 1, when the abuse was first reported. Parker was arrested and booked into the Lewis County Jail for second-degree assault of a child Wednesday after he was located standing at a bus stop, according to the sheriff's office. Parker allegedly confessed to the abuse.

Parker has not been formally charged yet, and during his initial court appearance Thursday afternoon in Lewis County Superior Court, Judge James Lawler granted the prosecution's motion for a 72-hour hold as they pursue additional evidence, including reports from the Department of Social and Health Services and Child Protective Services.

The investigation against Parker began earlier this month when Lewis County sheriff's deputies responded to Providence Centralia Hospital to a possible child abuse case, according to the sheriff's office.

The child had been in the care of his father, Parker, who became upset at his son because he was crying, according to court documents. Parker, who was holding the baby, allegedly struck the baby three times in the head with an open hand, giving the child severe bruises to his face, a bump on his head, and a cut to his lip and nose.

When Parker's family later asked him about the injuries, he told them the child had fallen off the couch and landed on a toy, according to court documents.

The child was brought to the hospital by his grandmother, who is now in custody of the baby, according to the sheriff's office.

The baby's pediatrician will perform additional tests because there is concern of additional damage caused by the assault, according to court documents.

Parker has a prior conviction of possession of stolen property from earlier this year, according to court documents.

Commissioner-Elect Edna Fund Prepares to Resign From Council

TRANSITION: Fund's Role in Flood Authority May Also Change; Ron Averill Hopes for Role on Flood Authority

By Kyle Spurr

kspurr@chronline.com

"I've enjoyed my time there and enjoyed serving and meeting residents in Centralia"

Edna Fund
on her time serving on the Centralia City Council

Edna Fund, who was elected to the Lewis County Commission this month, will resign from her position on the Centralia City Council next week.

Ron Averill
open to flood authority seat

Fund said she will submit a letter of resignation on Monday and her last meeting as a Centralia City Council member will be in December.

"I've enjoyed my time there and enjoyed serving and meeting residents in Centralia," said Fund, who was elected to the council in 2009.

Mayor Bonnie Canaday said the city council will begin accepting applications for the vacant position in December. Applicants will be interviewed by the city council, Canaday said, and one will be appointed in January.

Fund, 64, will not be allowed to be a part of the interview process.

Since Fund holds an at-large position on the city council, applicants will be accepted from anywhere in Centralia, not just a certain geographic district.

Whoever is appointed to the council will serve until November next year, when they will then have to run for the office.

Fund, who also represents the city of Centralia on the Chehalis River Basin Flood Authority, said she would like to remain on the flood authority as the representative for the county commission.

Fund also expressed interest in representing both Centralia and the county as a whole on the Flood Authority, but she said it turns out that option is not possible.

"I will represent the city until the end of December," Fund said, "and then we will divvy up the various responsibilities. I hope to continue on the Flood Authority."

Fund, who spoke to The Chronicle on Friday by phone from Wenatchee, where she was attending the Washington State Association of Counties meeting, said she still needs to formally meet with county commissioners Bill Schulte and Lee Grose before making any decisions about the Flood Authority.

Current District 1 Commissioner Ron Averill, who lost to Fund in the general election, said since he will lose his seat on the flood authority, he would be interested in representing the city of Centralia.

"Quite frankly, one of the reasons I ran for reelection is because I have a job that is not finished," Averill said of flooding issues.

Averill said he does not want to force himself back onto the Flood Authority, but if the Centralia City Council decided to look for outside candidates, he would be more than happy to fill the role.

Fund will be officially sworn in as county commissioner on Dec. 27 at 10 a.m.

Until then, Fund said, she feels compelled to split her time between the city and county.

"I feel like I have my feet in both camps," Fund said. "I'm trying to do justice to both."

$900 Million Deficit: State Revenue Forecast Grim

By Rachel La Corte

The Associated Press

Gov.-elect Jay Inslee will take office in January facing a projected $900 million deficit for the next two-year budget ending in mid-2015, not counting money lawmakers will need to spend to improve funding for education as directed by the state Supreme Court earlier this year.

A four-year outlook released Wednesday by the Washington state Economic and Revenue Forecast Council showed that the projected revenue shortfall for the following biennium ending in 2017 would be even larger, at $1.1 billion.

The outlook was released along with the state's quarterly revenue forecast, which showed that the income projection increased slightly — $8 million — for the current biennium that ends next summer. But it showed a reduction of $88 million for the next two-year budget cycle that begins July 1.

The outlook doesn't take into account lawmakers' court-ordered requirement to increase the amount the state spends on public schools.

The Supreme Court ruled in January that the state was not meeting its constitutional duty to fully pay for basic education. The court is asking for yearly reports on the Legislature's progress.

"There's going to be a lot of hard choices to make."

Jaime Smith
spokesman for Jay Inslee

A task force has a December deadline for reporting back to the Legislature with a recommendation about how it should proceed toward meeting the Supreme Court's orders, which were to find a way to pay for the reform plan by 2018.

Inslee, a Democrat who will succeed Gov. Chris Gregoire next year, has said that he will work to make government more efficient and that he would be able to balance the state's budget without new taxes.

"There's going to be a lot of conversations to be had about ways we will have to make efficiencies, and what the real priorities are that we have to fund," Inslee spokesman Jaime Smith said Wednesday. "There's going to be a lot of hard choices to make. We just aren't going to be able to afford all of the things we have been doing." But during Wednesday's meeting, Rep. Ross Hunter, a member of the Revenue Forecast Council and chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he has long stated that he doesn't think it's "numerically possible to have a budget that doesn't have a revenue increase."

He said that trends show "the growth in the economy is not matched by the growth in revenue."

Hunter said he figures the real budget shortfall will reach $3 billion to $3.5 billion once lawmakers account for school-funding obligations and leave a fund balance to cushion against unforeseen hits to the budget. But he said legislators haven't given up trying to cover the gap without new taxes.

"I actually don't think it's going to be numerically possible, but we're going to look at that effort and we're certainly doing that effort first," said Hunter, D-Medina.

Republican Sen. Dino Rossi, a fellow council member, said he agreed with Inslee on the issue of taxes, saying "we really shouldn't be raising taxes in this environment."

Budgeters are not counting on any money from voters' decision to legalize and tax marijuana. The state budget office thinks Initiative 502 could bring in as much as $800 million in extra state revenue in the next budget period, but says there are too many uncertainties to count on the money.

News in Brief

Police Search Centralia for Man in Underwear

By The Chronicle

Centralia police spent two hours searching for a man who left the hospital against medical advice wearing nothing but his underwear and a hospital gown Wednesday morning.

The man, identified as Jacob D. Mielitz, 21, Centralia, had been arrested earlier that morning after he allegedly stole his brother's car and crashed it near Harrison Avenue and N Street at about 4 a.m., according to Centralia police. Police arrested Mielitz, and he was booked into jail.

Once in jail, he had to be transported to Providence Centralia Hospital for non-life threatening medical clearance, said Centralia Police Sgt. Carl Buster. While he was at the hospital, he was not technically under arrest anymore, and walked out of the hospital against medical advice.

Buster said it was cold out, and they were concerned because he left the hospital without any shoes or socks, and was dressed only in a hospital gown and underwear.

After searching for him for about two hours, police were eventually able to locate him when citizens began to call police to report a bloody man walking around in his underwear in the Cooks Hill area, Buster said. Police eventually located him on the 200 block of Blanchard Road. He was cold and bloody from superficial cuts from blackberry bushes, but otherwise was fine.

Christmas Light Display Listings Wanted

PUBLISHER'S NOTE: Growing on Our Own

Centralia Station Development Is Just What We Need

This community has made its mark over the generations by pushing forward when outsiders thought we were done. Stalwart individuals settled here and made this valley their home. They persevered, they built, they grew and prospered.

Christine Fossett
publisher

If you have lived here for any length of time you have seen great accomplishments through individual and group effort. In our lifetimes the dream to build a veteran's museum was accomplished by local effort. The vision to bring sports teams from our region together to compete in a fresh, family-friendly setting is already seeing benefits for the businesses in our area. Our proud residents overcame the effects of the most recent floods and a diligent group has worked in unison and is ready to bring a long-term solution to the governor for her approval.

These are all examples of local people dedicating time and working together to make something happen. They didn't just sit back and complain about what wasn't being done. That brings me to today.

Growth — we desperately need it. Not the big-city, high rise, don't know your neighbor type of growth. But growth that brings jobs. And resources. And opportunities.

Centralia Station is our next example of what will be accomplished here, by our own. This is a comprehensive collaborative effort of public, private and educational sectors all working toward a common goal. The Port of Centralia has taken the lead and lends its expertise and proven record along with support from the Lewis Economic Development Council, the city of Centralia, Centralia College and private partners.

This project will offer local residents jobs in the early to final construction phases. It will offer jobs for the long haul, and not simply baseline retail jobs, but also professional, service and management jobs. The project will also provide additional opportunities for Centralia College to expand, for our growing medical facility needs as well as professional office space and restaurants. The retail space that will be available has already piqued the interest of a few chains looking to expand.

This economic development team has done their due diligence. They have already been working with the Department of Transportation, environmental experts and the residents in the local neighborhoods. The idea has been received with great support.

Residents can easily see the end benefit of a more beautiful Mellen Street area from the city and I-5 and increased tax revenues to benefit the schools and social services. Centralia College and local students would benefit from the additional soccer fields planned for the development. All local residents would gain from the added services and amenities at Centralia Station. This would not just benefit the passersby on I-5. Did I mention it will create and sustain jobs?

This dynamic group brings us another opportunity to make our mark, to stand on our own two feet. We can create our own development rather than wait for outside sources to determine what we need or don't need. Let's remember that the outlet mall was the ambition of a local citizen to create prosperity and it continues to shine from Harrison Avenue even today.

This project is jobs. This is our opportunity to grow and prosper yet again.

COMMENTARY: Saturday's Child

Put Away That Shovel; Thanksgiving is Not Ready to be Buried

This is a bid for my immortality — as the Saturday's child who saved Thanksgiving. Here are my steps for giving the holiday an identity, a personality, to make it stand on its own. (I realize that as a humble Chronicle columnist, I can't expect the entire country to jig to my tune, but if I can just get this area into the swing, perhaps eventually the rest of the nation will join in.)

By Gordon Aadland

Step # 1, and an important one: The present date, November, is a drab one, so let's move the holiday up to a three-day weekend early in September, the most pleasant time of the year throughout the United States. The present date is based on whim more than tradition or logic, so it is moveable. FDR tried to move it up just a little and he got so much guff about it, he moved it back. But these are different times, and our cause is just enough for us to bare our breasts to the storm of materialism.

Early September is usually bright and balmy in contrast to November's brrrr and dreariness. We could use the outside with our splendid parks, in town and out, for our gatherings. The oranges, reds and yellows of the trees then could become the Thanksgiving hues, just as red and green are Christmas colors.

But the primary purpose of moving the date is to get it away from that bullying usurper, Christmas. Christmas, in the days of my youth, at most occupied only a week in late December. But now it has become like the camel of lore: once we let it put its nose into the tent, it gradually moved its whole body in, leaving room for nothing else. Now it occupies all of November and December, and poor little Thanksgiving doesn't stand a chance against it. Store decorations and television shows and commercials have been taken over by the gift-giving materialistic holiday.

So let's give Thanksgiving a month of its own. The only thing to compete with it in September is my birthday, not yet considered a holy day.

Step # 2: Let the holiday be open rather than closed. Presently we meet with relatives and a few old friends to experience our gluttony. Let it become a time to associate with new people, as the original was. The forming of family ties can come at other times during the year. If the Catholics of Chehalis are having a dinner, let them do so with the Methodists of Centralia. The Kiwanis with the Rotarians, the Republican Party with the Democrats. At the table sit next to Pedro Santiago or Princess Broken Arrow rather than your Uncle Bert or Aunt Rose for the same old conversations. Let the festivities be a reaching out for new experiences, new friends rather than a self-entrenchment.

Step # 3: This should be a celebration of all we have we consider good, not just the crops. We should seek out our finest in the various arts, in architecture, in landscaping, etc., express gratitude for it and feature it during the festivities. Perhaps we could have contests to find the best singers, dancers, artists, musicians. Friday and Saturday could be used for that recognition.

Perhaps the highly successful Art Walk could be held during these two days, our best concerts, an Evergreen play, etc.

Also we could use the football game between rivals as we had of yore. Maybe we could have the Battle of the Swamp on that weekend.

Step # 4: We mustn't forget the purpose of the day — to express thanks for that which is good, whether it be freedom, peace, brotherhood, whatever. That could be held in churches on Sunday, but not exclusively there. It could be at a campground or some other spot where we are reminded of the beauty of nature. I suggest that a time be set so that we can all be expressing that thanks at the same moment.

Step # 5: Christmas has flooded the market of music, with Bing Crosby, the Vienna Boys Choir, the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, and others. We need to do the same with Thanksgiving songs, of which there is now a dearth. Perhaps Charlie, Angela, the Voetbergs or even Jerry Owens and his ensemble can make some best selling CDs.

Step # 6: This holiday needs some cute, Disney-like animals as a symbol, such as the reindeer of Christmas and the cute bunnies and ducks of Easter. Not the turkey, a homely, awkward, dumb animal, good only for eating (preferably the white meat). Let it be the bushy-tailed industrious squirrel, scampering around our yards in September, in pursuit of a cache for the rugged winter, a highly commendable trait. Sort of having an IRA.

So there are my Six Steps to Saving Thanksgiving. I stand ready to pose for the statue of me to go into Washington Park, right beside the Sentinel.

Thankfully, We Still Help Each Other

It's hard to believe that in less than a week, Thanksgiving will be here. The official kickoff of the Christmas season and my favorite time of the year growing up. On Thanksgiving, we could officially start playing Christmas music, and look at toys in the Sears catalogue (remember those?) making our list for Santa.

By John McCroskey

As an adult, most Thanksgiving holidays I was working at the sheriff's office. There was always plenty to do. From traffic accidents to domestic disputes, assaults to thefts, it seemed the holidays brought them all out. As I was thinking about all that, and how things are probably worse today than back then, I was reminded of incident on I-5 the Wednesday night before Thanksgiving a long time ago.

It was a dark and stormy night ... OK, it was really just dark and cold when I came on a car in the ditch, along the freeway, loaded with a family headed over the hills and through the woods to grandma's house. Alright, I'm not sure that's where they were going ... but they'd gotten stuck when they pulled over onto the shoulder and the tires dropped off into some deep mud.

They didn't have much money and needed help if they were going to be on their way. In those days we didn't have cell phones, but I asked them how much cash they had (don't recall credit cards being real common then, either) and asked dispatch to call Grant's Towing to see if they could do anything to help these stranded folks out with the amount of cash they had.

They did. Grant's came out and got this family on their way and as I recall didn't take anything for it.

Over the years people and businesses have repeatedly stepped up and helped people out who really needed it. From big disasters like our floods, to very personal tragedy, like a house fire, it seems like there have always been those willing to help out.

Thankfully, there still are.

One of the events at the sheriff's office I was proud to support was the Shop with a Cop program. It wasn't my idea. I think I recall it started with deputy (now chief deputy) Stacy Brown, but it took a lot of folks getting involved to make it work. I think our first fundraiser was appropriately a Krispy Kreme donut sale and we pre-sold a lot of donuts.

So many, in fact, we needed a big truck to haul them all down here from Puyallup. I called Roger at Rose's Furniture to see if he could help us out, get up in the middle of the night and drive up to Krispy Kreme? He did, donating his time and his truck to get them.

Walmart let us use their parking lot as a staging area for delivery, and for a while there was quite a traffic jam. I seem to recall we set some kind of record with sales thanks to the generosity of our local folks who bought them. That and the fact it involved cops and donuts which has a natural attraction.

Our local Walmart has been a partner ever since, helping the money raised go further so more kids could participate.

As an aside, I found a Shop with a Cop story that involved another Walmart reported in the Newser. A man with a lengthy criminal history failed to notice the uniformed cops all over the store and attempted to run out of the store, stealing a DVD player. He didn't get very far.

If you're looking for something to donate to this year, Shop with a Cop is a good local program to look at.

Have a Happy Thanksgiving.

Oh, and P.S., it isn't "Turkey Day," it's Thanksgiving.

Do You Remember This 1960 Chehalis Business?

To the editor:

In the summer of 1961, three other foreign students and I (one South African, one Indian, one Pakistani and one Englishman (me)) at University in Canada, limped into Chehalis in a 1950 Plymouth that had run the main bearings.

A garage in Chehalis repaired the car and put us up for the week it took to get the parts and do the work. During that time a local gym teacher took us to the top of Mount St. Helens (long before anyone knew it might erupt). The garage staff were very hospitable and I vowed that if I was ever in Chehalis again I would thank them again.

