Redistricting commission comes to Suffolk County

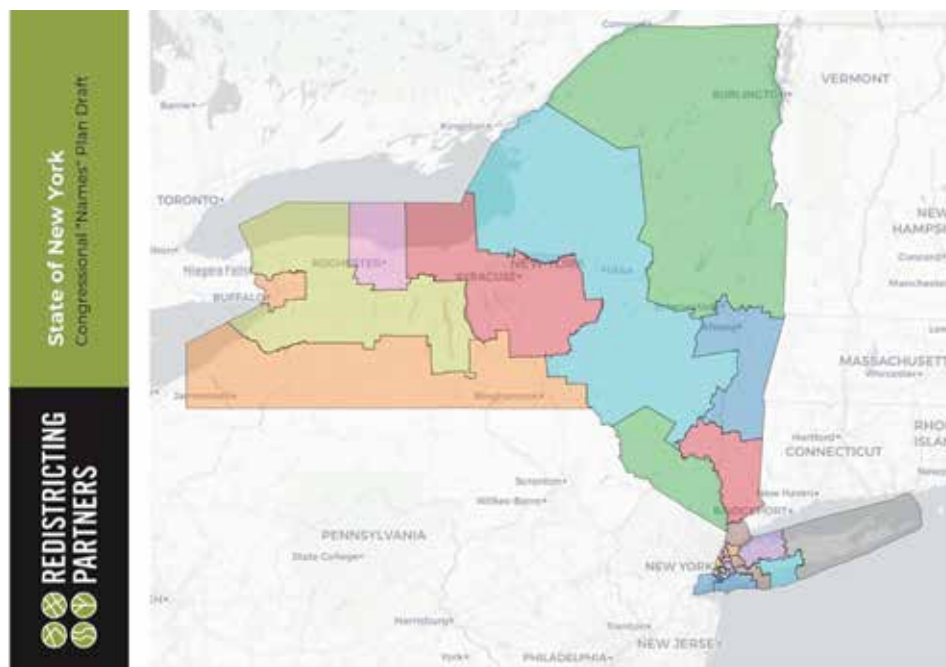

Last chance to submit comments before final plans

MARIANA DOMINGUEZ

On Tuesday, Nov. 23, the New York State Independent Redistricting Commission held their final in-person public hearing at Stony Brook University's Charles B. Wang Center.

Over the past few weeks, the commission has traveled across New York State collecting feedback on the map proposals that were released by the commission on Sept. 15. The commission released two sets of maps on Sept. 15. The "Letters" maps were the ones proposed by Democrats on the commission, while the "Names" maps were the ones proposed by Republicans.

At the meeting, when map proposals were released, David Imamura, chairman of the New York Independent Redistricting Commission, said: "The draft plans we release today attempt to incorporate the public input we received, but they should be considered only what they are called in the [state] Constitution—drafts. [...] I would be the first to say these plans are imperfect, and that, based on public input, they can, should, and will change."

The Redistricting Commission is meant to be a bipartisan group with appointees from both parties and two members chosen by the six appointees. However, the decision to release two sets of maps back in the fall demonstrated that they have a long way to go in order to find a consensus.

Back in 2014, voters in New York voted yes on a proposition that created a constitutional amendment "to implement historic changes with the intent to achieve a fair and readily transparent process by which to redraw the lines of state legislative and congressional districts." The redistricting commission was created to aid in this endeavor.

On Nov. 2 of 2021, New Yorkers rejected Proposition 1, which was an amendment to redistricting changes in New York. By rejecting the proposition, the vote threshold for passing the redistricting plans stays the same, instead of a simple majority vote in the legislature passing the plan. The proposal also pushed to make the deadlines for the commission to submit their plans earlier. Instead, the deadline stays the same at Jan. 15, 2022. However, at the public hearing on Nov. 23, Imamura noted:

“I think I speak for all of my fellow commissioners when I say that we, in order to ensure that state board of elections have time to implement our plans, we must get lines to the legislator earlier that the statutory deadlines that are in the state constitution.

