Emily Finn 'lights the way' through West Sayville

The greater Sayville community ran across town to mark what would have been local teen Emily Finn's 19th birthday and raise money for a foundation in her name.

Walk/run event raises awareness after late teen's birthday

BY CONNOR PATTON

On a cool and sunny Sunday morning, hundreds of friends, family members, and neighbors of the late Emily Finn ran and walked around West Sayville to raise money for domestic violence awareness, just days after the local teen would have turned 19.

The Emily Finn Foundation, a nonprofit formed by the late West Sayville teen's family to raise awareness for domestic violence awareness and education, hosted the 5K run and walk at Cherry Avenue Elementary School, where Emily Finn, who aspired to be a teacher, attended and later taught while in high school.

Finn's life was cut short last November when Suffolk County police said her ex-boyfriend shot her dead at his home.

The run/walk took place alongside a month-long virtual walk campaign that launched at SUNY Oneonta, where Finn attended as a freshman, led by students and members of the Terpsichorean Dance Co. Before attending college, Finn danced with the American Ballet Studio in Bayport, and is remembered by friends and instructors as a strong leader.

The in-person run/walk also took place three days after Finn's birthday, and during Domestic Violence Awareness Month, two occasions that inspired the Emily Finn Foundation to launch its "Love, Emily" campaign to raise youth domestic violence awareness at age-appropriate levels.

"It's been tremendous," said Cliantha Miller-Finn, Emily Finn's mother, about the foundation's campaign. Throughout the month, Miller-Finn and her founda-

Former Connetquot superintendent receives $70k for early resignation

District publicly releases settlements agreement

BY CONNOR PATTON

The Connetquot School District and Board of Education paid their former superintendent $70,000 for his early resignation this summer, according to a publicly released document.

The district and board of education signed the settlement agreement with former superintendent Dr. Joseph T. Centamore, who resigned in early August after a contentious district budgeting season where some board members vocally sparred with administrators over finances at public meetings.

The settlement agreement, which the district released two months after The Suffolk County News originally filed a public request, states that Centamore "shall receive his regular salary, consistent with the Superintendent's Agreement, without any additional benefits, less applicable payroll taxes and any other required deductions, for three months from Aug. 20, 2026."

Centamore's annual salary was nearly $280,000, according to the three-year contract extension the board of education signed in June 2025. With Centamore receiving three months' pay through the settlement agreement, the district paid the outgoing superintendent about $70,000 this summer.

After his resignation from Connetquot School District, Centamore was soon hired by North Babylon School District as an assistant superintendent. The school board hired Bryan Frank, a former social studies director, as a temporary replacement before his retirement last month.

On Sept. 18, the school board hired Peggie Staib, a former Connetquot assistant superintendent, as interim superintendent, for $1,700 per day.

During an Oct. 6 public meeting, Connetquot Board of Education president Jacquelyn DiLorenzo, who was the sole vote against hiring Staib, said she "only learned of the board's intent to offer the position to Dr. Staib less than two days before the decision and met her for the first time less than two hours before" she was asked to vote.

"I had no resume to review and very little time to vet this selection," DiLorenzo said. "In my opinion, 48 hours simply isn't enough for a decision of this magnitude, especially under those circumstances."

DiLorenzo also said her vision for finding an interim superintendent was for someone experienced in the role who could help the district "get back on [its] feet," particularly with finances.

Some community members, including former school board trustees Jacqueline Napolitano Furno and Milynn Augulis, raised concerns about Staib's salary and quick hiring process.

"After watching that meeting regarding the superintendent and hearing the board president speak after just receiving this resume only a day or two beforehand, makes me question the integrity of the process," Augulis, who was on the board during Centamore's hiring, said. "When we have a district that has some financial challenges, it would have been wiser to hire somebody that had a finance background, and certainly not at $1,700 a day."

During the Oct. 6 public meeting, Connetquot Board of Education trustee Marissol Mallon said she understood "that the community is up in arms" over the agreed salary and hiring process. In coming up with the $1,700-per-day figure, Mallon said she added Centamore's salary with all his benefits, which added up to around $374,000, and which at 220 days worked per year comes to around $1,700. Mallon said she used the same calculation for two other vacant administrative positions.

"In my opinion, Dr. Staib is worth every penny that she's getting every day that she's working," Mallon said. "Dr. Staib came in with a vision before she even had the position offered to her. She rolled up her sleeves and knew what she needed to do."