This Thanksgiving I will be in Seattle and would make the trip to Chehalis if I could find the garage/owners. Unfortunately, in the course of the last 51 years I have forgotten the name of the garage and the name of the owners, although I believe one was called Ray. I do recall one owned a small plane and flew the Indian and Pakistani to the border to renew their visas.

I wonder if your newspaper or readers might remember what garages operated in Chehalis in 1961 and if any of the then owners are still in the Chehalis area. If so, please send me details at rfbxwg@telus.net.

Thank you for your assistance.

Obama: Take Note From UW Coach Sarkisian

To the editor:

I can't help but make the following comparison between Barack Hussein Obama and Steve Sarkisian. For those of you who are not sports enthusiasts, Sarkisian is the head coach of the University of Washington Huskies football team.

I know that the two are not synonymous, but here is where the parallel exists. Sarkisian accepted the job after the team completed its first ever winless season. Sarkisian exercised the secret of successful management. He surrounded himself with competent personnel and functioned with them. He rolled up his sleeves and went to work on building a winning squad. The Huskies are now bowl contenders. Sarkisian did not blame his predecessor or cry about the other side not cooperating. He did the job he was hired to do and his team moved in the right direction. That is how a successful manager operates.

Now for the other guy, I really don't see any reason to elaborate on that.

Peace Corps Veterans Parade Suggested

To the Editor:

Lately, our Lewis County area has had many celebrations and observations related to the military and veterans. The Veterans Museum had a 150th anniversary festival of the Civil War in July, complete with living historical demonstrations. Last week we had the Veteran's Day parade in Toledo honoring veterans. Centralia had its own American Legion gathering. Commissioner Ron Averill said that veterans are great people and they need to be honored.

In all this glorification of war, especially the Civil War, where thousands died daily, I think it's time to take a step back, and honor those non-military who are working for peace today. Those are the ones working in the Peace Corps, and we have at least two locally that I know of that have been in the Peace Corps. Bonnie Nelson, from Adna, has been in Mongolia. She was featured in a great article in the August edition of SW Washington Family, a Chronicle publication.

The other volunteer I know more about is Cori Jo Jahnsen from Chehalis. She's been on the island of Pohnpei, in Micronesia, in the South Pacific. Cori is on here way home, and by the time you read this, she might be back on the streets of Chehalis. Cori has written many emails, and kept up a blog to keep family and friends informed of her years in the Peace Corps.

Cori taught school, helped the islanders put together a functional library, lived with a family there, learned to like the food, and worked hard. It wasn't a warm tropical vacation for her. Cori wrote in her latest blog entry, "Two years ago I also didn't understand the Peace Corps motto- 'The toughest job you'll ever love,' now I can tell you, it makes perfect sense. I am so grateful for everyone I met, and every situation I encountered, whether it was pleasant or not, I learned and grew and feel like I am a better person than I was two years ago." Not only that, I'm sure the islanders grew and learned equally.

President Kennedy, when he founded the Peace Corps, said, "For every young American who participates in the Peace Corps—who works in a foreign land—will know that he or she is sharing in the great common task of bringing to man that decent way of life which is the foundation of freedom and a condition of peace.

I'd love it if there was a way that we could have a Peace Corps Veteran's parade welcoming home Cori Jo. She's been working for peace, and hasn't fired a shot. Chehalis should be proud of Cori. She needs to be honored.

COMMENTARY: Forks in the Road

Tis' the Season to Be Soggy

Thanksgiving and Christmas are just around the corner, but it's not turkeys and mistletoe that are on many of our minds.

Eric Swchwartz

No, this season tends to bring with it less festive themes.

Hip waders, waterproof pens, rain jackets and shoes encrusted with mud are dancing in my head. For much of Lewis County and other low-lying stretches of earth, late autumn and early winter bring with them memories of floods gone by and times when a warm, dry place to rest one's head was the most valuable of assets.

Flood season is upon us, and this weekend promises to bring with it heavy doses of the wet stuff and rising currents among the area's rivers, creeks and streams.

There are no flood warnings, yet, but those of us who have made our homes in the valleys of Southwest Washington know that they will come as reliably as old Saint Nick.

Unlike the jolly old man, though, the warnings and watches will arrive not on a specific day, but when we least expect them and with ferocity and unkind severity rather than joy and good cheer.

Five years ago, I arrived in The Chronicle fresh out of Eastern Washington University. I landed not in the quiet, pleasant community where I had attended Centralia College, but in a wet and wild warzone where muddy waters had inundated homes, property and livelihoods.

While my journalistic peers attended meetings and gatherings at newspapers and colleges across the country, I arrived on mud-soaked farms where the only thing left in many cases were bewildered people and destroyed belongings.

Time tends to erase the scars of past hardships. Many of those same farms where I stood overwhelmed by the destruction and spoke with shaken victims of the December 2007 floods are now covered with lush green vegetation that covers the reminders of the former desolation.

Still, I wonder what became of the people behind the headlines and news reports that flooded the minds of those of us who watched the drama unfold closely.

I think of Pete and Cindy Dykstra, who were evacuated in Curtis after a night of unusually heavy rain climaxed with the watery burial of their home in the wee hours of the morning.

I recall the saga of Nancy Punches, who clung to the flat top of a kitchen table and huddled with a litter of puppies for what seemed like days until help arrived in the form of a concerned neighbor.

Gary Dorning comes to mind. He and his son were lauded as heroes after The Chronicle captured images of them at the edge of the soggy mess, climbing aboard Jet Skis and transporting soaked flood victims to the relative safety of shelters and other safe havens that rose quickly from the disaster.

Then there were the responders, who came to the rescue of those caught off-guard by the utter scale and demolition of the Chehalis River. National Guard members, sheriff's office deputies and everyday volunteers at rural fire departments became veritable guardian angels to everyday citizens placed in abnormal danger. They did so in many cases with little fear and a great deal of courage, much of which was outlined and detailed in reports by The Chronicle and other media outlets.

In the weeks ahead, this newspaper will return to some of these very scenes with notebooks and cameras in hand to document the changes to the livelihoods and landscapes once covered by both water and the media. We'll attempt to update readers on their stories while providing additional depth of coverage when it comes detailing the measures that have been taken by our elected leaders to take the bite out of nature's annual display of soggy supremacy.

Your stories are important to this effort.

They provide us with understanding and context during a time when our leaders are talking of water retention structures, levees and the money it will take to build or shore up both.

That's not to say we want to focus only on the negative aspects of life here. The Chronicle is also asking for your thoughts on Thanksgiving and your memories of Christmases gone by.

The festivities and the flooding are not mutually exclusive here, after all.

In these valleys and lowlands that many of us call home, the thoughts of turkeys and mistletoe and memories of terrible flooding and incredible inundation are sometimes one in the same.

A Chat With Auditor Gary Zandell, Mr. Lewis County Elections

Gary Zandell has seen an election or two in his day. He's been running elections in Lewis County since November of 1980.

"When I came into office, we had Underwood upright typewriters. You've probably never even seen a typewriter," Zandell said to me.

By Brittany Voie

I have, in fact seen a typewriter.

After being inspired by recent conversations about potential improvements in our local election process, I called Mr. Zandell this past week to ask a few questions and pick his brain about some of the election reform ideas I had heard and/or read about.

Our conversation, laden with volleys of sarcasm and witty banter, was humorous and enlightening. Just a girl asking some questions and a man who knows a thing or two and is very knowledgeable about elections in Washington State.

"Will we ever be able to vote by email or smartphones?"

Probably not in the foreseeable future.

Technically speaking, according to Zandell, voting by email is common practice for members of the military overseas. But, that email still gets printed out.

"We want something we can touch and feel that represents a legal vote from a U.S. Citizen," Zandell explained. "We always rely on paper."

But the biggest problem is the issue of potential fraud. "Digitally, it can be done, but then there's a gigantic trust issue," he continued.

"Will there ever be a 'magic code?'"

In Washington, after you return your ballot, you can log on to the Washington Secretary of State's website to verify that it's been received and processed.

"Do you think it would be possible to set up a system, where once you vote, you get a code … and then you take that code, which serves as proof of voting, and enter it in your TV, computer, phone, radio, etc. … and then turns off all the political ads?"

Zandell laughed (sarcastically). "That'd be nice," he said.

Can't blame a girl for asking.

"How do you feel about the electoral college?"

"I think it's kind of hypocritical or contradictory that we say one person equals one vote when it doesn't always work out that way," Zandell said, referring to the instances when the popular vote doesn't always win an election.

He continued by explaining that, based on the electoral college, not one single vote was cast for the Republican candidate for president in Washington, Oregon and California. While we know that isn't true when you look at the popular vote, electoral college scoring would imply otherwise.

"What about the 'Approval Voting System?'"

The "Approval Voting" is a system in which voters can place vote(s) for multiple candidates. The single candidate receiving the most approval votes wins the election.

Advocates for Approval Voting say that the system would increase voter turnout, provide better representation for minorities, increase chances of the strongest candidate, eliminates the "spoiler effect" from third party candidates and focuses more on issues than geographical areas.

Zandell was not in favor of Approval Voting. But he was more optimistic about my next idea ...

"And the 'National Bonus Plan?'"

Retaining the current electoral college system, another 102 electoral votes (two for every state and two for Washington, DC) are added and awarded to the winner of the popular vote.

The extra boost of electoral votes would almost always be able to guarantee that the popular vote winner would also be the electoral college winner. While technically maintaining the institution, this option compensates for the uneven power given to the states by the electoral college. The idea also being that it would encourage people to campaign and vote in non-competitive states in an attempt to win the popular vote.

Zandell noted that this system would require a constitutional amendment, but was optimistic about the method.

Thank you again for your time, Mr. Zandell. Thanks to you and your staff for another well-run election.

JEAN MARIE HILLSTROM

Jean Marie Hillstrom, born July 24, 1926 in Tacoma, Wash., passed away Nov. 12, 2012 in Centralia. Jean graduated from Oakville High School in 1944; she then went on to marry Theodore Hillstrom on July 25, 1945, in Oakville. Throughout Jean's full life she had worked for Boeing and the Oakville School District. Jean then retired from Weyerhaeuser after working in the nursery for 23 years. Jean loved embroidery work and was an avid Mariners, Seahawks and WSU "Cougars" fan. She volunteered for the election board and the Oakville food bank. Jean was forever cooking, baking and sharing her delights with everyone.

Jean was preceded in death by her husband, Theodore in 1982, her parents, Herman and Flossy Sloppy and 10 brothers and sisters. She is survived by son, Teddy Hillstrom of Galvin, daughters, Betty Gibson of Olympia, Karen Gerber of Oakville, and Hilda (Rod) Poisel of Woodland, her brother, Bill (Jo) Sloan of Tacoma, several nieces and nephews, 12 grandchildren, 10 great- grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren. The family of Jean would like to extend a special thanks to Diane, Jennifer, and Lisa for all of the help they had given to Jean over the past years.

There will be a memorial service on Saturday, Nov. 24, 2012 at 11:00 a.m. at the Oakville Methodist Church, with a potluck to follow. In lieu of flowers, please send donations to the Oakville Food Bank. Arrangements are under the care of Sticklin Funeral Chapel.

Robert L. Buzzard passed away Sunday, Nov. 11, 2012 at Centralia Providence Hospital. Born May 30, 1931 to Richard and Mary Buzzard in Centralia, Wash., and lived most of his life there. Sept. 3, 1954 he married his beloved wife, Shirley Jean Blumenthal who preceded him in death in 2010.

Bob worked as a mortician at Newell Hoerling Mortuary for 16 years. Then he ventured to the furniture business for several years and later as an industrial painter with his son until his retirement.

In 1996 they moved to Ocean Park, Wash., where he loved the outdoors, whether he was fishing or clam digging or taking walks on the beach that he called "Physical Therapy." His greatest joy was when family and friends would visit, spending time around the fire pit telling stories and eating oysters.

In 2008, Bob suffered a major stroke but never lost his witty sense of humor. His children moved them back to the Centralia area so they could help with his care.

Bob was an army veteran and served in the Korean War. He was also one of the first organizers and coaches of the Youth Football League in Lewis County and past member of the Centralia/Chehalis Elks and Centralia Eagles Clubs.

Preceded in death by his parents and his brother, Dick Buzzard. Bob leaves behind three loving children, Debbie McKune, Chehalis, Randy (Fran) Buzzard, Centralia and Gina (Ben) Johnson, Chehalis, sisters, Linda Wagner-McCoy, Centralia, Joan Olsen, Shelton and Lis Smith, Shelton. He also leaves 10 grandchildren, 12 great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

Services will be held on Thursday, Dec. 6, 2012 at Newell Hoerling Mortuary at 2:00 P.M. with a celebration of life to follow at O'Blarneys in the banquet room upstairs.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Popes Kids Place.

ALLEN RAY ERICKSON

Allen Ray Erickson was born on Jan. 31, 1935 in Centralia, Wash., to Ray and Ruby (Kaugh) Erickson. Allen went to be with his Heavenly Father on Nov. 15, 2012 at home on the family farmstead. He was a graduate of Centralia High School, Class of 1954, Centralia College, and attended the University of Washington, majoring in forestry. His military service was in the U.S. Air Force Reserves, but activated during the Cuban Crisis in 1962. Allen worked for Weyerhaeuser Timber Co. in Washington and Chicago, Ill. He was then a forester for the Washington State Department of Natural Resources, managing the Tree Seed Plant at the Mike Webster Nursery and the Meridian Seed Orchard in Olympia. Allen particularly enjoyed serving on wildfire teams as a purchaser.

Allen married the love of his life, Janice Duncan in 1959, in their hometown of Centralia, Wash. The couple were privileged to share 53 years of marriage. Survivors include one daughter, Marla Ann Lefevre (David), two sons, Mark Allen and Andrew Ray, and one granddaughter, Kristen Marie Suver (Bret). He is preceded in death by one sister, Helen Marie Erickson-Wright. Surviving also is his best friend and brother-in-law, Vernon Chalberg of Montesano, Wash., and seven nieces and nephews.

Family was uppermost in Allen's life, his passion was to preserve his grandparents' heritage on their 1890 homestead, Vine Maple Farms. Allen researched and collected his Swedish family's genealogy, which he published in his book The Bonas Sweden Erssons Travel to the USA- A Family History, in 1983 after three trips to Sweden. He especially enjoyed visits to the farm from his Swedish relatives. The family enjoyed many activities on the farm as well as camping trips to the ocean for clam-digging, fishing trips to Long Beach/Ilwaco, and family celebrations at Hood Canal.

Allen was a 48 year member of the Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd in Olympia, Wash., and a 47 year member of the Rochester/Violet Prairie Grange and County, State, and National Grange. Allen was a charter member and dedicated volunteer at the Veterans' Memorial Museum in Chehalis, Wash. Allen belonged to the Olympia Coin Club, the South Sound Farm Forestry Association and was a lifetime collector of classic comic books. For years, Allen and Janice square-danced with the Prairie Steppers and he served as wagon master for Lewis County chapter No. 9, Daughter of the Pioneers of Washington. Allen served as President of Lutheran Brotherhood Branch 8108, Master of Rochester Grange, and President of LCGS Sages.

In retirement, Allen served as State Department of Agriculture supervisor of tree-seed certifiers. Allen and Janice also enjoyed travelling to Scandinavia, Europe, cruises in Russia, Alaska, Mexico, Panama, and the Caribbean, winter trips to Hawaii, and snowbirding to Arizona. Fishing in Alaska with son Mark was one of the highlights of his life.

Allen relished his time with friends and family, particularly outdoor adventures and sharing his beautiful farm with them. He was a constant steward of his timberland and enjoyed touring the farm in his Kubota, all terrain vehicle.

Allen organized and recruited instructor, Sandy Calvert for an exercise group for those with Parkinsons, and was active in the "Chehalis Shakers" Parkinsons Support Group.

All are invited to a graveside service to be held at the Grand Mound Cemetery, 6300 183rd Ave SW, Rochester Wash., on Tuesday, Nov. 20, 2012 at 2:00 p.m. with Pastor John Rosenberg officiating. Everyone is welcome to join the family at services and for a gathering at the historic Vine Maple Farms farmhouse following services.

Thank you to all who have been a part of Allen's life, and to those who have assisted with his care over the last several years, Providence SoundHomeCare, Home Instead Senior Care, Panorama Convalescent Center, and his medical team at Group Health Cooperative.

Rural Chehalis Fire District Pulls Out of Proposed Consolidation

TOGETHER BUT SEPARATE: Fire Departments Will Continue to Respond Together on Major Calls but Will Remain Separate Entities

By Stephanie Schendel

sschendel@chronline.com

Any future discussions of a possible consolidation of departments to form a north Lewis County fire authority came to an indefinite halt Wednesday night after commissioners from Fire District 6, of the rural Chehalis area, announced they were no longer interested in participating in the project.

The district 6 commissioners' withdrawal from the planning committee was an abrupt change of direction since last month, when everyone involved, including district 6 fire commissioners, agreed to move forward with the project. During their October meeting, the committee even approved a timeline that would bring the issue to voters in 2014.