“This process has been enormously challenging; with delays in the census caused by COVID, delays in the funding, this process, which is supposed to take a year, has instead been compressed into four months.”

The public hearings are being conducted around the state so that commissioners can get input from residents about the proposed maps.

“The reality is, we don’t all live in the areas that we’re drawing these maps for, so the opportunity to inform our position with regards to these maps and through these hearings is extraordinarily important,” vice-chairman of the commission Jack Martins, said.

One point that was brought up by members of the public during the hearing was the dividing lines in the maps tends to split up towns unfairly. For example, in the Letters draft plan for the Senate and the Town of Islip is broken up.

One resident who spoke on the issue was Jay Schoenfeld of Setauket. Schoenfeld spoke about how splitting up certain towns means that they get less attention from two representatives, instead of undivided attention from one.

“And while it sounds nice to say you have two senators helping our community, the reality is that the level of concern usually gets split between two officers and fails to produce the volume needed in either one of them to command the center of time, interest and attention,” Schoenfeld said.

“In looking at the maps, I didn’t think either of the plans satisfactorily address this problem. They just kind of move the dividing line somewhere.”

The maps are available to view at nyirc.org and the commission is asking the public to submit written comments to them so that they can better understand the communities affected before they begin the process of submitting their final plan. Comments should be submitted by Monday, Dec. 6 for them to be read and considered by the committee. ■

Stitched with love

A young entrepreneur with heart from East Islip

MARIANA DOMINGUEZ

While most high school seniors are busy enough with classes and extracurriculars, East Islip student Emily Blair decided to add on to that list by creating her own small business that gives back.

Last October, Blair began making crochet blankets for fun with a friend after seeing tutorials on the social media app TikTok.

"I never crocheted until I first made that blanket. I came across a video on TikTok and I kept seeing them because it was very popular, and then I called over my friend and we both got yarn and we both made a blanket together, and I just kept making them," Blair said.

She gave close friends and family the blankets as Christmas gifts last year and they were a big hit. Her mother suggested that she could sell her blankets. So, in January of this year, Blair began selling her blankets with 20 percent of the profits going towards local nonprofits.

When the business first began, Blair received orders through her mother's Facebook page. Her mom would post about the blankets and then people would message her orders. Today, Blair has upgraded to her own website, blairsblanket.com.

"I would say it's a lot more organized than having a Google Sheets with people messaging me," Blair said with a laugh about her upgraded system.

Blair's blankets are made out of chenille yarn and are made by hand. She sits on the ground and uses her hands to bring the stitches through each other. The smallest blanket she offers is 40 inches by 40 inches, while the largest she offers is 70 inches by 70 inches. Blair said it varies on how long it takes her to make a blanket.

"If I'm in a really good mood it can take four hours for a small blanket, but the large blankets sometimes take me a couple days, and I just stop and I come back later," Blair said.

"It takes up a lot of time, but it's something that I'm passionate about and I make the time for it."

A large part of Blair's business is her commitment to donating 20 percent of her sales revenue to charity. Currently, Blair donates to the Suffolk County Women's Association to End Food Insecurity (SCWATEFI), an organization that her mother, Patricia Blair, helped found. The organization is a group of women working towards eradicating hunger on Long Island.

"She is the best person I know," Blair said of her mother. "She does so much for the community. She's a lawyer, too, so she's extremely busy, so I think that's how I get some of my time-management skills for school and for this. This is her second organization that she's founded and she just wants to make the community better."

When Blair first founded her business, she donated money to E.J. Autism and raised $2,100 for the group.

Coming up, Blair, who is a member of the Islip Arts Council, will be teaching a "No Hook Hand Crocheting" class at the Islip Arts Council Gallery in the Westfield South Shore Mall. Blair is running two sessions of the class on Dec. 4 and 5 from 2 to 5 p.m. Blair said she wanted to teach classes on how to make the blankets so she could teach people tips and tricks that she wished she had known when starting out.