The Connetquot School District had no comment on the settlement agreement's release, and said there is nothing to report regarding its search for a permanent superintendent at this time. ■

tion have attended local civic meetings and schools to educate the community and preserve Finn's memory and impact.

To mark Finn's birthday, the foundation encouraged community members to wear pink, the young West Sayville dancer's favorite color, and hosted a schoolwide assembly at Cherry Avenue Elementary, which featured student dancers from the American Ballet Studio, and over 400 students singing a song dedicated to Finn.

"It was unbelievably touching... it was a whole sea of pink," Miller-Finn said. "It was just such an amazing tribute to her."

Before sunset, close family and friends gathered at Common Ground Park, where the Town of Islip donated a bench with a bronze plaque dedicated to Finn. To cap the day off, community members gathered at Sayville Congregational United Church of Christ for a vigil to reflect, remember, and advocate for better youth mental health resources and domestic violence awareness.

The Emily Finn Foundation also created a slideshow for young people to learn the facts about healthy relationships, which has been promoted by Sayville High School, and was sent to every superintendent across Long Island on Finn's birthday.

At the run/walk, raffles for over a dozen baskets, along with Emily Finn Foundation merchandise were sold to raise money for their cause, with the top runners receiving awards for their age brackets. Some runners and walkers included community members who never met Finn, but learned her story after her death, and are committed to preventing similar acts of violence from happening again.

"I think about Emily all the time," said walker Barbara Gozaloff. "I have a 16 year old, so to leave a pamphlet around the house, it sparks conversation."

Gozaloff said she didn't know the Finn family before the young dancer's death, but that positive-minded community events allow conversations to start.

"It's important to raise awareness about The Emily Finn Foundation and make sure that these girls know how to speak up when they need to seek help," said runner and Sayville School District teacher Emma Acevedo, who brought around 10 members of the girl's field hockey team to the run/walk.

Acevedo, despite not teaching Finn, said her colleagues who did know the teenager said she was always great and helpful.

"It's hard that it happened, but the one good thing about this community is that everyone has each other's backs, and then they're gonna do everything that they need to raise awareness, which is why Sayville's such a special place," Acevedo said.

To further achieve Finn's dream of teaching young people, the Emily Finn Foundation also launched its arts enrichment program, "After School With Miss Emily," which includes dance, cooking, band, and ceramics classes for elementary school students through December.

"It all came together very organically with a lot of hard work," said Miller-Finn. "She just keeps getting all the right people in the right places, and the most amazing things are happening."

The Emily Finn Foundation will host its inaugural gala in Finn's memory on Nov. 29 at the Bourne Mansion.

Miller-Finn said the foundation is open to all feedback, and is already seeing young people embrace their message and take their initiatives seriously, which is doing exactly what her daughter wanted to achieve in life.

"I keep saying she wanted to teach children, and she is," Miller-Finn said. "She's speaking to a whole generation of kids."

Hundreds of community members gathered to celebrate Emily Finn's life through a run/walk fundraiser at Cherry Avenue Elementary School, where she attended and later taught.

Meet the candidates for NY's Second Congressional District

Pat Halpin challenges Andrew Garbarino

BY CONNOR PATTON

Incumbent U.S. Rep Andrew Garbarino is facing a challenge from former Suffolk County executive and Democrat Pat Halpin in this November's election. The second congressional district covers South Shore communities from Massapequa to Mastic.

Incumbent Republican Andrew Garbarino

Andrew Garbarino is seeking a fourth term as the South Shore's representative in the U.S. House of Representatives, and describes himself as a "results-oriented" legislator who focuses on working with different sides to compromise on bills.

Before entering Congress, Garbarino worked as an attorney at his father's law office in downtown Sayville, and won his first election as state assemblymember in 2012. In late 2019, former U.S. Rep. Peter King announced he wouldn't seek re-election in 2020, and Garbarino said he never thought he'd run for the seat, until people across the district encouraged him to run. He won that election, and defeated primary challengers two years later, before winning a third term in 2024.

Garbarino said he often works behind the scenes and talks with relevant parties to get legislation done rather than showing off for the media and online, like other colleagues do. "I'm more results-oriented than how many Twitter likes and followers I have," Garbarino said. "If I have to do a press conference, it's announcing the result, the thing that we got done. That's what I want to do."

Garbarino said he's proud of his work in helping secure an increase in the State and Local Tax (SALT) deduction from $10,000 to $40,000 along with preserving the Pass-Through Entity Tax (PTET) deduction, which Long Islanders and local businesses can utilize.