"At this point, a total combined merger does not seem to be the right thing," said Kirk Johnston, fire commissioner for Fire District 6, adding that when he spoke with his constituents they were all against it, especially because it would likely raise tax rates.

An obviously frustrated Riverside Fire Authority Chief Jim Walkowski, who was one of many individuals who spent hundreds of hours gathering the information about what the possible merger would look like, urged the district 6 commissioners to continue to work with the committee and allow voters to decide further down the road.

The district 6 commissioners, however, were adamant about halting any further participation in discussions about the merger.

"I see numbers every day," said Jeri Lux, fire commissioner for district 6, during the meeting. "It doesn't make sense to me to pay more and possibly get the same level of service."

The planning committee was initially formed more than a year and half ago to look at future solutions to how the local fire departments would handle the increasing number of service calls as well as the rising costs of operation.

While the various districts already respond together for major calls, such as structure fires, the fire chiefs of multiple fire departments stressed in previous meetings that it is not a sustainable way to continue operating. Each department uses different types of equipment, training, and operating methods, which allows for numerous opportunities for a miscommunication to occur in the middle of an emergency response.

"When we all respond to a fire, every day is a training day," Walkowski said Wednesday, adding that with the current staffing level of most fire departments, a single responding agency would not be able to handle a major fire alone.

The proposed consolidation of RFA, Chehalis Fire Department, Fire District 6 and then possibly later on Fire District 5, would have created a fire authority that would serve three-fourths of the county's population, or 48,000 people.

The Chehalis city councilmembers present at the meeting indicated that, despite district 6's lack of interest, they still wanted to look into a possible merger with Riverside Fire Authority.

"I think we will do our citizens of Chehalis a huge disservice if we don't continue to look into this," said Chehalis City Councilor Dennis Dawes.

The board agreed to put discussions about the possible merger on hold until after the holiday season.

Mary McCrank's to Change Name

OLD OWNERS ADD NEW ITEMS: Gerhard's Steakhouse Will Serve Steak, Seafood and Specialty Foods at Chehalis Restaurant

By Amy Nile

anile@chronline.com

After 14 years of ownership, the family that runs Mary McCrank's is changing the Chehalis restaurant's name and menu in an attempt to save area foodies a drive to Seattle or Olympia.

"We want people to have something of magnitude in their backyard," said Jeri Schopp, who owns the restaurant with her family.

The newly dubbed Gerhard's Steakhouse will take on the name of chef and co-owner Gerhard Schopp starting on Tuesday.

While it has a great history, the restaurant's old namesake, who bought the restaurant in 1935 and operated it as the Shamrock Inn before changing to Mary McCrank's, has lost its selling power and has led to misconceptions about how the business should be run in recent years, co-owner Ryan Schopp said.

"People think it was supposed to be home-cooked grandma's house food, but really she was about quality product and good food," Ryan said. "So by doing our own thing, we start a new chapter."

New menu items include aged Angus steaks, seafood and specialty items. Gerhard will also serve dishes from his native Germany like schnitzel, red cabbage and spaetzle.

"We'd love to make it our own," Jeri told The Chronicle. "It's time for a positive change."

Mary McCrank's previously served about 40 traditional country home-cooking items like fried chicken. Now the newly renamed establishment, at 2923 Jackson Highway in Chehalis, will serve more than 20 entrees in addition to beer, wine and liquor.

"We want to do some things great, instead of a lot of good things," Jeri said.

FAMILY DENTAL CARE

Presented by
Dr. John Pham

FACE-SAVING TREATMENT

There is nothing attractive about "bruxism" (tooth-grinding), beginning with the horrible noise it creates that resembles chewing on coconut shells. While this noise is usually more of a problem for people sharing sleeping quarters with tooth-grinders, the loss of enamel and damaged tooth structure that bruxism can cause are occurrences with which tooth-grinders should be concerned. In fact, unless the problem is halted with the use of a custom-made nightguard provided by the dentist, bruxism can lead to facial changes that make the face look older. As tooth surfaces wear down and teeth become shorter, the upper and lower jaws (as well as the nose and chin) draw nearer. As a result, the lower face seems to prematurely age.

Could you benefit by wearing a night guard? Regular dental checkups and periodontal examinations are very important for good dental health. Brush, clean between your teeth, eat a balanced diet, and schedule regular dental visits for a lifetime of healthy smiles. At TOWN CENTER DENTAL, we are dedicated to preserving your teeth and offering you the best care with the least amount of risk to your health. If you have oral health questions for yourself or a family member, please call 1-877-378-3384 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 1515 NW Louisiana Avenue, Chehalis.

Our office is open Monday through Saturday. Walk-ins are welcome and emergencies are always seen the same day.

Afraid to visit the dentist? It's okay! We cater to cowards! Ask about Nitrous Oxide and IV Conscious Sedation.

P.S. Many tooth-grinders have notches in the outer surfaces of their upper and lower bicuspids at the gum line resulting from the strong side-to-side chewing motion characteristic of bruxism.

After Meeting With Obama, Congressional Leaders Voice Confidence in Deal to Avoid Fiscal Cliff

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders from both parties voiced fresh optimism Friday after meeting with newly re-elected President Barack Obama about avoiding year-end "fiscal cliff" tax increases and spending cuts that would hammer the middle class and risk plunging the economy into recession.

House Speaker John Boehner of Ohio said Republicans are willing to consider increased revenue "as long as it is accompanied by spending cuts" as leaders in a divided government get to work on a possible deal after a fierce election campaign.

He presented a framework that one official said called for a deficit down-payment of unspecified size by year's end, to be followed by comprehensive tax reform and an overhaul of Medicare and other benefit programs in 2013.

Democrats indicated some spending cuts would be fine with them. "I feel confident that a solution may be in sight," said House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi of California.

The goal of the high-pressure talks to come is to produce a multitrillion-dollar deficit-reduction plan that can take the place of the across-the-board tax increases and spending cuts that are slated to take effect on Jan. 1.

Petraeus to Congress: CIA Believed Early On That Terrorists Were Behind Libya Consulate Attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Testifying out of sight, ex-CIA Director David Petraeus told Congress Friday that classified intelligence showed the deadly raid on the U.S. Consulate in Libya was a terrorist attack but the administration withheld the suspected role of al-Qaida affiliates to avoid tipping them off.

The recently resigned spy chief explained that references to terrorist groups suspected of carrying out the violence were removed from the public explanation of what caused the attack so as not to alert them that U.S. intelligence was on their trail, according to lawmakers who attended Petraeus' private briefings.

The retired four-star general addressed the House and Senate intelligence committees in back-to-back, closed-door hearings as questions persist over what the Obama administration knew in the immediate aftermath of the Sept. 11 attacks and why its public description did not match intelligence agencies' assessments.

Close to Half the States Say They'll Help Carry Out Key Component of Obama's Health Overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — Threatened with repeal just weeks ago, President Barack Obama's health care law now appears on track in close to half the states, with others playing catch-up and the administration readying a fallback for states not wishing to participate.

Friday was the original deadline for states to notify Washington if they would play a role in building new health insurance markets through which the uninsured can get coverage starting in 2014. Though the administration granted a month's extension, most states have already made their intentions known.

As of Friday, 23 states plus Washington, D.C., were proceeding; 15 said they'd defer to the federal government to run their markets and 12 were still mulling over their options. The mostly blue group proceeding included five Republican-led states. The undecided included several states that seemed to be moving toward an active role.

New Mexico Coyote Hunting Contest Sparks Protests

By Russell Contreras
The Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The terms of the competition are simple: Hunters in New Mexico have two days this weekend to shoot and kill as many coyotes as they can, and the winners get their choice of a free shotgun or a pair of semi-automatic rifles.

But the planned two-day coyote hunting contest has sparked an online petition that has generated tens of thousands of signatures worldwide. The FBI is investigating a death threat to the gun shop owner who is sponsoring the hunt. And one protester has even vowed to dress like a coyote to trick hunters into accidentally killing a human.

But none of these episodes will likely stop the owner of Gunhawk Firearms from holding the scheduled two-day coyote hunting race this weekend, despite the international attention the idea has garnered.

"I'm not going to back down," said Mark Chavez, 50, who has faced two weeks of angry phone calls and protests — and even a threat to his life. "This is my right to hunt and we're not breaking any laws."

UNDER THE RULES OF THE contest, the winning team will get its choice of a Browning Maxus 12-gauge shotgun or two AR-15 semi-automatic rifles from the Los Lunas shop, and a hired taxidermist will salvage any pelts and hides from the dead coyotes for clothing.

"I'll even give the furs to the homeless if they need it," Chavez said.

> "The people protesting this contest have obviously never seen a calf chewed up by a coyote, or watched a mama sheep try to revive a dead lamb."
> Rex Wilson
> president of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association

THE COMPETITION — which opponents are calling a "coyote killing contest" — has sparked thousands of angry emails, social media postings and a petition signed by activists from as far as Europe who have demanded that the hunt be called off. Last week, a small group of protesters held a rally outside of Gunhawk Firearms and waved signs denouncing the event as cruel and "bloodthirsty."

People are upset over the idea of making a contest out of killing an animal that usually lives peacefully alongside residents, said Susan Weiss, 74, who leads the Coexist with Coyotes group in Corrales, N.M.

"There's a tremendous amount of arrogance in conducting this hunt," Weiss said. "(Chavez) is damaging the reputation of ranchers. He is damaging the reputation of legitimate hunters."

BUT SOME NEW MEXICO ranchers have complained about the large population of coyotes, estimated to be around 300,000 in the state. Coyotes are blamed for thousands of death to calves annually, and aren't protected under federal or state laws, ranchers say.

"People are trying to portray these animals as something they're not. Coyotes are predators. They survive in the wild by killing what they can, including livestock and pets," said Rex Wilson, president of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association. "The people protesting this contest have obviously never seen a calf chewed up by a coyote, or watched a mama sheep try to revive a dead lamb."

Power Outage Time After Sandy Not Extraordinary

By Jonathan Fahey
The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — As the number of nights without power stretched on for thousands left in the dark after Superstorm Sandy, patience understandably turned to anger and outrage.

But an Associated Press analysis of outage times from other big hurricanes and tropical storms suggests that, on the whole, the response to Sandy by utility companies, especially in hardest-hit New York and New Jersey, was typical — or even a little faster than elsewhere after other huge storms.

The AP, with the assistance of Ventyx, a software company that helps utilities manage their grids, used U.S. Energy Department data to determine how many days it took to restore 95 percent of the peak number of customers left without power after major hurricanes since 2004, including Ivan, Katrina, Rita, Wilma, Ike and Irene.

After Sandy, New York utilities restored power to at least 95 percent of customers 13 days after the peak number of outages was reported. New Jersey reached that same level in 11 days and West Virginia in 10 days.

Hurricanes Katrina, Rita and Wilma in 2005 and Ike in 2008 all resulted in longer outages for customers in Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi and Florida.

The longest stretch to 95 percent restoration since 2004 was Louisiana after Hurricane Katrina, where local utilities had power restored to only three-quarters of their customers after 23 days before Hurricane Rita hit and caused additional outages.

It took Texas utilities 16 days to restore power to 95 percent of those who lost it during Rita, according to the federal data; Mississippi utilities needed 15 days after Katrina; Florida and Texas utilities needed 14 days after Wilma and Ike.

New York and New Jersey recovered far faster after last year's Hurricane Irene. It took seven days for New York to restore 95 percent of customers and six days for New Jersey. But the number of outages in each state was less than half than from Sandy.

The restoration target of 95 percent allowed the AP to compare responses to the largest number of recent storms using Energy Department data, and is considered by industry experts to provide a meaningful picture of the speed with which utilities restored service to the vast majority of customers.

Gaza's Hamas Aims Homemade Rocket At Jerusalem For 1st Time, as Israel Calls Up Reserves

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — Hamas rocket squads aimed at Jerusalem for the first time Friday, along with commercial hub Tel Aviv, showing off their expanded reach as Israeli airstrikes pounded the Palestinian territory for a third day. Israel called up 16,000 reservists, moving a step closer to a possible ground offensive in the Palestinian territory.

Air raid sirens sounded in the two cities which — unlike population centers in Israel's south — had not been exposed to rocket fire from Hamas-ruled Gaza before the current round of cross-border fighting. No injuries were reported, but Hamas' latest attempts to hit Israel's heartland could push Israel closer to sending ground troops into Gaza.

Over the past three days, Israel has relentlessly pounded suspected rocket launching sites and other Hamas targets in Gaza with scores of airstrikes, while Hamas has fired more than 450 rockets toward Israel. The overall death toll rose to 30 — 27 Palestinians and three Israelis.

Just a few years ago, Palestinian rockets were limited to crude, homemade devices manufactured in Gaza. But in recent years, Hamas and other armed groups have smuggled in sophisticated, longer-range rockets from Iran and Libya, which has been flush with weapons since Moammar Gadhafi was ousted last year.

Analysis: Renewed Israel-Hamas Conflict Fed by Arab Spring, Deep Hatred — and Israeli Election

JERUSALEM (AP) — Since Israel completed a devastating military offensive in the Gaza Strip four years ago, military officials have warned it was only a matter of time before the next round of fighting. Violence erupted this week with little warning, driven by Hamas' ambitions to make its mark on a changing Middle East and an Israeli government reacting to public outcry over rocket attacks just weeks ahead of national elections.

It is a clash of wills driven by wildly contradictory narratives nurtured over the years by two deeply antagonistic societies with little in common save a deep-seated sense of historical grievance and victimization.

From Israel's perspective, the fact that it withdrew from Gaza in 2005, pulling out all soldiers and settlements after a 38-year occupation, should have been the end of its troubles with the 1.6 million Palestinians there. The continued rocket attacks — especially since Hamas militants seized the coastal strip from the more moderate Fatah faction in 2006 — are seen as an outrage that justifies extreme measures. No country, Israelis argue, could possibly be asked to tolerate a decade of rocket attacks.

That view aligns with a deeper historical grievance: Israelis feel their Zionist movement was fundamentally a return home from two millennia of exile but that it was met from the beginning by Arab rejection and violence. The Holocaust, the World War II slaughter of 6 million Jews by the Nazis even as Jews were building their state-in-waiting, further fed the sense of victimization accompanied by a distrust of the world and an obsession with self-reliance.

Hamas, on the other hand, rejects any Jewish connection to the Holy Land and views Israel as a colonial outpost in the heart of the Islamic world that must be destroyed. And among Palestinians, the Gazans' specific sense of victimization stems most directly from the miserable living conditions in a crowded, besieged and impoverished coastal strip a few miles wide.

Public lines up for new low-cost appliance that slashes heat bills

Amish craftsmen vow to keep up with rush for brand-new Hybrid-Thermic™ 'Miracle Heater' that uses about the same energy as a coffee maker per hour, so just plug it in and never be cold again

Everyone hates high heat bills. But we're all sick and tired of turning the thermostat down and freezing our buns off.

That's why Sears knew they had a home-run on their hands with the first-ever low-cost appliance with Hybrid-Thermic™ heat technology and Hi-Def Fireless Flame. And no other heater anywhere has it.

The brand-new portable Heat Surge EV-2 sips so little energy, you can run it for a full 12-hour day or night for just about a buck.

This modern marvel, hailed as the zone heating 'Miracle Heater,' caused such a frenzy at Sears stores, one shopper refused to leave until she got one. Since there were none in stock, store managers were forced to hand over the store's only floor model, against store policy.

So today, immediate action is being taken to give more people, more ways to get them.

Beginning at 8:30 a.m., today's readers are allowed to phone in or snag one online. Heat Surge even released this advertising announcement and a 2-Day Double Coupon which has been reprinted on this page for today's readers to use.

By using this coupon, everyone who calls is being rewarded with $227 off. That makes this remarkable new home appliance a real steal at just $299. Since this is a Double Coupon Deal, it not only gives you an extraordinary discount, but also entitles you to free shipping and handling, totaling $227 off. So now everyone has a fair shot at getting one.

"Folks are saving money everywhere by zone heating with the new Heat Surge EV-2," said Dave O'Neil, the company's analyst tracking the impact Heat Surge is having on consumer heat bills.

This all started when Sears wanted the world-famous 'Amish Miracle Heater' that everyone was asking for.

The shy but now famous Amish craftsman said Sears made the most sense. "I'd reckon they're the oldest and most trusted in the country," one of the Amish craftsmen known as Melvin said.

"It's been saving folks money, big money. And we know it because we're hearin' about it," he said.

"They know about our quality. No particle board, just real wood. Fully-assembled cabinets by our hands and we're making them right here in the good ole USA," Melvin said.

Director of Technology David Martin explained, "The Heat Surge Accent EV-2 is a revolutionary appliance that can easily roll from room to room. But we didn't want it to look like some metal box that just sits there. So we turned to our Amish craftsmen and now each one is made to look like a sleek, slim fireplace that has no real flames."