"I've found that the ways shown on TikTok aren't always the best way to do it," Blair said. "When I first came across those videos, some of them were really helpful, but others just didn't address some points that I thought were important."

Going forward, Blair said she loves what she is doing and is constantly buying yarn to make her blankets.

"I basically live at Michael's now," Blair said with a laugh. "I know how to drive to three places: work, school and Michael's." ■

Fundraiser for FAHN

Help local Long Island family with your donation

MARIANA DOMINGUEZ

If you're looking for an amazing cause to donate to this holiday season, look no further. Kyle Engblom's Fight FAHN Fall Fundraiser is a great place to donate to help a local East Islip family.

Kyle Engblom has FAHN (fatty acid hydroxylase-associated neurodegeneration), a progressive genetic disorder. Around the age of 3, Engblom began showing symptoms of the rare disease. Now at 22, Engblom has lost mobility and is confined to a wheelchair. He has problems with his breath support, which affects his speech, and has severe vision loss. FAHN leads to deterioration of myelin in the brain and spinal cord, causing electric impulses to be slow, which leads to decreased motor functions and also affects brain function. Individuals with FAHN lose the ability to walk, have vision loss, seizures, and problems with speech, chewing and swallowing. No treatment is available and most individuals affected with FAHN die in their 20s.

To help Engblom and others with FAHN, friends and family have a goal to raise $25,000 through Dec. 4. The money will go towards potentially lifesaving gene therapy research by Dr. Sunita Venkateswaran of Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario and Prof. Ahad Rahi.

To culminate the fundraiser on Saturday, Dec. 4, friends and family will be celebrating at Fatty McGees in East Islip. All are invited to attend. There will be raffle baskets and a 50/50 raffle. Gina Engblom, Kyle's mother, said Kyle will be at the restaurant to greet everyone outside, but will be unable to go inside for the celebration due to COVID-19. ■

How you can help

Give a check or cash to the family and friends of Engblom collecting (or come to the fundraiser). Make checks payable to CHEO Foundation, Memo: Kyle/FAHN. Venmo @Christina Talamo (for Kyle/FAHN). Go to gofundme.com and search "Kyle Engblom's Fight FAHN Fall Fundraiser."

Back in the summer, Engblom won a specialized bike that allowed him to enjoy the great outdoors.

A prince of a guy

BY JORDAN STANKOVICH

Varsity wrestling legend Guy Leggio grew up in Bay Shore and coached at East Islip. As an asset to both the Bay Shore and East Islip community, Coach Leggio is a member of the Suffolk Sports Hall of Fame as well as the National Wrestling Hall of Fame.

EAST ISLIP Leggio's father, another high school wrestling icon, Gombatista "Jumper" Leggio, who coached wrestling at Ronkonkoma, also is a Suffolk Sports Hall of Famer. Guy Leggio was the East Islip varsity wrestling coach for 26 seasons, posting a career record of 270-15-5 and leading the team for over a quarter century during the years 1990 to 2015. Leggio coached a plethora of athletes achieving tremendous personal success, coaching 85 league champions, 273 league place-winners, along with 73 county place-winners. In 2006, Leggio guided East Islip to the Suffolk County Championship ranking No. 1 among Long Island wrestling teams. East Islip paid homage to the iconic coach, naming the wrestling room the Guy Leggio Wrestling Room for all his indelible accolades. Leggio has been a member of the Bay Shore Volunteer Fire Department for nearly four decades.

IB: What are some of your best memories that stand out the most as a wrestler growing up and as a coach?

Leggio: As a wrestler growing up, I was a part of Bay Shore High School. I was the captain of the wrestling team, probably one of the best teams Bay Shore ever had. Also, I had my dad as my coach. My father was a legend in the sport. I wrestled for the Navy on the Navy team, but I really found my niche in coaching. I think coaching was the way to go. I was a good wrestler and really liked it, and being a coach was more important to me, I think, and the way I made a difference more in wrestling was as a coach.