"That increased SALT benefit didn't just affect my district; it affected people all over the country, and it put dollars, their hard-earned dollars, back in their pockets because getting rid of the SALT deduction pretty much meant people were paying taxes on their taxes," Garbarino said.

The raised SALT deduction was part of the One Big Beautiful Bill Act, which Garbarino said he stands by one year after its passage, but would have liked to see extended energy credits he tried to negotiate for. Garbarino also said there was a shortfall in the New York State essential health plan that was not realized, and that he's working with a team to find a solution.

Garbarino also supports the bill's 20-hour work or volunteer requirements for Medicaid, and said there are exemptions for seniors, disabled, pregnant women and single people with dependent children.

"For the people that Medicaid was originally meant to help, they're exempt from those work requirements," Garbarino said.

Another accomplishment Garbarino said he's proud of is securing full funding for the WTC Health Program earlier this year alongside U.S. Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand and a bipartisan coalition of congresspeople. If re-elected, Garbarino said he will continue working with Gillibrand on fixing a pensions system that was heavily impacted by the deaths of hundreds of first responders on 9/11, and never fixed.

Garbarino said it's important to have local representation that understands and will hear from constituents about the issues for community project funding.

"You don't want some pencil pusher in some department in D.C. deciding where money should go," Garbarino said. "The locals know what they need to do."

For over a year, Garbarino has served as the chair of the House Committee on Homeland Security, and said if re-elected, he will work with the agency as they look to reform TSA and FEMA, and wants to be part of those discussions so "They don't hurt emergency response and management."

As the house leader on Homeland Security, Garbarino said the committee has hosted hearings and bipartisan, closed-door roundtables with Immigration and Customs Enforcement leadership as immigration raids nationwide increased under the second Trump administration. Garbarino also disavowed the ICE-involved shootings this past year in Minneapolis and New York City, and said ICE and DHS have changed protocols since those incidents.

"Former secretary [Kristi] Noem was a disaster," Garbarino said. "The way she handled [everything], that's why she's 'former' secretary... We are now [with] the new secretary, and we are all trying to fix a lot of the damage she did."

Garbarino said reforms include not conducting pullovers without lights and sirens, using car stops only if necessary, and new officer training that involves newer officers to be assigned to older ones that serve as mentors. Garbarino added he wished Democratic governors would allow their local police to assist in some operations and should be going "after the worst of the worst."

"That was what the president campaigned on—the criminals, all the bad guys that came over through the four years of the Biden administration," Garbarino said. "I don't think we should be focusing on the business owner who's been here for 30 years."

Regarding President Trump's tariff policies, Garbarino identified himself as a free-trader, and said he didn't mind the president saying he'd enact tariffs if he felt it gave the U.S. a better deal, but added he would go back to Trump's wide-sweeping "Liberation Day" tariffs for a second look. With Trump facing judicial challenges over his personally enforced tariffs, Garbarino said he doesn't believe Trump would get Congress' approval to enact any more tariffs and that he'd be hesitant to increase anything.

Along with increasing tax benefits, Garbarino said he's addressed the affordability crisis through legislation that supports home ownership costs and the speed of construction, and is working on energy transmission and permitting reform, which, if passed, would increase energy production and investment into transmission lines that would, according to Garbarino, make the cost of transmitting energy cheaper.

When asked why voters should give him a fourth term, Garbarino said he's not afraid to work with different sides to accomplish legislation, like President

Meet the candidates for State Assembly District Seven

BY CONNOR PATTON

Two candidates are running for N.Y. State Assembly District Seven, which is open as incumbent Jarett Gandolfo seeks a State Senate seat. Republican and Conservative Party candidate DawnMarie Kuhn is running against Democratic and Working Families candidate Trish Kopp. The seventh state assembly district covers South Shore communities from West Bay Shore through parts of East Patchogue.

DawnMarie Kuhn

DawnMarie Kuhn is a lifelong Bohemia resident who won her first election last fall for the Town of Islip Council's Second District. But Kuhn's involvement in local civic and political life extends long before she entered the town council earlier this year.

Starting as a state senate volunteer in high school, Kuhn would later open her right-wing political consulting firm, Right View Strategies LLC, which has worked with political candidates island-wide, including Legis. Anthony Piccirillo, whom she served as chief of staff.

Kuhn has also worked in the Town of Islip's Sanitation Department and Department of Environmental Control, and also worked as chief of staff for former town councilmember Jim O'Connor, before working for Piccirillo.