"The peaceful flicker of the Hi-Def 'Fireless Flame' is so beautiful, everyone thinks it's real, but it's totally safe to the touch. All you do is just plug it in," Martin said.

People from New Mexico to Washington and even Florida and Arizona are flocking to get them because they are finally able to give their central heat a rest during the long, frigid winter ahead.

According to the avalanche of consumer reviews, people absolutely swear by them, repeatedly saying, "it saves money," "looks beautiful," and "keeps you warm head to toe, floor to ceiling." And the word is getting out. That's why people are clamoring to get them.

But Martin said right now the real problem is making sure the Amish craftsmen can keep up with the looming Christmas rush.

That's why the Double Coupon expires in two days.

So for readers hoping to get the new Heat Surge for themselves and take care of gifts for others, there is good news.

You can use the 2-Day Double Coupon more than once. But there is a catch. You can only get away with it for the next two days from the date of today's publication by calling the National Appliance Center at 1-800-618-8510.

Then, when it arrives, you'll be rushing to turn down that thermostat. Just plug it in, watch your heat bills hit rock bottom, and never be cold again. ■

■ GOTTA HAVE ONE: People are flocking to Sears stores everywhere to get the brand-new Heat Surge EV-2. An eager crowd remained respectful as Jonas Miller stages a promotional delivery event. "I heard so much about the Amish Miracle Heater but couldn't find where to get one," an excited Mary Straughn said. That's why a National Appliance Hotline has been set up for today's readers who can't rush out to get one. Readers who call the Hotline at 1-800-618-8510 will get free delivery with an extraordinary 2-Day Double Coupon that has been reprinted below.

■ SAFE: The beautiful L.E.D. Hi-Def Fireless Flame® on the new Heat Surge EV-2 is so stunning, everyone thinks it's real, but it's actually safe to the touch. It's so safe, it's where the kids will play & the pets will sleep.

■ BLANKET FREE COMFORT: "We just couldn't take another winter of always being cold. And we also got one for the kids to help them with their heat bills," Julia White said.

How It Works: You get 74° of bone-soothing room heat even when the home thermostat is turned down to 59° with the first-ever Heat Surge EV-2

■ MODERN MARVEL: The revolutionary Heat Surge Accent EV-2 micro-furnace fits in any room because it's packed inside a small Amish-built cabinet that measures just 25" high, 18" wide, and 12" deep.

This is the revolutionary Heat Surge EV-2, the only appliance with Hybrid-Thermic™ heat technology. Hybrid-Thermic heat technology is an engineering genius so advanced, it actually uses a micro-furnace from the Coast of China and a thermal heat exchanger to perform its miracles. The thermal heat exchanger acts like the rays of the sun to heat you, the kids, the pets and everything else. The micro-furnace then heats all the surrounding air. Together, this Hybrid-Thermic heat technology warms both you and the air around you, taking care of all the cold spots. In fact, it actually produces bone-soothing heat to help you feel good.

This modern marvel uses L.E.D. flame technology and just a trickle of electricity and saves you money based on a U.S. average that says it uses only about 9¢ of electricity an hour on the standard setting, yet it produces up to an amazing 4,606 British Thermal Units (BTU's) on the high setting. But here's the big surprise. It's not just a metal box that belongs in a basement. The Heat Surge EV-2 is a showpiece in any room. That's because it has the ambiance of a real fireplace, but it has no real flames. Its Hi-Def Fireless Flame® technology makes it safe to the touch.

The portable Heat Surge EV-2 comes installed in a genuine Amish-built wood cabinet made in the heartland of Ohio. They are hand-rubbed, stained, and varnished. When it arrives, all you do is just plug it in.

A Consumer Best Buy

An avalanche of unsolicited consumer reviews gives the company the reason to boast an overwhelming Consumer 'Best Buy' on the HeatReport.com website. Consumers should be aware of the fakes out there. This Hybrid-Thermic 'Miracle Heater' can never be found at Wal-Mart®, not at Lowe's®, not at Home Depot®, and none of the Club Stores. "Accept no imitations. If it does not have the Heat Surge name on it, it is not real Amish and it is not Hybrid-Thermic™. I repeat, if it does not have the Heat Surge name on it, you are getting ripped off," said Heat Surge Chief Compliance Officer, Dennis James. The Heat Surge has earned the coveted Underwriters Laboratories certification and is protected by a limited full year replacement or money back warranty and 30-day Satisfaction Guarantee.

'I'm So Excited to Be a Family Forever'

OFFICIALLY FAMILY: In a Courtroom Usually Filled With Tragedy, Friday Morning Was Instead Packed With Happy Children and Families

By Stephanie Schendel

sschendel@chronline.com

Lewis County has an average of 140 children living in foster care at any one time. Friday morning, 12 of those children were officially adopted by families as a part of National Adoption Day celebrated in Lewis County Superior Court.

The setting was a courtroom that is usually filled with lawyers, jurors, and individuals whose lives have been ripped apart by tragedy, drug addiction and domestic violence. In contrast, on Friday morning the room was packed with children and families. Everyone was smiling, and the room was decorated with teddy bears and balloons.

"There are a couple of things I do as a superior court judge that are really exciting and positive, like weddings and adoptions," said Lewis County Superior Court Judge James Lawler.

Usually, he said, his courtroom is filled with negativity — from drugs to divorce, assaults, and sometimes even murders. Most people, he said, leave court sad or angry, because someone ultimately loses.

"Nobody loses today," Lawler said.

Five-year-Timothy Pilz was one of the children who had their adoptions finalized on Friday.

"I'm so happy to be your dad and I'm so excited to be a family forever," Timothy's father, Zach Pilz of Centralia, told him as they sat at the courtroom table before Judge Lawler formalized the adoption. Afterward, Zach gave his son a high five.

Everyone in the courtroom clapped, and Timothy spent several concentrated minutes signing his name on the adoptions papers.

"We felt God wanted us to grow our family this way," said his mother, Lindsey Pilz.

The Pilz family was one of many that participated in the National Adoption Day, which is nationwide effort to draw attention to the 129,000 foster children waiting for adoption throughout the country, according to a press release from Lewis County Superior Court. In Washington state, there are more than 9,600 child in foster care. Many are available for adoption.

Since 1987, the national number of children in foster care has doubled, while the average time a child remains in foster care has lengthened to nearly three years, according to the release.

Anyone interested in information about becoming a foster parent should contact the Division of Licensing Resources at (360) 807-7081. For those interested in becoming a Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) for a child, please contact Lewis County Juvenile Court CASA program coordinators at (360) 740-2684 or at 740-2683.

Heavy Rain Expected in Lewis County Through Thanksgiving

SHOWERS: No Flood Warning Has Been Issued

By Kyle Spurr

kspurr@chronline.com

A series of wet weather fronts will move through Western Washington, including the greater Lewis County area, this weekend and through Thanksgiving, according to the National Weather Service in Seattle.

The heavy rain storms are expected to hit the region on Saturday, Sunday night, Monday night and on Wednesday, according to the weather service.

Meteorologist Art Gaebel said the continuous fronts will bring a total of one to three inches of rain to the Northwest. Snow levels will also fluctuate between 3,000 and 5,000 feet in elevation.

Gaebel said up to one foot of snow might fall at White Pass by Sunday.

"This is more typical of November weather," Gaebel said. "There will be no surprises for most people."

The NWS is forecasting a 100 percent chance of rain in Lewis County on Saturday, Sunday night and Monday. Gaebel said November is the wettest month of the year for the region.

Through Friday, Gaebel said, Sea-Tac Airport had recorded 1.96 inches of rain this month, which is below the average of 3.19 inches through Nov. 15.

The average precipitation record at Sea-Tac Airport for all of November is about six inches.

A flood watch has been issued for the Skokomish River in Mason County, but Gaebel said no flood warnings have been posted for the greater Lewis County area.

"That may become an issue next week," Gaebel said.

Napavine's Sage Atkins (11) and her teammates celebrate after defeating Liberty Bell 3-0 on Friday night in Sumner in the semifinals of the State 1B/2B Girls Soccer Championships. Napavine will play in the state championship game for the fourth-straight year at 2 p.m. today, against Bear Creek.

Tigers Top Liberty Bell to Reach Fourth-Straight State Finals

REPEAT AFFAIR: Napavine to Face Bear Creek in Rematch of Last Year's Championship Game at 2 p.m. in Sumner

By Brandon Hansen

bhansen@chronline.com

SUMNER — The Tigers have been here before. Now they're looking to deliver with a state championship.

Experience and good conditioning helped Napavine get past Liberty Bell 3-0 here in a semifinal matchup at the State 1B/2B Girls Soccer Championships on Friday night. The win marks the fourth time, in the four years the Tigers have been a soccer program, that they'll play for the state crown.

Napavine will face defending state champion Bear Creek at 2 p.m. today at Sumner's Sunset Chev Stadium in a rematch of last year's state finale.

"We're excited to redeem ourselves against that team," Napavine senior Rachel LaBrasca said.

Bear Creek defeated Crosspoint Academy 4-0 in the early semifinal game to get to the title bout. After that, the evening belonged to the Tigers.

Liberty Bell may have had a few jitters in the game's first few moments, allowing the Tigers to take a 1-0 lead in the second minute thanks to an untouched corner kick by Sage Atkins.

"Yet again we got our girls to score when we needed them to," Napavine coach Henry Gallanger said.

The rest of the first half would be a tense affair with opportunities on both sides. The Tiger defense, however, held strong against a few good chances by the Mountain Lions.

"It was shaky in the first half but I think that was nerves," Gallanger said. "They were the only team that we hadn't known or heard anything about. For both teams, how do you prepare against a team you've never seen?"

In the second half, the Tigers wore down their opponents and scored two more goals. Atkins notched a goal from several yards out with a sniper shot that got past the goalie in the 51st minute, an an assist by Sarah LaBrasca. The Tigers then produced a sister act in the 63rd minute when junior Sarah

Chehalis' Rich Bunker to Receive Linville Award

By The Chronicle

Rich Bunker will be honored with the Washington State Baseball Coaches Association's Larry Linville Community Service Award today.

Bunker, from Chehalis, will receive the award today at the 25th annual WSBCA Hall of Fame Induction Luncheon at Safeco Field in Seattle.

The award recognizes recipients who have done notable things for youth baseball in their areas, have supported high school baseball in their area, or created fields and leagues to bring the game to kids in their area. Bunker, who most spearheaded the construction of W.F. West High School's Bearcat Baseball Stadium, meets all of those qualifications.

Bunker started coaching in 1971 at the Babe Ruth level, while he was playing baseball at Centralia College. He went on to coach his sons in T-ball, Little League, Babe Ruth and Senior Babe Ruth. He was an assistant

Toledo's Gaul, Meier Earn Top Trico All-League Honors

Jesse Smith / For The Chronicle

Toledo's Mack Gaul runs for a touchdown on Sept. 21 in a win over Ilwaco. Gaul was voted the co-MVP of the SWW 1A League Trico Division.

By The Chronicle

Toledo's Mack Gaul was named co-MVP, and teammate Cody Meier was voted the Defensive Player of the Year in the SWW 1A League Trico Division's All-League football selections.

Toledo went 5-3 in Trico play, and lost to Hoquiam in a district crossover game to end the season. Gaul, a senior running back and linebacker, was one of the team's key offensive weapons throughout the year, running for 700 yards on 81 carries with eight touchdowns. He added 245 receiving yards and an additional four touchdowns through the air. The two-sport star is also slated to sign a National Letter of Intent to play baseball for the University of Washington on Monday.

Meier, also a standout running back for the Indians, ran for 767 yards and 10 touchdowns, highlighted by a 148-yard rushing effort against Castle Rock.

Woodland's Cy Whitmire was also a co-MVP, and La Center's Jared Huddleston was voted the Offensive Player of the Year.

US Goalie Hopo Solo Marries Jerramy Stevens

SNOHOMISH, Wash. (AP) — U.S. women's soccer team goalkeeper Hope Solo reportedly married former Seattle Seahawks tight end Jerramy Stevens this week, hours after Stevens was released from custody following a domestic violence arrest.

KING5-TV reported that Solo and Stevens were married Tuesday night near Snohomish during a small ceremony. A Kirkland Municipal Court judge released Stevens after a court appearance earlier Tuesday, saying there was no evidence connecting Stevens to any assault.

He was arrested early Monday for investigation of fourth-degree domestic violence assault but has not been charged.

Solo was in the courtroom Tuesday afternoon, but left without talking to reporters.

LaBrasca scored her own goal on an assist from her older sister, Rachel.

"It felt great," the older LaBrasca said. "Of course we don't get along sometimes off the field, so it was a good bonding experience."

Gallanger thought his team seemed to be a bit better conditioned, and the two second-half goals reflected that observation.

"I could tell we were in better shape," LaBrasca said. "In the second half they were definitely getting tired."

Sami Taylor was credited with the clean sheet in goal for the Tigers.

Napavine (12-5) will be going for its first state title in four tries this afternoon. The Tigers lost 1-0 in the title game last year, when Bear Creek won via a 3-1 advantage in the overtime shootout after 90 scoreless minutes. All three of Napavine's state championship game appearances have ended with a one-goal differential.

The Centralia Little League baseball organization is looking for coaches for the 2013 season. Coaches are needed at all levels, and the deadline to apply for a Majors coaching position is Jan. 18. For more information, contact Tom at (360) 880-7090 or Wendy at (360) 508-6491.

M's: Scoreboard Will Have MLB's Biggest Screen

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Mariners say they will install the largest scoreboard video screen in the major leagues at Safeco Field during the offseason.

The Mariners say the screen debuting for the 2013 season will cover the same area as the old scoreboard but the screen itself is nearly 10 times the size of the current one. The team says the viewing area will be the equivalent of about 2,182 42-inch flat screen TVs.

The Mariners say the entire high definition board can be programmed to show live action or video replays or be split into sections displaying graphics, animation and statistical data.

coach at W.F. West from 1991-1995, worked as the head coach at Onalaska from 1996-97, and returned to W.F. West as an assistant from 1998 to 2010. The Bearcats won their first and only state championship in his final year.

In 1993 Bunker began the Bearcat Baseball Stadium project with help from sons Donnie and Lance and a heavy dose of volunteer work-hours and support from the community. He still maintains the stadium, which is a regular host site for several prep playoff and summer tournaments, and rebuilt the city of Chehalis' Little League fields in 2010 with his son, Donnie. He's currently working on a project to build new batting cages at W.F. West High School.

Today's ceremony is scheduled, appropriately, as a baseball game, with the event broken into nine innings of awards, introductions and speakers. Seattle Mariners scout Joe Ross will speak in the second inning, and awards will be presented in the third through ninth innings. Coach of the Year awards will go to Kamiakin's Ryan Carter (Large Schools) and Cashmere's Jeff Carlson (Small Schools); Kentwood's Reese McGuire will receive the Pro-Line Cap Co. Player of the Year Award; White River's Mike Williams will receive the Don Freeman Award, and Olympic's Jeff Elevodo will receive the Dan White Award; Ron Shaw will be given the CJ Mitchell Umpire Service Award; Scott Spruill of the Yakima Herald Republic will be presented with the Jim Reding Media Award; and Naches Valley's Billy Walker and Colfax's Mike Parrish will be inducted into the WSBCA Hall of Fame.

The ceremony will be held at the First Base Terrace Club at Safeco Field, with the doors opening at 12:30 p.m. Tickets are $25 and include a buffet lunch. Linville's son, Sean, will present the award during the seventh inning of the program.

Trico: Lambert Voted COTY

Toledo offensive lineman Coty Jasper, a senior, was a first-team offensive lineman, as was Indian senior linebacker Danny Aguilar.

Local second-team selections included wide receiver Sam Holbrook and tight end Ronnie Boone, both of whom are seniors, as well as senior offensive lineman John Buck, junior defensive back Kreed Askin, and senior defensive lineman David Comnick.

La Center's John Lambert was voted the league's Coach of the Year.

MVP Debate

Cabrera vs. Trout & Stat Geeks vs. Traditionalists

Matt Slocum / The Associated Press

In this Oct. 18 file photo, Detroit Tigers' Miguel Cabrera celebrates after hitting a two-run home run during the fourth inning in Game 4 of the ALCS against the Yankees in Detroit. Cabrera was voted the American League's Most Valuable Player for 2012.

Here's the most fascinating part of the great Mike Trout-Miguel Cabrera MVP debate: The zealots on both sides can't even believe there's an argument.

I mean, Trout was so clearly the best all-around — repeat, all-around — player in the American League, with the statistical evidence to back it up (for those willing to open their minds to metrics beyond batting average, home runs and runs batted in) that it was a no-brainer. At least, to those with a brain and an open mind.