IB: How has high school sports changed since you were a student-athlete? Is anything done differently by coaches and by what is taught?

Leggio: I think today the kids have too much to do, so as kids have too much to do, like everything is offered between phones and all the technology. They have to focus and I think that some of the coaches have to change the old-fashioned way of, you know, what hard knocks a little bit of that stuff. Discipline is key. I think we've lost a little bit of the discipline along the way, but I think the technology in sports is better.

IB: I know you have been a volunteer firefighter in Bay Shore for over 35 years. Tell me about your dedication in serving the Bay Shore community and what is most rewarding about being a volunteer firefighter?

Leggio: Being a volunteer firefighter is the most rewarding thing you can ever do for your community. You know, you wake up in the middle of the night and you go to fires and everything like that. My son is now a lieutenant, so I was a captain, all that kind of stuff, and I race for the fire department. I've met a world of people through racing. The volunteer fire department community is probably the most amazing piece of volunteerism that anybody can be involved in. Because you learn, you meet, and you never forget.

IB: Outside of Boomer Esiason and Tony Grafanino, name some of the most talented athletes you've seen come from East Islip.

Leggio: A wrestler that was just in the Division 1 national finals last year, Della-vecchia. Ted Gregory, who was another football guy; Rob Vacarro, one of my guys who was a four-time county champion; Dave Ingram, a state champion, and many others are far as a coach, Mr. Champion. I always remember Old Man Champion because me and him would butt heads and in the end, we all became friends.

IB: What was the best advice you would say you were given and grasped the most throughout your entire career?

Leggio: The word "can't" doesn't exist.

IB: What are you most proud of in your coaching career?

Leggio: You see, what I give to kids is my love for the sport. And you know what, I build bridges and we make things better. One thing I gave the kids is they never had a wrestling room to wrestle with in East Islip because it was always overshadowed. I built it with my own hands. I am a bricklayer and got a lot of people. We put it together. A lot of friends came—a bunch of parents, Mr Vacarro.

We poured the foundation, we botched the walls, we built it, we landed the steel, we did everything, and we gave them a facility. That's why they are so good at this point in our wrestling. You know what, you do something, it'll come. I was very glad. And they named it after me after I left, so it was very nice.

IB: What are you most proud of outside anything you've accomplished in sports?

Leggio: That's a good question. Well, we're always proud of our family. My dad, my brothers were tight, and my wife. We've been married 31 years. That's a long time. She deserves more credit than me.

IB: What is the best advice you have to a kid on Long Island reading this article who has a passion for playing sports?

Leggio: When you say the word "sports," I think you should play every sport and not be entangled in one. We're not all going to be Division 1 wrestlers. We should all learn to become, you know, a good person. Learn what you can. Each different sport can give you a special value. Do your homework, don't forget, do all your stuff, be a good student, be a good participant, always give 110 percent. ■

Collected giving for the holidays

In the spirit of the holidays, Islip High School students, faculty and staff came together to support families in the community who are in need. The National Honor Society, World Language Honor Society, Athletes Helping Athletes and Interact Club held a holiday drive and assembled baskets that will help families through the extended holiday season.

In addition to filling the festively decorated baskets with nonperishable items and items for a complete Thanksgiving meal, staff and faculty also donated gift

HISTORICAL CORNER

Each week, reporter and history-lover Mariana Dominguez visits a historical location on the South Shore. This week she visited The Heckscher Museum of Art in Huntington.

The Heckscher Museum of Art

2 Prime Avenue, Huntington
Open Thurs.-Sun. 12 p.m. - 5 p.m., reservations recommended
$5 suggested admission, visits are limited to one hour/ heckscher.org

Having never been to the Heckscher Museum of Art, I thought it would be apt that I visited for the museum's current celebration of 100 years, "Tracing History, Inspiring the Future." The exhibit is on display until Jan. 9, 2022.

The current exhibition at the museum traces its history over the last 100 years and highlights events that helped shape the museum and its collection.