Reflecting on her first ten months as a town councilmember, Kuhn said it "has been an honor" to represent a community she knows and loves.

"It has been very fulfilling to help solve constituent cases, whether it be repairing a sidewalk, connecting seniors with services or helping a homeowner navigate the planning department," Kuhn said. "I am proud to help my community whenever they contact my office."

Kuhn added that she's proud of leading the effort to set the town's Department of Environmental Control "on a new course, because Islip should lead the region in solving the municipal waste issue." Kuhn also said she worked on enacting the town's latest ban on Battery Energy Storage Systems, one of the toughest statewide, and the town's 18-month moratorium on data centers.

Regarding the town's Industrial Development Agency, Kuhn said she "proudly opposed" tax breaks to luxury apartments because the town needs more home ownership opportunities.

"With each vote cast, I seek to represent my community. I am their voice, and I will bring that independent nature to Albany," Kuhn said.

In February, one month into her council term, Kuhn accepted the Suffolk County GOP's nomination for the seventh state assembly district. Kuhn said after incumbent assemblymember Gandolfo announced his State Senate run, that she was approached by the New York State Republican Party's female leadership, as part of their "Women on the Rise" initiative, to elect more conservative-minded women to serve in the state legislature, with only three women of 47 members of the Conservative conference.

Kuhn said the deciding factor to run was her brother moving out-of-state, another "casualty of a state that has become too expensive to start a life."

"All New Yorkers deserve a government that lives within its means so families can afford to stay here to build their future or retire with dignity in the very place they have called home for their entire lives," Kuhn said. "I want to be that young millennial woman voice in the Assembly for my generation, the voice who will fight so Long Islanders don't have to flee the state, just so they can afford to live."

Regarding her campaign's priorities, Kuhn cited safety and preserving the environment as top issues.

Kuhn supports repealing the state's cashless bail laws, and opposes sanctuary state policies, citing the endorsements of law enforcement agencies statewide.

For the environment, Kuhn said she remains "committed to restoring the Great South Bay, expanding sewer infrastructure to improve water quality, and advancing responsible environmental policies that safeguard our natural treasures while supporting our local economy and quality of life." If elected, Kuhn said she hopes to serve on the Environmental Conservation Committee. Kuhn is endorsed by the League of Conservation Voters.

Regarding affordability, Kuhn said

Biden's Bipartisan Infrastructure Bill, that's in Long Islander's best interest.

"I've shown over the last six years when it comes to what I do in D.C., I'm a Long Islander first, so every vote I take is based on if it's going to be beneficial to Long Island," Garbarino said. "If it's not, I vote against it... I do what I think is right for my constituents, and I'm going to continue to do that."

Democrat Pat Halpin

Nearly 35 years after serving as Suffolk County's youngest executive, Pat Halpin is returning to electoral politics in an attempt to unseat Republican Andrew Garbarino this November.

Since 1991, Halpin has continued public service as a member of the Suffolk County Water Authority, where after 12 years on the board he was appointed chair in 2018. Under his leadership, Halpin said the authority strengthened transparency, cut waste, and took "aggressive action to safeguard Long Island's sole-source aquifer."

Halpin also chaired the Town of Babylon Industrial Development Agency, and currently chairs the Town of Babylon's Planning Board, where he said he helped ensure "responsible" re-development of neglected areas along Montauk Highway.

When asked why he's returning to electoral politics after 35 years, Halpin said he became "very concerned about the future of our country" after President Trump's second term began last year.

"Congress is not doing its job," Halpin said. "The power rests within Congress: the power to declare war, the power to pay taxes, the power to impose tariffs... this Congress has just been a rubber stamp for the MAGA president."

U.S. Rep Andrew Garbarino.

"And frankly, the Republican Party that I always worked with throughout my years as an elected official and serving on these boards, that party doesn't exist anymore," Halpin added.

Halpin said if elected, he wants to end the ongoing war with Iran "that's driving up all our energy prices" and would work to fix social security, which he said is at risk of running out in the coming years.

For development, Halpin said individual projects are decided at local municipal levels, but that he'd work to bring the "right federal tax incentives" to find opportunities to redevelop underutilized spaces, citing what he saw as a missed opportunity at the former Sunrise Mall in Massapequa, which is now planned for an Amazon warehouse.

"There's enormous potential beyond an Amazon warehouse," Halpin said. Large tax breaks to these corporations to build locally is another issue Halpin opposes.