By Larry Stone
The Seattle Times

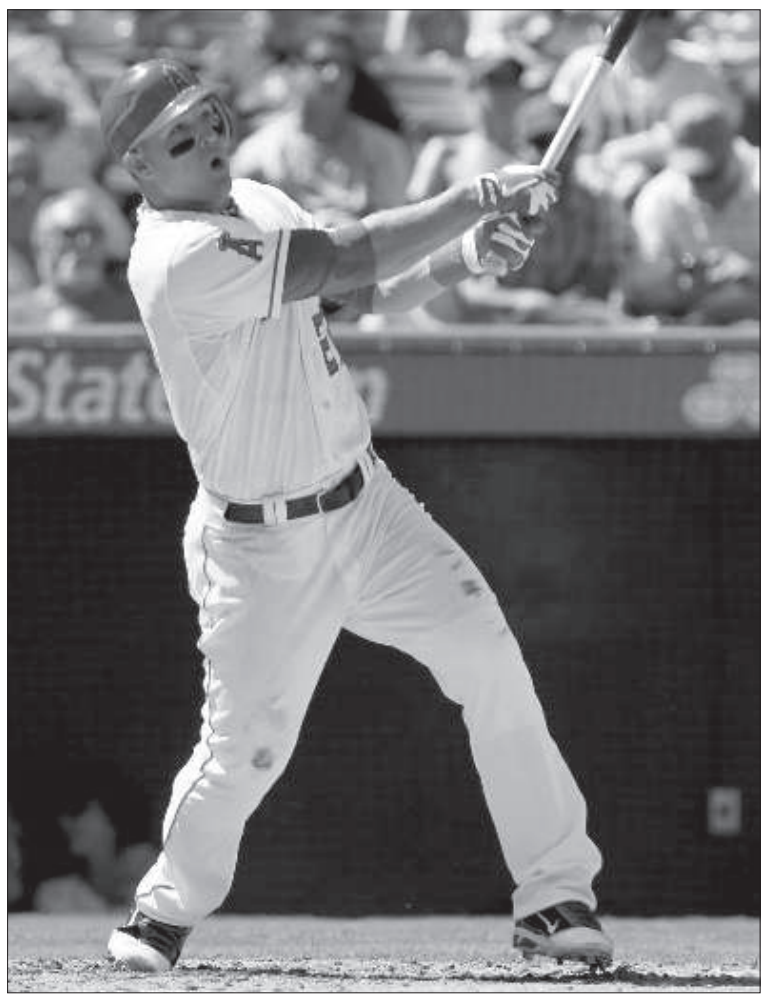
I mean, Cabrera won the Triple Freaking Crown, a feat that eluded Willie Mays, Hank Aaron, Barry Bonds and Babe Ruth. In fact, since 1900, it had eluded anyone except 11 players (Rogers Hornsby and Ted Williams won twice), and none had turned the trick since Yaz in 1967.

And as if that wasn't enough, Cabrera's Tigers made the playoffs, while Trout's Angels were aced out. Does the word "valuable" mean anything to you? Talk about no-brainers — at least, for those with a brain and without a pocket protector.

It's a little too clichéd to paint this Most Valuable Player vote as another battle in the war between the saber-nerds and the traditionalists — the staid Luddites of the Baseball Writers' Association of America vs. the WAR-loving eggheaded sons of Bill James.

But let's just say it's the latest referendum on two world views of judging player value. And give this win (not that wins matter much any more, at least not for starting pitchers) to the old school.

Cabrera — did I mention he won the Triple Crown? — was the overwhelming choice of the BBWAA, with 22 out of 28 first-place votes, compared to six for runner-up Trout.



Reed Saxon / The Associated Press

Mike Trout, shown in this Sept. 13 photo, was the runner-up in the American League MVP voting.

This was hardly a surprise. Just about everyone figured that the historical imperative of a Triple Crown would, rightly or wrongly, carry the day. Even Nate Silver, The New York Times blogger/mathematician who so thoroughly nailed the results of the presidential race (and who was a baseball analyst in a previous life) called this one for Cabrera. But not before making a long, involved, statistically sophisticated case for Trout, leading to this conclusion:

"The argument on Trout's behalf isn't all that complicated: He provided the greater overall contribution to his team. Trout was a much better defensive player than Cabrera, and a much better base runner. And if Cabrera was the superior hitter, it wasn't by nearly as much as the triple crown statistics might suggest."

I didn't sense much outrage from the sabermetric community after Cabrera's win, probably because the outcome was a foregone conclusion. But social media was bristling with even more snark and moral indignation than usual. Which is saying something.

I didn't have an MVP vote this year, but if I had, I would have given it to Trout. But I would have spent hours, if not days, agonizing over it, and the instant I sent it off, I would have been second-, third- and fourth-guessing myself.

Because I don't see this as a clash of right and wrong, or open-mindedness and close-mindedness, or progress and regress. I see it as an agonizing choice between two fantastic players whose epic seasons each had virtues pointing toward their status as the most valuable.

Contrary to the opinion of the most dogmatic on each side, there is no wrong answer here. You could make a WAR-based argument for Trout (WAR referring to "Wins Above Replacement" a statistic that measures a player's value), but there is still no consensus on measuring defense, which is a big part of WAR. You could make a big deal out of Cabrera leading the Tigers to the playoffs, but the Angels actually won more games.

There is, in fact, an almost limitless amount of "yeah, buts." Yeah, but Trout missed the first month of the season. Yeah, but Cabrera grounded into 28 double plays. Yeah, but Trout hit .289 after Sept. 1, with a .900 OPS, while Cabrera hit .333 with a 1.071 OPS. Yeah, but Trout stole 49 bases and was caught just five times, while Cabrera stole just four. Yeah, but Cabrera showed great leadership by agreeing to move to third base to accommodate Prince Fielder. Yeah, but he wasn't a very good third baseman.

And so it goes, ad nauseam. I fully acknowledge that there is a powerful historical resonance to winning the first Triple Crown in 45 years. Then again, I also fully acknowledge that RBI and batting average ain't what they used to be, value-wise.

I fall into the camp that believes that Trout had a better all-around year than Cabrera. But I don't see anything so clear-cut as to denounce those who deem otherwise.

Keselowski Says Johnson's Ribbing Won't Faze Him

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (MCT) — Thursday's press conference between Sprint Cup title contenders Jimmie Johnson and Brad Keselowski featured some good-natured ribbing over the pressure of racing for NASCAR's biggest prize.

Keselowski enters Sunday's Ford 400 series finale at Homestead-Miami Speedway with a solid 20-point lead over Johnson. Keselowski can guarantee himself his first Cup title with a finish of 15th or better.

It was over that statistic that Johnson, a five-time champion, launched his first barb.

"I think to think that a top-15 finish is a layup is tough," Johnson said. "This garage area is tough, the weight of the race.

"I don't care who you are, it'll show up at some point in time and thoughts will run through your head. And with all that being said, a 15th-place finish is not a layup for those guys."

The statistics may not be on Johnson's side. Keselowski has finished 11th or better in his past 11 races, dating to before the start of the Chase.

Johnson would not relent, however.

Asked if he was putting the weight on Keselowski, Johnson replied, "You know, of course I'm going to find points that give myself motivation and my team, and if there's anything I can do ...

"And Brad, if you'd like me to call later and remind you of any other examples — I certainly can — of guys that didn't pull off the season finale as they would hope."

A year after he had trouble simply walking, Buster Posey ran away with the National League Most Valuable Player award.

Posey on Thursday joined Johnny Bench and Thurman Munson as the only catchers in MLB history to win a Rookie of the Year award, a World Series title and an MVP award, and it wasn't even close. Posey received 27 of 32 first place votes and had 422 points, easily outdistancing Milwaukee Brewers left fielder Ryan Braun, the reigning MVP, who finished with 285. No player other than Posey finished with more than three first place votes.

In 2012, nobody in baseball accomplished more than Posey.

The Giants' cleanup hitter bounced back from a career-threatening ankle injury in May of 2011 to excel at the plate and behind it for a team that ran away with the National League West title and won a second World Series crown in three years. He hit 24 homers, drove in 103 runs and batted .336 to become the first catcher since 1942 to win the NL batting title.

When the Giants needed him most, Posey put the team on his shoulders. He set the tone on Aug. 15 when No. 3 hitter Melky Cabrera was suspended for use of a banned substance, gritting his teeth and stating, "We have to approach the rest of the year with a chip on our shoulders."

Posey backed up his words. He started 27 straight games from Aug. 24 (nine days after Melky Cabrera was suspended) until Sept. 22, the day the Giants clinched the National League West. Posey hit .356 with four homers, 18 RBIs and 18 runs during the stretch as the Giants went 19-8 and turned a close division race with the rival Los Angeles Dodgers into a rout.

Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson drops back to pass in the first half of an NFL football game against the New York Jets Sunday in Seattle.

Seahawks' First-Year Quarterback Exceeding Expectations

By Tim Booth

The Associated Press

RENTON — Golden Tate looked down at the text message, scrolling away as read the content.

Tate eventually swiped his finger three times over the touchscreen to get through all the information Russell Wilson had just sent about the Seattle Seahawks next opponent.

This was less than 24 hours after Wilson had thrown for three touchdowns in another Seattle home win. But to Wilson, there's no time for soaking in praise or dwelling in criticism.

It's all business, all the time for the rookie quarterback.

"He hasn't changed any in the way he acts. He acts the same regardless of if he's starting, not starting, threw a pick, threw a touchdown. He is the same person," Tate said. "We've seen him get better. He's a better football player. But (he) still stands for the same things, still works hard as expected, still gets his job done."

This week is time for Wilson and the Seahawks to take their recess at 6-4 and in the midst of the NFC playoff race. He's lived at the Seahawks practice facility, constantly in the film rooms or on the practice field. The exception is Tuesday, when visits patients at Seattle Children's Hospital.

Coach Pete Carroll joked that Wilson was planning a "three-hour" vacation from the team facility during Seattle's bye week.

He was joking, right?

"He's going to do all right," Carroll said. "He has some plans, we have talked about his plans, and he gets it."

The evaluation of Wilson's rookie season is much like his team. Seattle has been formidable and dominating in racing to a 5-0 record at home with wins over Dallas, New England and, of course, the controversial ending to their 14-12 win over Green Bay. On the road, they have played competitively, but made enough mistakes to be 1-4 — the losses by a combined 21 points.

Wilson has almost mirrored the team results. At home, he has the highest passer rating in the NFL, throwing 11 touchdowns with no interceptions, becoming the first rookie quarterback since the merger to win his first five home starts. On the road, he's thrown twice as many interceptions (eight) as touchdowns (four) and a QB rating nearly 60 points lower. It's the lowest road passer rating of any of the five rookie QBs starting this season.

Are those wild swings to be expected of a rookie? Absolutely.

Is Wilson accepting those results? Absolutely not.

"If we can function like we function here, and the throwing game goes along with the running game, then we'll really take another big step," Carroll said. "That's the one thing that has been a little bit off for us. We've been consistently not OK on the road, so hopefully we can fix it up."

Lost in the excitement over an undersized third-round pick that has become the Seahawks' franchise QB is that this wasn't supposed to be his job. Seattle's QB splash was supposed to be the signing of Green Bay backup Matt Flynn. It's similar to 2001 when Seattle got then-Green Bay backup Matt Hasselbeck and he became the Seahawks fixture for most of the decade.

When Seattle signed Flynn in March, the Seahawks marketing arm sent out email blasts to season ticket holders trying to build on the hype around the signing. When Seattle had its new jerseys unveiled in April, the uniforms with the No. 15 of Flynn were among the first printed for sale.

By Labor Day, Flynn jerseys were being discounted and Wilson's No. 3 was on order.

Since winning the starting job from Flynn, Wilson has approached his position unlike a rookie. He started leaving notes about upcoming opponents in the lockers of his receivers the mornings after the previous game. The notes have eventually morphed into texts and emails with even more details about coverages, routes, little things the quarterback saw that could be of benefit to his receivers.

"My goal is to move on from the week before, whether it was great, whether there were some things we could've done better, and just focus on the next team," Wilson said. "I thought that was the best idea and I kind of just decided to do that in terms of putting things in guys lockers and letting them know, this what we need to do, this what they do well, these are the coverage's they run the most in certain situations, and also just figuring out what we can do to be successful come Sunday."

While those small signs of leadership are impressive, it's his poise and communication on the field that have earned Wilson the most respect. It started immediately when he nearly led Seattle to a winning scoring drive in the final seconds of the season opener at Arizona. Whether it was the last second win over Green Bay where it was hard for the Seahawks not to be euphoric, or his game-winning TD toss to beat Tom Brady and the Patriots, Wilson's demeanor is always the same.

"You want someone who is even keel through the good and the bad and I think that is more what people are drawn to at the quarterback position because you can show that composure and poise and still have that competitive nature about you," Seattle receiver Doug Baldwin said. "Because he is already a highly competitive guy, there Is no reason for him to go in and amp it up when he's already where he needs it to be. The only thing that changes for him is just that he gets more focused. You can see it in his eyes when he calls plays, and reading his routes, he gets more focused."

Wilson will get an immediate test if he can correct those problems playing on the road. Seattle starts its final six-game run with consecutive matchups far away from Seattle at Miami and at Chicago. But then Seattle gets comfortable at home to close it out playing three of its final four — all against division opponents — with the only road trip out of country to Toronto where they will face struggling Buffalo.

The magic number to be in the final conversation for a playoff spot in the competitive NFC is likely 10 wins, meaning just holding serve at home won't be enough for the Seahawks.

"The biggest thing is just translating it over to the second half, using what we've learned in the first half, and just taking off," Wilson said. "I think we have that ability to take off right now."

Miami's Losing Streak Hits Three

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (MCT) The season is spiraling out of control for the Miami Dolphins.

Thursday night's 19-14 loss at Buffalo is the latest example of how badly things are going. Miami (4-6) started the season so much promise with its 4-3 record and three-game winning streak. But it's now on a three-game losing streak. And the roughest part of the schedule — games against Seattle and San Francisco and two games against New England — is coming.

The troubling thing is Buffalo (4-6), by most accounts, is a bad team. The Bills entered the game on a three-game losing streak. Factor in last week's 37-3 loss to Tennessee (4-6) and the Dolphins have now lost consecutive games to bad teams.

The Dolphins cut their deficit to 19-14 with 8:42 left in the game after quarterback Ryan Tannehill hit wide receiver Davone Bess on a 2-yard touchdown pass. The play would have been ruled an incompletion had coach Joe Philbin not thrown his red protest flag and got the call reversed.

Then came winning time, and the Dolphins, who finished with 184 yards of offense, failed miserably.

Miami got the ball with 4:42 left and faced the daunting task of driving 99 yards after Buffalo punter Shawn Powell booted one 52 yards to the Dolphins' 1-yard line.

Tannehill drove Miami to the 32-yard line by two-minute warning. But his deep pass to Bess was intercepted by Jarious Byrd, who dove to catch the ball at the Bills' 35-yard line with 1:54 left.

Buffalo was forced to punt and the Dolphins got one final chance to record a come-from-behind victory, taking over at their 16-yard line with 1:24 left. Tannehill hit Bess and then Rishard Matthews to drive Miami to Buffalo's 47. But a 17-yard completion to Brian Hartline was eliminated by a pass interference call against Hartline. That put Miami at its own 42-yard line.

Then disaster struck again. Tannehill, who now has six touchdowns and 11 interceptions, was intercepted by linebacker Bryan Scott trying to hit Bess over the middle.

Tannehill finished 14-for-28 passing for a pedestrian 141 yards, one touchdown and two interceptions.

Jerramy Stevens' Bad-Boy Image Ain't No Image

By Dave Boling
The News Tribune

As Shakespeare pointed out, the course of true love never did run smooth.

But when a young couple's wedding-eve party raises reports of a bloody eight-person altercation and the firing of a stun gun, and the prospective groom is carted off on suspicion of domestic assault, it seems to somewhat reduce the likelihood of long-term marital bliss.

When the principles include a two-time Olympic gold medalist and a former NFL bad boy, the incident becomes tawdry tabloid fodder.

I've held for some time that Jerramy Stevens surrendered his relevance — along with his career — in a series of civic endangerments, squandered second-chances and chronic cluelessness. Our limited space is better devoted to the achievers, those who are breaking the records rather than those breaking the rules.

But the former Seattle Seahawks and University of Washington tight end once again attracts the spotlight because of his newly public relationship with fellow Huskies alum Hope Solo, goalkeeper for the U.S. women's soccer team.

Reports hold that police were called to a disturbance at a Kirkland home early Monday morning, and Stevens was suspected of assaulting Solo, supposedly after an argument over where they would reside after the wedding. Stevens, a graduate of River Ridge High School in Lacey, was ultimately released based on a lack of evidence.

You can search the internet for the more salacious details, along with accounts of Stevens' criminal history. Aside from the lengthy rap sheet of reckless driving, DUI and possession, you will find a Seattle Times investigation published in 2008 that strongly connects Stevens with behavior far more sinister than moving violations.