The museum opened in 1920 and was funded by August and Anna Aktins Heckscher. The Heckschers also donated the museum's founding collection. When the museum first opened, it focused "solely on European and American art" and did not include modern art. The art from this first phase of the museum is more traditional and includes lots of landscapes and European portraits.

One section of the exhibit is dedicated to some of George Grosz's art. Grosz fled Nazi Germany and lived and worked in Huntington from 1947 until 1959. In a brochure, the museum noted that Grosz's art "satirized the rich and powerful and criticized violence." The museum acquired Grosz's painting, "Eclipse of the Sun" (1926), through a crowdfunding campaign and it is currently on display for the 100 years exhibit.

The next section the museum highlights was the time period from 1969-1988. During this period, the museum sold unrelated works and worked towards buying significant paintings. It was also during this period that the museum began to embrace inclusivity by exhibiting more work by women, African Americans and Asian Americans.

A section of the exhibit I really enjoyed was about Arthur Dove and Helen Torr. Dove and Torr were American modernists who lived in Huntington and Centerport. The museum acquired their Cen-terport home in 1998 and preserved it as a historical site. I was first introduced to Dove and Torr by local artist Holly Gordon, who recently released a book with Ward Hooper. The book, titled "The Brush/Lens Collaboration," traces how Gordon and Hooper were inspired by the same landscapes and areas as Dove and Torr and the similarities between their work, despite the almost 100 years separating the pairs. In their current exhibit, the museum has paintings by Dove and Torr as well as some of their personal items and supplies.

More recently, the museum began collecting modern art and focusing advancement on diversity, equity and inclusion.

One thing I loved about this gorgeous museum is how accessible it is. All of the exhibits are on one floor and the museum is the perfect size so as not to be overwhelming, but still filled with lots to see. It is a quiet, almost meditative place located in a beautiful area. It is suggested that time slots be booked in advance as the museum is limiting the amount of visitors due to COVID. It is very easy to book in advance on the museum's website.

Coming up, the museum is hosting a Family Hour on Sunday on Dec. 5 from 1 to 2 p.m. and a docent in the galleries on Sunday, Dec. 12 from 1 to 2 p.m.

More information and registration can be found at heckscher.org/calendar. ■

Upon entrance to the Heckscher Museum of Art, visitors can read through a timeline of the museum's 100 years.

West Islip Symphony Orchestra to make its return

On Friday, Dec. 3, the West Islip Symphony Orchestra will make its big return after nearly a year and a half since their last performance due to the COVID-19 pandemic. According to their website, the West Islip Symphony Orchestra's goal is to "educate and perpetuate the interest in classical music." Paul Little, the orchestra's conductor, said the musicians are eager to perform and that the upcoming concert in December will feature Beethoven's Symphony No. 5.

"One of the things that the pandemic did was it took the one thing that we as human beings are good at, and that's being together, and it took that away from us," Little said.

Little said the approximately 50-person orchestra is composed of amateurs, semi-professionals, and professional musicians. Little has been conductor of the orchestra since 2018. According to the symphony's website, Little is a conducting student of Timothy Topolewski and graduated from the Crane School of Music in 2003. Little has played in the North Shore Symphony, the Nassau Pops Symphony Orchestra and the Dowling College and Five Towns College symphony orchestras. As a conductor, Little regularly appears at the Community Church of Great Neck and Mineola's Edge City Church. In 2008, he appeared as a guest conductor of the Valley Stream Central High School District's all-district orchestra. In 2020, Little conducted the NMEA All County String Orchestra. musician, he has also performed in, directed, been the technical advisor and conducted the music ensemble of over 40 musical theater productions throughout Long Island.

Little is the vice president of the Legato Foundation, a music nonprofit dedicated to curating, developing, and promoting classical music on Long Island. The organization has hosted multiple house concerts and recitals throughout Long Island since 2016. Legato has also been instrumental in the creation of the Long Island Guitar Orchestra, the Long Island Guitar Project, and the 2019 Legato Foundation Guitar Summit, becoming a major driving force of the Long Island classical guitar world.