Halpin said the One Big Beautiful Bill Act, which he terms the "Big, Ugly, Nasty Bill," includes tax breaks for the construction of data centers and warehouses, both of which he opposes. Halpin also said he opposes the bill's tax cuts for billionaires, and would ban congresspeople from purchasing individual stocks while in office.

Regarding health care, Halpin said he wants to tackle the growing consolidation of health care companies that drive up costs.

"We don't have a system," Halpin said. "It's so chaotic that we end up spending more per person on health care than any other comparable nation in the world."

Halpin added that he opposes cuts to Medicaid and Medicare and that more cuts will be coming next year if Congress doesn't act. Halpin also wants to expand

Medicare for people younger than 65, with an option to keep one's own insurance, so that more people can have health insurance "without reinventing the wheel."

Regarding immigration enforcement, Halpin said he opposes the actions of ICE this past year, and that DHS should be doing more thorough background checks for potential officers, including psychological tests and more extensive training.

"As a county executive... we made sure from day one the police in Suffolk County, and to this day they still do it, are very well trained," Halpin said. "In this case, they get no training."

Halpin also said he opposes Trump's revocation of temporary protection status for immigrants who came to the U.S. under specific circumstances, including many members of the Salvadoran community on Long Island.

Despite his disagreements with ICE operations and wanting the agency to be held more accountable by Congress, Halpin does not support abolishing the agency as a whole.

The Cook Political Report rates the second congressional district as "solid Republican," but Halpin said he's won against tough odds before, with his victory in the state assembly in the 1980s being one of the first Democratic victories in his district in a century, and that he was only the second Democrat to become the county executive.

"So how did I win? By being a normal South Shore guy and a normal person. I'm not one of these zealots that it's their way or the highway," Halpin said. "I'm one of these people that wants to actually get the work done... I've always been for people, not politics." ■

An annual boat burning tradition

BY JOSEPH CALIGIURI

West Sayville will be saying farewell to another ferry boat for the Long Island Maritime Museum’s 36th annual Boat Burning. Taking place on Oct. 23 at 5 p.m., the tradition has become a way for the local community to celebrate historical vessels while keeping in the Halloween spirit. Tickets are $5 a head, while children 5 and under entering free.

A symbol of the island’s history, last year’s boat Monitor II was the last remaining wooden ferry for the Cherry Grove and Fire Island voyages from Sayville. First hitting the water back in the ’60s, the boat was part of a fleet of ships belonging to the Pokornys. These ships rivaled that of another local ferry company run by the Steins. Monitor II eventually was sold to the Steins’ Sayville Ferry Service, where she was eventually retired.

Several food trucks will be on-site serving a variety of snacks and meals for attendees, including soft serve by

she will fight to reduce taxes, eliminate “costly” unfunded state mandates that “drive up local property taxes,” lower utility and energy costs, and cut “wasteful government spending.”

Kuhn also supports an immediate suspension of the state sales tax and surcharges on gasoline and home heating oil for six months, with possible extensions. Kuhn also supports tax credits for first-time homebuyers, and a state tax dedication for childcare, with additional state funding for pre-K and 3-K programs.

For education, Kuhn said she will “fight to fully fund our public schools” and expand educational opportunities to students while opposing expansion of charter schools.

When asked why voters should choose her, Kuhn said she will be the type of representation who fights for her community. “New York is on the wrong track, and I am the only candidate in this race who will speak up and fight to hold Albany accountable to the people and not the special interests,” Kuhn said. “This is not the time for on-the-job training, I am ready to serve on day one.”

Trish Kopp

Trish Kopp is a public school teacher and mother of four who was born and raised locally on the South Shore, and cites her family, education, community, and public service as having shaped nearly every part of her life.

For over 20 years, Kopp has worked as a teacher in the Half Hollow Hills and Brentwood School Districts, and is “a proud union member.” For years, Kopp has served as a Democratic grassroots organizer, canvassing for candidates and causes she felt passionate about.

Earlier this year, Kopp said she found out that the Suffolk County Democratic Committee wasn’t going to run a candidate for the state’s seventh assembly district. After filling in the paperwork and setting work into motion, Kopp said her campaign began and has grown to heights she never imagined.

“I knew that we had support from local women and committee members on the South Shore. I knew I had at least a starting point,” Kopp said. “But what I didn’t anticipate is how excited people would be for just a normal candidate, just a normal mom, teacher, somebody that they knew, not a professional politician.”