Of course, his history doesn't negate the assumption of innocence in this incident.

Any case of domestic violence warrants close scrutiny. That Solo stands as a role model to thousands of young women around the world, and Stevens has a checkered history, though, elevates the attention this will receive.

As of Wednesday afternoon, some reports arose that the case was still under investigation, while others suggested that Solo and Stevens had gone ahead with the marriage anyway.

Regardless the outcome of the most recent incident, we can look back, and it appears that Stevens has been protected for years by a series of apologists and enablers — some out to exploit his talents, others well-intended.

I was taken in, too. I've stood in front of his locker and heard him give a convincing discourse that he was sincerely changed and matured and had his life and career in order. I bought it. I wrote it.

Mike Holmgren invested considerable professional equity in Stevens' promises. Back in 2002, Holmgren was both coach and general manager of the Seahawks, and he was in need of a tight end. Although Stevens was outrageously gifted physically, his off-field behavior was so well-known that most teams backed away.

On draft day, Holmgren addressed the risks of taking Stevens with the team's first-round draft pick.

"We liked him very much as a football player; we have done a lot of work ... analyzing the situation," Holmgren said. On the phone with Stevens moments before drafting him, Holmgren told him: "I need a couple promises from you."

Stevens assured him he'd be a choir boy. After making the pick, Holmgren said: "This is going to work; we're committed to making this work, and I believe that he is, too."

Holmgren was concerned enough that he insisted there be language in Stevens' contract that forced him to repay a portion of his signing bonus if he got in further legal trouble.

"It protects the club a little bit," Holmgren explained. "And, in my opinion, helps Jerramy as well because there's a little added incentive to walk the straight and narrow."

When he instead drove a twisted path, Stevens had to forfeit $300,000 back to the team.

The impact of Holmgren's decision to take the chance could not be recovered by getting into Stevens' checkbook. The Hawks came into the draft with the 20th pick in the first round. Holmgren traded down with Green Bay, though, giving up the 20th and 156th for the 28th and 60th pick. With 28, they took Stevens.

Had they stayed at 20, they might have selected Miami safety Ed Reed, who has gone to eight Pro Bowls. The Packers, with that pick, took receiver Javon Walker, who made one Pro Bowl. And with 156, the Packers drafted linebacker Aaron Kampman (two Pro Bowls), while the Hawks wasted the 60th pick on a lowly regarded defensive end from UNLV, Anton Palepoi, who would start only one game in his three seasons with Seattle.

At the end of that 2002 season, Holmgren was relieved of his general manager duties.

Stevens would play five seasons with the Hawks and finish with a modest 15 touchdown receptions. His three drops in Super Bowl XL, however, stand as perhaps the most lasting memory of his on-field efforts.

Holmgren's assessment of Stevens was so confident at the start.

"I think this young man has a tremendous upside," Holmgren said. "He can be about as good as he wants to be."

Ten years later, we've seen little evidence he wants to be.

Sigi Schmid greets Eddie Johnson after the Sounders' win over Dallas at CenturyLink Field last Sunday. Johnson said this year with Seattle is a special one for him.

Sounders Won't Come Out Desperate vs. Galaxy

By Joshua Mayers
The Seattle Times

There are no guidelines for overcoming a three-goal deficit in the MLS Cup playoffs.

Not yet, at least.

No team has ever won a two-game series after losing the first leg by three goals — a situation only experienced by Sounders FC.

Only one team, the 2003 San Jose Earthquakes, has ever come back after being down more than two goals at any point in a series.

But that doesn't mean the Sounders don't have a blueprint for shocking the defending champion Los Angeles Galaxy on Sunday in the second leg of the Western Conference finals.

"The approach is we have to understand that we have to score three goals in 90 minutes; we don't have to score three goals in five minutes," said coach Sigi Schmid. "We don't have to score three goals in 15. For sure, we don't have to go hog wild."

One key aspect to the comeback is the first goal.

The hope is to get one in the first 20 to 30 minutes, something that would surely boost an expected CenturyLink Field crowd of more than 40,000. Belief within the Sounders would grow, as well, but as the team has seen, things often don't go as planned.

"That's the ideal scenario, and that doesn't always happen for you," Schmid said of a fast start. "The important thing is not to go out there and panic and say, 'Oh, geez, if we don't get a goal in first 15, 20 minutes of the game, then it's all over."

Added midfielder Brad Evans: "It's not desperation until a certain point."

With or without an early goal, the Sounders will have to score often. So how will they do that?

In Seattle's high-scoring games, Schmid said the goals have usually come in a variety of ways.

Maybe there's a goal off a set piece, like a free kick or corner kick. Maybe there's a spectacular goal from 35 yards out. Maybe there's a lucky goal off a deflection. Maybe there's a goal that comes from hard work or a penalty kick.

The Sounders will be able to field more of a first-choice lineup Sunday, as opposed to what was a conservative look in the first leg, and that should help create a more diverse attack. Forward Eddie Johnson, who led the team with 14 goals, is expected to start, and Mauro Rosales, who led the team with 13 assists, could be available off the bench.

Fredy Montero, who's stuck in a long postseason scoring drought, said responsibility ultimately falls on him and his teammates.

"In this position right now, I think good players have to show up," Montero said.

Added Johnson: "Everyone has to be on their game for us to make the opportunity a reality."

Lastly, don't forget the impact of what will be the largest playoff crowd in Sounders FC history.

"We'll need (fans) completely. We need them behind us. They were behind us last year and we almost came through with it," said Schmid, referencing a near-comeback from a three-goal deficit against Real Salt Lake in the 2011 playoffs. "This is the year we've got to complete the job we didn't complete last year, so we need our fans and we need their support."

Pepperdine Knocks Off WSU. 58-56

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Lorne Jackson hit back-to-back 3-pointers down the stretch in regulation and added the game-winning basket with 12 seconds left in overtime as Pepperdine knocked off Washington State 58-56 Friday night.

Jackson's layup in overtime put the Waves (1-2) up 57-56, and Jordan Baker added a free throw after Washington State turned the ball over on its final possession.

The Cougars (2-1) went scoreless for the final 5:25 of regulation — missing four shots and committing four turnovers — as Pepperdine rallied from a 50-42 deficit behind Jackson's 3-pointers and a layup from Stacy Davis with 24 seconds left that tied it.

Jackson had 15 points, Davis 14 and Baker 13 for Pepperdine.

Brock Motum led Washington State with 15 points. Royce Woolridge added 11 and Mike Ladd had 10 points and 13 rebounds.

Jackson's overtime bucket gave Pepperdine its first lead since early in the game when it was ahead 5-4.

Washington State scored the first five points of overtime to go up 55-50, and still led 56-53 with 2:09 remaining. Davis scored on a short jumper with 1:02 left to make it 56-55. The Cougars had a turnover on their next possession then missed two free throws with 26 seconds left.

That opened the door for Jackson's game-winner. Baker added a free throw with 0.4 seconds left then missed the second, and a full-court heave by Washington State didn't come close.

The Cougars outrebounded Pepperdine 39-26, but committed 20 turnovers and shot

Prime Time Players

JOE FLACCO, QB, RAVENS

Joe Flacco and the Ravens won in convincing fashion, to say the least, during a 55–20 blowout of the Oakland Raiders. Flacco completed 21-of-33 passes for 341 yards and three TDs — two going to talented, speedy deep threat Torrey Smith, who made his only two catches on the day count. Flacco spread the ball around well, however, connecting with eight different receivers en route to a dominant 35-point win over the Silver-and-Bleak.

JIMMY GRAHAM, TE, SAINTS

The former Miami (Fla.) basketball player had a slam dunk game while helping his Saints end the undefeated season of the Atlanta Falcons. The Saints won 31–27, with Graham hauling in nine catches for 146 yards and two TDs, both of which came in the first half. Graham's trips to the end zone accounted for two of the three scoring strikes thrown by Drew Brees in a key NFC South win for New Orleans.

ALDON SMITH, LB, 49ERS

In his second season, Smith is continuing to show that he is a dominant pass-rusher. After an impressive rookie campaign in which he recorded 14 sacks, Smith added two more sacks to his 2012 total, along with six unassisted tackles, during a defensive struggle that ended in a 24–24 tie against the St. Louis Rams. So far this season, Smith has 9.5 sacks, giving the Mizzou man 23.5 sacks over the first 25 games of his career.

CALVIN JOHNSON, WR, LIONS

Despite losing to the Vikings 34-24, Calvin "Megatron" Johnson had a huge game for the Lions, with 12 catches for a whopping 207 yards and a late TD to keep the game close. Megatron always makes his presence felt, and this past Sunday was no different as he averaged 17 yards per catch in the loss.

ADRIAN PETERSON, RB, VIKINGS

A.D. was once again dominant "All Day" for the Vikings. In yet another unreal effort, Peterson posted 27 carries for 171 yards, for a terrific average of 6.3 yards per carry. The All-Pro runner capped off his day with a TD that ended up putting the game out of reach, taking it to the house from 61 yards out to put his team up two scores before ultimately winning 34–24 over the rival Detroit Lions. Over the last four weeks, Peterson has rushed for 629 yards and five TDs but feels his best is still to come. He is, after all, just over 10 months removed from major knee surgery. "I still can get stronger. I'm still not there, man," said Peterson. "I'm going to come back stronger and better after the bye."

Athlon Fantasy Flash

In a league loaded with dominant quarterback options, Chicago's JAY CUTLER isn't more than a backup in most one-QB fantasy formats. But that doesn't mean he isn't a valuable piece to the puzzle in regards to a couple of no-doubt fantasy starters. Receiver Brandon Marshall, who has 904 yards and seven TDs over his first nine games thanks primarily to Cutler's right arm and trust in the volatile wideout, will likely suffer if Cutler (concussion) misses significant time. Meanwhile, running back Matt Forte may see an uptick in his workload, with the Bears looking to rely more on their running game and defense.

Saints Marching Back

New Orleans back in hunt after upsetting Atlanta

By NATHAN RUSH
Athlon Sports Editor

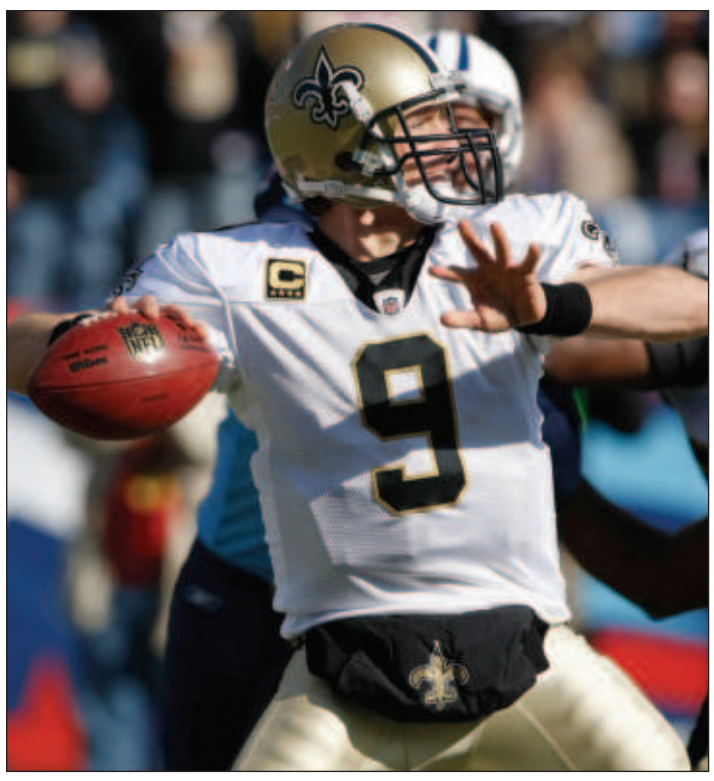
Just when it looked like the New Orleans Saints were down for the count, the fleurs-de-lis from the French Quarter bounced back off the mat with a 31–27 upset win over the previously unbeaten NFC South rival Atlanta Falcons.

There had been plenty of reasons to count out the Saints. The offseason suspensions of coach Sean Payton, middle linebacker Jonathan Vilma, defensive end Will Smith and several other key members of the team's coaching staff and roster as a result of "Bounty Gate" would have crippled most clubs. And when the appeals process spilled into the season, the ongoing feud with Commissioner Roger Goodell did not seem good for anything other than an off-field distraction of the highest order.

An 0–4 record to start the season reaffirmed the preconceived notion that the 2012 season was a placeholder year for New Orleans, a punishment for allegedly attempting to knock out Brett Favre, Kurt Warner and a handful of other players. After all, the Saints lost to a quartet of teams — the Redskins, Panthers, Chiefs and Packers — that carry a combined 12–24 record heading into Week 11. And Green Bay boasts half of those dozen combined victories.

But record-breaking Super Bowl XLIV MVP quarterback Drew Brees promised all was not lost. For some reason, he was convinced the 2012 season could be saved.

"This team is all in," Brees said after a winless first quarter of the year. "They are on the cusp of becoming a very productive, winning team."



Athlon Sports

New Orleans quarterback Drew Brees has thrown 15 TDs and just three INTs during the Saints' recent 4–1 run following an 0–4 start to the season.

It turns out, Brees wasn't another big talker on Bourbon Street. The man who led New Orleans from the dark depths of Hurricane Katrina to the top of the Super Bowl mountain knew what he was talking about.

Since starting 0–4, the Saints have gone 4–1, a stretch during which Brees has thrown 15 TDs and just four INTs. As the famous saying goes: "They don't ask how, they ask how many?" But this past week's victory over the 8–0 Falcons meant more than just another notch in the win column. Atlanta's Matt Ryan entered with a 2–6 career record against the Saints and a 1–3 mark on the road in what has been the Big un-Easy for him.

New Orleans intended to keep Ryan and Atlanta coach Mike Smith — who arrived in the division the same year as "Matty Ice" — on edge, while re-establishing the Saints as a legit contender in the NFC Wild Card race.

Following the statement victory, New Orleans has a 4–5 record and momentum on its side. And guess what? Just like earlier this season, Brees thinks the Saints are a team to be reckoned with.

"I feel like our best football is yet to come," said Brees. "We've played some really good games, we've beaten some very good opponents in some big-time situations, but I truly believe that our best is yet to come."

Weekend on Tap

DOLPHINS (4-5) AT BILLS (3-6)
The home team is 7–3 on Thursday night this year, so there is a chance that Buffalo fans could witness their first win at Ralph Wilson Stadium since Week 2 against the Chiefs.

BENGALS (4-5) AT CHIEFS (1-8)
Kansas City is 0–4 at Arrowhead this season and just 1–8 at home dating back to last year.

EAGLES (3-6) AT REDSKINS (3-6)
Mike Shanahan has a 10–6 record in games immediately following his bye. But this will be the third straight year the Skins play the Eagles after the bye; they're 0–2 in those contests, with a 59–28 loss in 2010 and 20–13 loss last year.

JAGUARS (1-8) AT TEXANS (8-1)
The Jags are happy to leave Jacksonville, where they have been outscored 153–44. Strangely, the teal team has only been outscored 93–83 on the road. They must like playing in front of a crowd.

JETS (3-6) AT RAMS (3-5-1)
Rex Ryan is standing by his man Mark Sanchez despite the fact that the Jets have scored only one offensive TD over their last eight quarters.

BROWNS (2-7) AT COWBOYS (4-5)
This is a classic trap game for Dallas — tucked between a win over the Eagles and a Turkey Day showdown with the Redskins.

BUCCANEERS (5-4) AT PANTHERS (2-7)
Tampa Bay's Josh Freeman has thrown 13 TDs and one INT while leading the Bucs to a 4–1 record over his last five games. Carolina's Cam Newton has passed for four TDs, five INTs and has a 1–4 mark over the same time frame.

PACKERS (6-3) AT LIONS (4-5)
The last time Titletown's team traveled to the Motor City, Lions wild child Ndamukong Suh was ejected for stomping on Thanksgiving.

CARDINALS (4-5) AT FALCONS (8-1)
Matt Ryan has an 8–0 record after a loss over the last two years and a 14–3 career mark.

SAINTS (4-5) AT RAIDERS (3-6)
If they're not careful, the Saints' march back into the playoff picture will get lost in the Black Hole.

COLTS (6-3) AT PATRIOTS (6-3)
Hopefully Tom Brady will spark up a rivalry with Andrew Luck like he had with the other guy.

CHARGERS (4-5) AT BRONCOS (6-3)
Peyton Manning threw his 420th TD pass and won his 147th game last week, tying Dan Marino on both all-time lists. Time to pass Dan the Man.

RAVENS (7-2) AT STEELERS (6-3)
Pittsburgh's Emmanuel Sanders was fined $15K for faking an injury. But Ben Roethlisberger's right shoulder injury appears to be very real. Surviving Baltimore without Big Ben will be tough.