Little is the recipient of the 2015 Town of Islip Black History Distinguished Service Award. He is currently a private teacher of violin, viola and cello, which he has done for over 15 years. He previously taught orchestra and music theory in the North Babylon and Valley Stream Central school districts. He currently serves on the Board of Directors of the West Islip Symphony and Island Symphony, and is the current president of the Northport Symphony Orchestra. For more information on the West Islip Symphony Orchestra contact NancyD5000@aol.com.

The concert on Dec. 3 will be held at the West Islip High School at 8 p.m. and is free to attend. ■

MY TURN

Katherine's Kitchen

Exploring Middle Eastern cuisine and culture with an American twist

BY KATHERINE AL RASHDAN

Hummus among us: America's favorite healthy snack and its roots as a traditional breakfast

In the U.S., hummus is a popular snack, something we dip our carrots and celery in, something we reach for as the healthy option in a world of sour cream and mayonnaise-based dips. In Jordan and other countries in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA), hummus is part of a traditional breakfast—not just a dip, but instead the focal point of the morning meal.

While researching this edition of Katherine's Kitchen, I came across a blog dedicated to all things hummus; in fact, it's called "The Hummus Blog." I found a post from the early 2000s; the topic is America's newfound fascination with hummus. In the post, the blog's writer calls out a commenter who says hummus is the next salsa.

"When coming across statements like 'hummus is the next salsa,' I am truly appalled," reads the post.

Is the writer rightfully appalled? I don't think so, but let me explain why. In the U.S., we take all sorts of traditional foods and beverages and put our spin on them, salsa being just one example. Hummus is marketed as a dip in the U.S., and for us, dips aren't the main dish. In my opinion, the "next salsa" is very much what hummus became.

I can remember my first taste of it. I was in high school and hanging out at my friend Samantha's house. I fell in love with that creamy texture and smoky flavor.

Apparently, Samantha had an adventurous palate, because at that point Americans hadn't fully embraced hummus and it wasn't stocked to the brim at food stores the way it is now. At that point in time, hummus was hard to find. Americans had to seek it out at specialty shops and health-food stores.

In Jordan, hummus is served with pita. The traditional breakfast spread includes hummus and pita, falafel, cheese, yogurt, and green olives.

Hummus was brought here in 1986 by Zohar Norman, the creator of Sabra Hummus. At first, it was marketed toward Israelis who wanted a taste of home here in the U.S. Hummus made its American debut right here in New York City, specifically Brooklyn and Long Island.

By the early 2000s Sabra was only doing

$7 million a year in sales—now it does about $800 million a year. Think about it this way: Sabra is only one of the many brands of hummus in the U.S. today. Go into the hummus section at the food store and you'll see how popular it is now. You'll see chocolate hummus, red pepper hummus, everything bagel hummus and a bunch more. Guess how many types of hummus are stocked on the supermarket shelves in Jordan? I've only ever seen three: original, with pine nuts and with red pepper. In others words, hummus is now a part of American cuisine. We've adopted it and made it our own.

What was—and still is—a very traditional breakfast in Jordan is now an incredibly popular snack here in the U.S.—and much like pizza from Brooklyn vs. pizza from Naples, Italy, we do it a little differently here. I hope you enjoy my hummus recipe, given to me by my mother-in-law in Jordan, Sahtein (Bon Appetit!) ■

Recipe

Take a cup of dry chickpeas and soak overnight, drain
Boil in water for 15 minutes, drain

While the chickpeas are still hot, pulse a few times in a high-quality blender

Add 2 tbsp cold water and 2 tbsp tahini, pulse again

Juice 2 lemons and 1 lime, add to blender

Add two ice cubes to blender

Blend until creamy

Sprinkle pine nuts and paprika on top; add a heavy had of oil in the middle

Serve with warm pita