BEARS (7-2) AT 49ERS (6-2-1)
Chi-town's Jay Cutler and San Fran's Alex Smith suffered concussions in disappointing games, leaving backups Jason Campbell and Colin Kaepernick in charge until further notice.

Cougs, Sun Devils Desperate for a Win

By John Marshall

The Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — Arizona State has been in a funk over the past month, its offense stuck in neutral as the losses have piled up.

The Sun Devils are at least in a better place than Washington State.

The Cougars have had a tough initial season under Mike Leach, yet to win a Pac-12 game, just two wins overall. Making things worse, star receiver Marquess Wilson quit the team this week, claiming he was physically, emotionally and verbally abused by Washington State's coaches.

Facing a desperate team and trying to play amid a swirling controversy, the Cougars are going to need all the focus they can get Saturday at Sun Devil Stadium.

"I tell you guys, it's not a distraction," Washington State quarterback Jeff Tuel told reporters this week. "We're not worrying about that. We're not going out on the field and going, 'Oh man, Marquess wrote a letter.' It's not happening. It's not reality."

Washington State hired Leach late last year to revitalize a program that had been stuck in mediocrity.

It hasn't happened yet.

While the fan base was excited about the hiring of a coach known for his offensive creativity, Leach has yet to get his Air Raid offense in full gear, leading to a dismal opening season.

The Cougars managed to beat Eastern Washington and UNLV early in the season to open 2-1, but are winless in seven games since the Pac-12 season started, the latest loss a 44-36 setback against No. 17 UCLA after giving up 30 points in the second quarter.

Wilson, the team's leading receiver, also released a letter on Saturday to announce he was quitting the team, saying the coaches would "belittle, intimidate and humiliate us."

Leach has been through this before.

He was fired from Texas Tech after the 2009 season for allegedly ordering a player with a concussion to sit in a storage shed during practice. Leach disputed the allegation, which was not proven, and has sued Texas Tech, contending he was fired so the school could avoid a large payment due him at the end of the year.

Leach denied the latest allegations, but Washington State President Elson Floyd asked the school's athletic department and the Pac-12 Conference to conduct separate investigations into Wilson's allegations.

"I just think he wants to dispel all the falsehoods that surround the thing," Leach said. "I have no problem with that."

Distraction or not, the Cougars will face a tough test in the desert, playing a team that needs a win nearly as bad as they do.

Arizona State got off to a great start in its first year under coach Todd Graham, opening 5-1.

But, just like last season, the Sun Devils tapered off, losing their past four games during a brutal stretch in the schedule.

Arizona State's slide started with a 43-21 loss to then-No. 2 Oregon on Oct. 18, followed by losses to UCLA, Oregon State and Southern California, all ranked teams.

The loss to the Trojans, 38-21 on Saturday, left the Sun Devils on the verge of matching last year's collapse of five straight losses to end the season.

With the seniors playing their last home game and bowl eligibility on the line, they have extra motivation to make sure this season's losing streak ends right here.

"Our guys came in Sunday and know that we don't have an opportunity to compete for a championship as far as the Pac-12," Graham said. "That's disappointing, but we talked a lot about the seniors, talked a lot about this program and where we want this program to be. We have to go get bowl eligible."

The Sun Devils will need to get their sputtering offense going to have a chance.

Arizona State ran Graham's up-tempo scheme efficiently early in the season, churning out yards behind playmaking quarterback Taylor Kelly and a strong running game.

Teams over the past month have figured out how to bottle up the Sun Devils' running game, forcing them to the air. Without much depth at receiver, Arizona State has struggled to produce the big plays it had early in the season and Kelly's numbers have gone down without as much help from the ground game.

"As the year has gone on, we have a lot of depth in our best players as far as playmakers at the running back position," Graham said. "The teams do plan and do look to take away that, and we have struggled to have playmakers on the outside at the receiver position. We have to get better there."

With 11 combined losses in a row, both teams have a lot to work on.

Colorado Looks to Avoid Worst Season in School History

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The Colorado Buffaloes have two chances to avoid the worst season in school history.

The Buffaloes (1-9, 1-6 Pac-12) are in danger of going winless at home unless they can beat Washington on Saturday or Utah next week. It's a tall order for a team that has given up an average of 52 points over its last six games.

Finishing 0-6 at home and having the first 11-loss season in the program's history would add to the misery.

"It would be terribly disappointing, the whole season has been terribly disappointing so far," senior defensive lineman Will Pericak said. "That would just be the cherry on top."

Colorado has struggled in its first two seasons in the Pac-12. Last year, Colorado finished 2-7 in the conference, including a 52-17 loss at Washington. The Buffaloes have allowed at least 30 points in nine games this season and five times opponents have put up at least 50. Last week, Arizona beat the Buffaloes 56-31.

The blowout losses have taken a toll on them.

"I talked to the defense about pride, and that no matter how much they think about or wish or go over it, it isn't going to change what happened on Saturday," head coach Jon Embree said. "But they have an opportunity these next two weeks. I appealed to their pride."

First up for the Buffaloes is bowl-eligible Washington (6-4, 3-3), which has won three straight after a tough start to the conference season. The Huskies practice in the morning during the week so they won't be bothered by the early start, which will be 10:30 a.m. by their body clocks.

"I'm pumped, man. I'm so excited to get up, eat breakfast and go to the stadium and play the game," Washington coach Steve Sarkisian said. "Maybe these morning practices will finally pay off for us here the last couple weeks."

The Huskies have turned things around since blowout losses at Oregon and Arizona sandwiched around a close setback against USC. In last week's 34-15 win over Utah, quarterback Keith Price threw for 277 yards and two touchdowns and Bishop Sankey had 156 yards rushing and two scores.

Although Arizona rushed for 438 yards against Colorado, Sarkisian won't change his offense against the Buffaloes.

"We're not going to try and reinvent the wheel, we're not going to become Arizona and run Arizona's offense this week," he said.

Unlike the Huskies, the Buffaloes aren't making postseason plans. Colorado has not played in a bowl in four years and Embree, in his second season as head coach, is trying to get the Buffaloes back to respectability after years of struggle.

He can take comfort in what happened to the Colorado program after first-year coach Bill McCartney went 1-10 in 1984. Five years later, the Buffaloes were undefeated and playing for a national title, and a year later they shared the crown.

Hot Topics in College Football This Week

By Joe Juliano

The Philadelphia Inquirer

Texas A&M quarterback Johnny Manziel put a charge into what had been a rather humdrum Heisman Trophy watch with his outstanding performance last week in the upset of Alabama.

Kansas State's Collin Klein remains ahead of Manziel and everyone else for now but mainly because the Wildcats have remained unbeaten and on track for the BCS championship game.

There's still room, however, for the unconventional pick, such as Notre Dame linebacker Manti Te'o. If Te'o can put on a dominating performance next week at Southern California, voters will have to consider him.

And yes, we know the trophy's namesake was former Penn player and coach John (don't call me Johnny) Heisman.

The Dreaded FCS

A notable feature of Saturday's schedule is that seven SEC teams, including five members of the current BCS top 10, will face off against opponents from the Football Championship Subdivision (formerly Division I-AA). The excuse, er, reason is because teams such as Alabama (vs. Auburn), Georgia (vs. Georgia Tech) and Florida (vs. Florida State) all have rivalry games next weekend and apparently don't want to expend too much energy or risk injury to star players.

Those three teams will be donating up to $500,000 to the coffers of the grateful FCS foes for the opportunity.

Let the boredom ensue!

No Spear for You

Fans of Southern California are having a hard time getting over the fact that officials from UCLA have requested that the Trojan mascot not plant his sword at midfield of the Rose Bowl — on the UCLA logo — prior to the game. It's really much ado about nothing, especially since USC agreed to the request.

What fans of the Trojans should be worried about is that UCLA is pretty good. Redshirt freshman quarterback Brett Hundley of the Bruins has averaged more than 301 yards of total offense — more than USC's Matt Barkley — and has similar pass efficiency numbers to the pre-season Heisman favorite.

Stanford Won't Duck

While USC and UCLA decide the Pac-12 South champion, top-ranked Oregon will try to punch its ticket in the North for the conference title game and keep its BCS hopes alive.

But Stanford is no pushover, especially now that redshirt freshman quarterback Kevin Hogan has invigorated its offense and goes against a Ducks defense that is banged up.

The key will be the matchup between the Cardinal's rush defense, which leads all FBS teams in rush defense with 58.6 yards allowed per game, and Oregon's rushing attack, which has rolled up an average of 325 yards. The Ducks' Kenjon Barner has gained 1,360 yards on the ground.

Bowl Teams Wanted

With Penn State and Ohio State sitting out the bowl season because of sanctions, the Big Ten already is hurting for teams to contribute to its usually large postseason revenue pie.

The conference, which had 10 bowl teams last season, only has five bowl-eligibles as weekend play begins. While Michigan State (5-5) still can get to six wins, and three other teams have a slim chance, it just hasn't been a good season. The Big Ten finished 26-14 in non-conference games, including 2-8 against Notre Dame plus teams from the SEC, Big 12 and Pac-12.

And three of those losses (ouch!) came against Mid-American Conference opponents.

Hello, Friends

The rivalry between Ohio State and Wisconsin has been building in recent years but gas was thrown on the fire last February when Badgers coach Bret Bielema accused Buckeyes coach Urban Meyer of stealing his oral commitments.

Both men have downplayed the accusation. But a degree of enmity continues as the two teams prepare to meet Saturday.

Ohio State wide receiver and Cardinal O'Hara graduate Corey Brown told the Associated Press, "I don't want to go on record as saying that I hate Wisconsin more than Michigan, but I hate Wisconsin just as much as Michigan."

Worth Watching

If you get ESPN3 on your computer, you may want to push away from the television around 4 p.m. to watch a terrific matchup between the unstoppable offense of No. 19 Louisiana Tech and the granite-like defense of Utah State.

The Bulldogs put up 576.5 yards of offense and 53.4 points per game, having topped 50 in eight of their last 10 games.

The Aggies' defense is ranked in the top 20 nationally in five different categories, including sixth with an average of 13.5 points allowed.

They will have their hands full with Tech quarterback Colby Cameron, who has not thrown an interception in 403 pass attempts this season.

Key Blockers

Sherard Cadogan, a 6-foot-3, 232-pound fullback, has seen spot duty as a redshirt sophomore for Wisconsin. Cadogan and Derek Watt have been lead blockers for Montee Ball, who rushed for 198 of the Badgers' 564 yards last week against Indiana and scored his 77th career touchdown, one off the NCAA FBS record.

The ground game should be busy again against undefeated Ohio State.

WSU Regents Approve New Football Building

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Washington State University football is going to get a new headquarters building.

The WSU Board of Regents on Friday approved a $61 million football operation building to be constructed beginning this month.

The school just completed a $65 million addition for premium seating and a new press box.

The new football operations building will provide coaches offices, along with equipment, training, locker and weight rooms. It will be built on the west end of Martin Stadium.

Construction will begin after the Apple Cup this year and is to be completed by June 2014.

Most of the money to pay the bonds will come from the Pac-12's huge new television contract.

Winterizing: Experts Weigh in on Essential Maintenance

By Carrina Stanton

For The Chronicle

When it comes to getting your home ready for winter, a little bit of preventive maintenance can go a long way.

Just ask Lincoln Anderson, co-owner of Americool in Rochester. He said most people know they should have their fireplaces, furnaces and heat pumps serviced annually to prevent problems. But few, he noted, actually do that.

"Everybody waits until the last second and then we have a cold snap and everybody calls at once and all the heating companies are booked out and then they have to wait with no heat," Anderson said.

Now is the time that many preventive maintenance activities can and should take place around the home, agreed Carl Lieske, Centralia, a general contractor who does both home inspections and home inspection repairs. Lieske and and his wife also own several rental properties. Lieske has been busy lately getting them ready for winter.

There are activities both inside and outside the home that can assure a better winter with less hassle. Inside, Anderson said, you should clean or change your air filters on heating systems. Also, have your heaters, furnaces and fireplaces serviced by a professional. Especially in the case of gas and electric appliances, Anderson said it is not safe for homeowners to inspect the appliance themselves. It is recommended they be checked at least once a year by a qualified professional.

"With heat pumps and electrical furnaces, a lot of times with preventive maintenance you actually catch a problem early and can save yourself a lot of money," Anderson said. "It's cheaper to have somebody come out for maintenance than it would be to pay them to come out in an emergency on a weekend or overtime."

On the outside of the home, Lieske recommends making sure your roof is ready for the rainy season.

Get up on the roof and clear it of any debris and clean leaves from gutters. Check for any damaged areas or missing shingles, which could cause leaks.

While on the roof, take some time to apply a moss killer. Lieske said there are many commercial moss killers that contain bleaching agents that are slowly washed across the roof surface by rainwater and keep moss from growing. Just as effective, Lieske said, is Tide laundry detergent.

"It has that same bleaching agent, which kills all the moss spores," Lieske said.

Another vitally important step is to secure outdoor plumbing fixtures, Lieske said. Older homes will likely require insulator caps for faucets and insulating wrappings of some sort for outdoor spigots. In newer homes, a check valve releases water, eliminating the need for further insulation.

In all cases, outside hoses should be detached, drained and stored. Other outside water sources that will not be used during the winter, such as seasonal hot tubs, should also be drained and winterized. Lieske said hot tub maintenance can be performed by the homeowner but he prefers to call the hot tub companies, which offer winterizing services. Either way, he said properly dealing with water around your home is one of the most important steps to readying for winter, he said.

"In the case of your water faucets and hot tubs, if you don't do this you're talking about damage if we have a freeze," Lieske said.

Humans are not the only ones preparing for winter this time of year, Lieske said. Many rodents and animals such as opossums, raccoons and even cats are also preparing to find refuge from the cold. Many of these animals may attempt to take up winter residence in crawl spaces under homes. Lieske said it is important to make sure access and vents are all secure to avoid unwanted winter residents. But since most of these animals are nocturnal, he cautioned that flushing checking these spaces is best done after nightfall.

"If they get trapped under there it's no fun because it's a really stinky mess to clean up in the spring," Lieske said.

Lieske noted that there are products on the market that completely cover home vents or vent covers that can be closed for the winter but he, personally, does not believe they are a good idea. While the idea of keeping the crawl spaces of the home warmer while keeping out pests is nice, Lieske said he has run into far too many homeowners who end up forgetting to open the vents in the spring. The danger of having the vents closed is the potential to trap moisture under the home and cause dry rot or mold.

And finally, Lieske said, winterizing for him always includes raking leaves, cleaning out flower beds, and winterizing the lawn with a product such as Scott's Winter Feed. But he noted that if homeowners are short on time, this step is much less important than many of the others.

"It's not going to cause damage if you don't do that but it makes a difference in the spring," Lieske said.

Biological Pollutants in Your Home?

By James and Morris Carey

Biological pollutants can travel through the air "with the greatest of ease" and are often invisible. The most common indoor pollutants include:

- Animal Dander (minute scales from hair, feathers, or skin)
- Dust Mite and Cockroach parts
- Infectious agents in the form of bacteria or viruses
- Pollen

Two conditions are essential to enhance and support biological growth:

- Nutrients such as food scraps, dust and construction materials such as wood, wallboard, and insulation. All contain nutritional elements that allow biological pollutants to grow.
- Constant moisture with no ventilation is another major factor. Even slight amounts of moisture left unattended can become a major breeding ground.

One or both of these conditions can exist anywhere in the home but are most prevalent in the kitchen, bathroom, the laundry and other damp locations such as a wet (or flooded) basement or crawl space.

There is no simple or cheap way to sample the air in your home to determine the level of all biological pollutants. Experts suggest that sampling for biological pollutants is not a useful problem-solving tool. Even if you had your home tested, it is almost impossible to know which biological pollutant(s) cause various symptoms or health problems. Actually, the amount of most biological substances required to cause disease is unknown and varies from one person to the next.

All of us are exposed to biological pollutants. Some people simply don't experience health problems, while others experience severe reactions. Infectious diseases caused by bacteria and viruses, such as flu, measles,

TIP OF THE DAY
HANDS FREE LIGHTING

On this day in 1966 "Star Trek" made its debut. For years, Captain Kirk, Mister Spock and the crew of the Starship Enterprise have used nifty gadgets like phasers to battle Klingons, and beamed themselves up, into and out of trouble — again and again. For 79 episodes and countless re-runs, their futuristic tools and clever ingenuity have shown many a mortal man how to operate in a pinch and how to get things done with technology. For instance, just by watching, we learned to "beam ourselves up" when working in tight, dark spaces flat on our back, needing both hands and some light. We simply take a low-tech empty soup can and stand the flashlight in the can — moving and directing the beam to provide work light exactly where we need it, hands-free.

ABHS Owner Again Donates Turkeys to Salvation Army Program for Needy

By Paul Beatty
ABHS

American Behavioral Health Systems owner Craig Phillips and his wife, Lisa Phillips, will continue their tradition of supporting the local Salvation Army's Holiday Dinner Basket Program for needy families.

Craig Phillips
ABHS owner

Phillips is donating 50 turkeys, which were dropped off Wednesday by the ABHS staff. This makes sure they are on hand for the Thanksgiving holiday food basket distribution.

ABHS has a substance abuse treatment center on Washington Avenue in Chehalis. Its headquarters is in Spokane.

Phillips said, "It's especially important for those who can help and support the local community to do what you can to make sure all of our friends and neighbors can enjoy their families during this time of year."

Phillips will also donate another 50 turkeys to the Salvation Army for their Christmas Holiday food basket program in December.

ABHS, through their Community Assistance Program, helped the Salvation Army last year, filling the baskets and preparing them for distribution, and this year are set to help for the Christmas Holiday.

The CAP program has been delivering hundreds of hours of free labor to non-profit and government agencies in Lewis County.

Clients volunteer to work in the community but must meet certain criteria prior to becoming eligible for volunteer duty. All clients participating in the CAP program are supervised by ABHS staff, and there is no cost to those receiving the free labor.

So far the CAP program has assisted the Southwest Washington Fairgrounds, Providence's retirement and assisted living facility, community gardens and Visiting Nurses.

CAP even split firewood for a local church that donates it to low income families who use it to heat their homes during the winter.

Phillips encouraged other local businesses or individuals to give what they can this season. Phillips said he understands that times are tough for everyone, but any little contribution you can make, food, cash or even your time, will certainly be appreciated.

Rhode Island Boy Seeks Help With Project on Washington

To the editor:

I am writing to you to say hello from the smallest state in the union, Rhode Island. I am a seventh-grade student at Goff Junior High School in Pawtucket, R.I. In my geography class, I'm doing a semester-long project. I chose to do my report on Washington.

Could you please publish this letter in your newspaper so your readers can help me with my paper? If your readers could send me information, pictures and tourist information, it would help me so much with my project. Your readers can send it right to my school.

Thank you for your help with my report and project.

Sincerely,

Jahsiah K.

THE LONG VIEW: History of the Cowlitz Indian Tribe

The Epic Life of Settler Simon Plamondon

Simon Plamondon was born April 1, 1800, at Francois Du Lac, District of 3-Rivers, Province of Quebec, Canada, son of Jean Baptiste and Catherine Gill Plamondon. He grew up on an island in the St. Lawrence River near Montreal. Abenaki tribal records reveal that the Simon Plamondon family in Quebec carried a certain amount of Abenaki blood quantum; consequently, today's descendants of Simon also have a percentage of Abenaki blood.

By Roy I. Rochon Wilson

Twice each year a friend visited the family home, bringing tales life as a trapper in the west. Young Simon was captivated by these stories and desired to follow the trail. His family attempted to dissuade him, but he began as a boy trapping small creatures. At an early age he set out to follow the footsteps of his friend. He spent some time on the Missouri and Mississippi rivers, then with two companions, followed the trail to the Columbia. After crossing the Rocky Mountains the young men traded their six ponies for a canoe and continued down the river as far as the portage of The Dalles. From there, Simon went on to Fort George (Astoria). Passing the mouths of the Lewis and Cowlitz Rivers, he sensed a strong desire to explore them some day.

Simon Plamondon arrived at Fort Astoria in 1816 from Canada with his older brother Joseph, and was hired as a trapper at the age of 16. The voyageurs who were his companions seldom had plans to return to their old homes. When they had been a good many years with the company and no longer relished the hardships of the trail, they were encouraged to retire to farms. Most of them went to French Prairie, near Gervais, Ore. Simon went there for a short time, but he continued to long for the Cowlitz country. He made his first trip up the Cowlitz in 1818 and was captured by Chief Scanewa, who was a Lower Cowlitz chief.

His great-granddaughter, Mrs. Anna Catlin, told the story this way: "It was while he was on an exploratory trip up the Cowlitz River that he met Chief Scanewa at the present site of Toledo. It was strictly unplanned. As he was traveling up the river with his eyes alert for signs of inhabitants, he spotted an opening in the dense growth at the river's edge at what is now Toledo. It appeared to be the only landing. Eager to see what lay beyond, he drew up his canoe and disembarked.

"Immediately he was surrounded by a number of braves who guarded this entrance to Chief Scanewa's domain. He was taken to the chief who made it quite plain that he was expected to stay. Scanewa admired the splendid physique and recognized the fine personality of Simon. He then and there schemed to keep him in his tribe."

Simon gained his freedom by promising Chief Scanewa that he would bring back trade goods to exchange for furs. Two armed warriors accompanied him to make sure that he would come back. When the trio reached Astoria, Simon requested that his guards be shown every courtesy. Then with trinkets and blankets, he returned to Cowlitz Prairie and joined in the activities of the tribe. Although he was frequently away on long journeys, he was under surveillance for a long time.

After some time, Chief Scanewa saw the advantages of binding Simon to the tribe with ties less harsh than he had been imposing. "I have found you to be a man of your word," he said, and offered Simon one of his three daughters in marriage.

He married Thas-e-muth, a daughter of Scanewa, in 1821. The marriage was performed by the bride's father, Chief Scanewa, in accordance with the Cowlitz Sun Rites in a grove of trees on the north bank of the Cowlitz River.

Sun dancing in the Cowlitz Tribe was quite different from the Sun dancing of the plains tribes. Sun Dancing was a time of celebration wherein the Sun Dancers would dance in an open field for three days.

In the custom of the times, Simon was gifted with 20 braves of his own by the father of the bride. Later, when missionaries came to the prairie, Simon's wife was baptized and named Veronica. When Chief Scanewa died in 1826, Simon inherited the bulk of his property and made his permanent home on Cowlitz Prairie. The site of his home was on the current Plamondon Road near Toledo.

Four children were born to this marriage: Sophie, Simon Jr., Theresa and Marianne. Theresa became Mrs. Elie Sareault, the mother of John Sareault who later became chief of the Cowlitz Tribe. The current Sareault Road on Cowlitz prairie is named after this family.

In 1827 Simon Plamondon staked out a 640-acre claim on the Cowlitz River near the present site of Toledo. By 1867, records indicate that he had sold nearly 400 acres of that land to non-Indians

His wife died in childbirth in 1828, and he was so grief stricken that he went to the Yukon for two or three years. From time to time he returned to his farm and his children. He remained on the Hudson's Bay payroll to as late as 1837. Only gradually did he break away from his life as a voyageur.

In 1838, the Hudson Bay Co. established the Puget Sound Agricultural Co. as an agricultural subsidiary. They opened a 4,000 acre farm at Cowlitz Landing under the supervision of Simon Plamondon.

Meanwhile, other French-Canadian company employees took up land: Antoine Gobar and Marcel Bernier soon after Plamondon, Oliver Bouchard at La Camas Prairie, Joseph St. Germain at Jackson Prairie, Louis LaDue at LaDue Prairie and Pierre Charles at Boisfort Prairie. Many of today's Cowlitz trace their ancestry back to these early French-Cowlitz Indian families.

These settlers pondered the problem of rearing their children in the Catholic faith, the religion they had known in Eastern Canada. Three different years, they and members of the French Prairie Colony sent petitions to the nearest Catholic mission at the Red River of the North in Manitoba. Finally, Simon Plamondon made a pilgrimage east and persuaded the church authorities to send the Rev. Francis Blanchet and the Rev. Modeste Demers to the Pacific Northwest with instructions to found a mission on the Cowlitz, "Where it would not be on the ground whose ownership was disputed by Great Britain and the United States."

He married Emilie Fenlay in 1837. She was a daughter of Peter Bercier and Josephte Cree. There were five children from this marriage. His only white wife was Louise Henrietta Pelletier, a niece of Father Blanchet. This marriage took place in 1848, and there were two children from this marriage before they separated.

Simon and Kitty Tillakish lived together in a common-law marriage, and had one child.

Evelyn Byrnes' grandmother was Mary Ann St. Germain, Simon Plamondon's youngest daughter. Evelyn descended from Simon on both her mother and her father's sides of the family. Mary Ann St. Germain became quite indignant when a supposedly authentic document said that her father had been married 19 times and had 73 children.

"Soisante dix et trois enfants!" she exclaimed, "Et mon pere!"

"As a matter of fact, he was married but three times and had eight children all told, and all his descendants would not number 70." She claimed that he was 99 years and 9 months old when he died.

TODAY IN LEWIS COUNTY-AREA HISTORY

1906 — Raging Cowlitz Decimates All in Its Path

The Cowlitz River was a raging torrent, carrying houses, barns, logs and other things down in a major flood. Many families were homeless and had saved only a few belongings from their ruined homes and were temporarily quartered with friends on higher ground.

The Northern Pacific Bridge across the Cowlitz at Olequa was washed out just as the eastbound freight train, No. 54, reached it at 4:30 a.m.

The Cowlitz was 18 feet above its usual height and was five feet above a point where passengers could be transferred across the stream.

"The Castle Rock waterworks have been washed out and the shingle companies have suffered heavy losses," reports indicated.

1935 — WPA Begins Three Local Projects

Three new Works Progress Administration projects began in Lewis County.

"At Dryad, eight men will be employed on projects submitted by the school district," The Centralia Daily Chronicle wrote. "The work entails general school repairs including painting, calsoming and other repairs.

"Fifteen men will find work Monday at Winlock where a road will be constructed around the athletic field and the field itself will be resurfaced.

"At Randle ten men will go to work on a project which includes the laying of sewers and sidewalks and resurfacing the athletic field."

1981 — Home Located for New Jail

Lewis County's new jail would be located just south of the courthouse annex, a county committee announced. The county had been using jail facilities on the fourth floor of the courthouse. A state commission had decided the new jail would have 68 beds, the same amount as in the old jail, but some local officials said the new jail needed to be bigger.

"We're going to see overcrowding with 10 years, without a doubt," said County Prosecuting Attorney John Panesko, chairman of the county committee. County Commissioner Harold Cooper agreed, but said there were financial constraints to building a full capacity jail.

1985 — Future County Park Sited in Toledo

Dave Schilperoort, county parks and recreation director, announced a new family-oriented county park would be located in the Cowlitz Basin.

Through a grant from the state Interagency Committee for Outdoor Recreation and county match money, 19 acres of land would be purchased from Clifford Sorensen, of Toledo. The park also would include 17 additional acres and a pond leased free from the Department of Natural Resources.

2000 — PDA Earns $30,000 From Freak Night

The Southwest Washington Public Development Authority announced that Freak Night held at the Southwest Washington Fairgrounds generated $30,000.

"I believe our board was generally pleased with the outcome," said Dwight Butt, SWWPDA executive director, "I think they are glad it's over. Obviously, there were certain things they were not pleased with. The biggest annoyance of the event, without a doubt, was the noise."

The event drew 11,000 young fans, while also generating 93 noise complaints.

Sheriff John McCroskey also was attacked by one of the attendees.

2005 — Umpire Yoke Honored

Dewey Yoke, 73, an umpire in the Twin Cities for 35 years, with 55 years total experience, was awarded the Umpire Award for high school baseball by the Washington State Baseball Coaches Association.

He was a member of the Hall of Fame for softball umpires in North America Fastpitch. He also was given the title as an "elite umpire" by the American Softball Association. Only 300 umpires had been given that designation out of 40,000 eligible individuals.

Pollutants: Water in Your Home Can Come From Many Sources

chicken pox, and tuberculosis, can be spread indoors. Poor air circulation can promote this spread. Some bacteria and viruses thrive in buildings and circulate through indoor ventilation systems. Open windows during the day and let fresh air in and bad air out. Keep in mind that toxins in the air can damage a variety of organs and tissues in the body, including the liver, the central nervous system, the digestive tract, and the immune system.

You can take action to help remove sources of biological pollutants that will help to rid your home of these unwanted microscopic guests — and to prevent their return. Begin by touring your household. Follow your eyes and nose. Vacuum, scrub, ventilate and dry out wet or damp areas.

Water in your home can come from many sources. It can enter by leaking or by seeping through basement floors and in crawl spaces. Showers or cooking can add moisture to the air. The amount of moisture that the air in your home can hold depends on the temperature of the air. As the temperature goes up, the air is able to hold more moisture that can encourage biological pollutants to grow. Here are a few things you can do to safeguard your home against biological growth:

• Fix leaks and seepage.

• Put a plastic cover over dirt crawlspaces to prevent moisture from coming in from the ground. Be sure crawlspaces are well-ventilated.

• Use exhaust fans in bathrooms and kitchens to remove moisture to the outside (not into the attic). • Vent your clothes dryer to the outside.

• Turn off certain appliances (such as humidifiers or kerosene heaters) if you notice moisture on windows and other surfaces.

• Use dehumidifiers and air conditioners, especially in hot, humid climates, to reduce moisture in the air, but be sure that the appliances themselves don't become sources of biological pollutants.

• Raise the temperature of cold surfaces where moisture condenses.

• Use insulation or storm windows. (A storm window installed on the inside works better than one installed on the outside)

• Open doors between rooms (especially doors to closets which may be colder than the rooms) to increase circulation. Circulation carries heat to the cold surfaces.

• Increase air circulation by using fans and by moving furniture from wall corners to promote air and heat circulation.

• Be sure that your house has a source of fresh air and can expel excessive moisture from the home.

• Pay special attention to carpet on concrete floors. Carpet can absorb moisture and serve as a place for biological pollutants to grow.

• Use area rugs which can be taken up and washed often.

• In certain climates, if carpet is to be installed over a concrete floor, it may be necessary to use a vapor barrier (plastic sheeting) over the concrete and cover that with sub-flooring to prevent moisture buildup.

Moisture problems and their solutions differ from one climate to another. The Northeast is cold and wet, the Southwest is hot and dry, the South is hot and wet, and the Western Mountain states are cold and dry. All of these regions can have moisture problems. For example, evaporative coolers used in the Southwest can encourage the growth of biological pollutants. In other hot regions, the use of air conditioners which cool the air too quickly may prevent the air conditioners from running long enough to remove excess moisture from the air.

ADVICE: Dear Abby

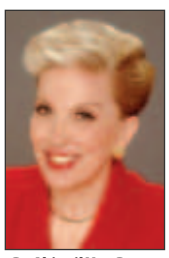
Man's Seldom-Seen Girlfriend Fails to Measure up for Mom

DEAR ABBY: My son, "James," is 25 and has been dating his girlfriend for three years. He has brought her over only five times.

This is his first girlfriend, and I think he is getting way too serious and thinking about marriage. While she seems nice, I do not think she's the right girl for my son to marry. James has not talked to me about marrying her just yet, but I think he knows I'm not a fan.



By Abigail Van Buren

My question is, do I talk to my son about how I feel, or just bite my tongue and let him make his own decision, even though I think he'd be making a big mistake? Or should I say something and risk ruining our relationship?

James isn't the easiest person to talk to, especially when you don't agree with him. I'd hate to see him marry her and wind up divorced, knowing I might have been able to stop it. — MOTHER KNOWS BEST IN NEW YORK

DEAR M.K.B.: At 25 years old, your son is an adult. A three-year relationship is not a whirlwind courtship. James and his girlfriend may already have an inkling about how you feel about her — which is why you have seen them only five times in three years.

If you want any relationship at all with your son in the future, do not interfere. Let him work this out for himself. He may be your son, but he's no longer a child, so don't treat him like one.

DEAR ABBY: My wife thinks it's improper for my parents to include their grandson — our 8-year-old son — in their Christmas card photo. He's their only grandchild.

I have seen people include pictures of their pets, cars, boats and all sorts of other things in their photo cards. So why not grandchildren? My parents have pointed out that this is the only opportunity for their friends to see their grandchild, but my wife thinks he should be included only in OUR Christmas card. What do you think? —PULLED IN TWO DIRECTIONS

DEAR PULLED: I think your wife is selfish, judgmental, and should be ashamed of herself for wanting to deprive your parents in this way.

Now I have a question for you: What's her problem? It's obvious that she has one where your folks are concerned.

DEAR ABBY: I had a great friendship that I threw away. "Shane" and I got along really well and, frankly, we ventured beyond friendship multiple times when we lived near each other. I think the "relationship" was good for both of us. Then I lost my temper during a trivial argument, and now he won't talk to me. We live in different states now, so the phone is the only way for us to contact each other.

Abby, I know the falling-out is my fault. He said something that shouldn't have set me off the way it did. How do I fix this? I miss talking to him, and he won't answer my calls anymore. — REGRETTING MY TEMPER

DEAR REGRETTING: It appears Shane has not only moved away but also has moved on. When you were neighbors, the friends-with-benefits arrangement might have influenced him to forgive you. However, because that "leverage" is gone, you should move on, too. If he is unwilling to talk things out, there really isn't a way to "fix" it.

And now, a life lesson: The next time you're about to say something you might be sorry for later, remember that you can't "unring a bell" and that it cost you a friendship.