Kopp said her campaign has grown to include volunteers from across the South Shore, and reached her maximum number of state matching funds before most candidates. Fundraising events have reached capacity, and Kopp said the momentum behind her campaign is translating into building infrastructure for South Shore Democrats, in an area that has been dominated by Republican victories in recent years.

By knocking on doors for three hours daily, Kopp said she’s learned that people locally are nervous and scared in the current political climate.

“They know that things are not normal, and even though this is a local election, when you speak to people, they’re anxious about the bigger issues that are happening,” Kopp said. “Democrats, independents, and even Republicans, they’re getting squeezed.”

Kopp said issues like thousands of Suffolk County residents losing health insurance from federal actions aren’t a “red versus blue issue” but an issue against billionaires.

Despite the Democrats holding a majority in the state legislature, Kopp said local residents don’t reap as many benefits as their neighbors in districts with Democratic politicians, due to those legislators having a seat at the table.

“It is an advantage to send somebody who can vote with the majorities to bring funding,” Kopp said.

Affordability is one of Kopp’s top campaign priorities. Kopp supports expanding the state government’s universal pre-K program and bringing incentives for young people looking to buy starter homes.

“In Patchogue, Bay Shore, some of those rents are like $3,500-$4000 a month, and you never are able to save for a deposit on a house,” Kopp said. “I have four kids; they’re all in their 20s. They would not be able to buy homes here right now.”

Kopp supports taxing billionaires to fund universal childcare and other initiatives to support “hard working tax-paying families.”

For the environment, Kopp said she will work to preserve parks, open spaces, the Great South Bay and the island’s aquifer, and promote clean energy. The Sierra Club has endorsed Kopp along with New York State United Teachers, Campaign for New York Health, and trades, communications, and laborers’ unions.

Kopp also opposes large-scale developments she believes are more detrimental to the South Shore, including a proposed 4.2-million-square foot Amazon warehouse in Holbrook, and the current proposal for 568 units at South Bay Village in Sayville.

Regarding education, Kopp said she “always advocated for the most possible state aid to school districts,” and as a teacher and union member, understands how factors like declining enrollment impact budgets and programming at schools she previously taught in. If elected, Kopp said she’d focus on maintaining funding for special education programs, along with the arts, which she said are often the first areas cut in budgets.

If elected, Kopp said she will work on using taxpayer dollars in ways that help the taxpayers the most.

“It really is my singular focus to however, and whenever possible, use [the] state government to help working families,” Kopp said. “There’s a sentiment that maybe [people] don’t believe that government really can help them anymore. But it’s my hope that people can believe in a brighter Suffolk County and understand that if you send a representative who really is interested in their best interest, that government can help.” ■

I Will Not Raise the County's General Fund Taxes

BY SUFFOLK COUNTY EXECUTIVE
ED ROMAINE

At a time of tremendous uncertainty, Suffolk County residents deserve just that from their local government: certainty. My 2027 Recommended Operating Budget continues my fiscally conservative message with a 0 percent increase in General Fund taxes.

Holding the line on taxes is not always easy. Rising retirement and healthcare costs, along with unfunded state mandates, continue to put pressure on county finances. That is why the first two years of my administration focused on getting our fiscal house in order, staying within the state tax cap, and making government work more efficiently for the people we serve.

We have put Suffolk County on a stronger financial footing, which means we can hold the line on taxes when our residents need help saving every dollar possible.

We addressed hundreds of millions of dollars in potential liability by resolving lawsuits left over from previous administrations. We also have right-sized county departments so staffing better reflects actual needs.

Through careful and cautious budgeting, the county has protected our reserve funds rather than relying on them to balance the budget. Those decisions have helped produce higher credit ratings and positive outlooks from the major rating agencies. Fitch Ratings and S&P Global have specifically recognized our more conservative approach to budgeting.

Our capital budget is equally focused on Suffolk County's future. We are investing in infrastructure that has been neglected for too long while continuing to protect farmland and open space. The land we preserve today will help ensure that Suffolk County retains the character that makes it special. We do not want Suffolk to become Queens.

We are also making major investments in sewers and wastewater management. These investments are essential not only to protecting our environment and drinking water, but also to supporting economic growth and making housing more affordable.

With this year's wastewater investments, we are on track to fulfill my billion-dollar commitment to addressing Suffolk County's wastewater needs. Voters made it clear that clean water is a priority when they approved the 2024 Suffolk County Water Quality Restoration Act at the polls. That law will generate approximately $3 billion for clean water infrastructure through 2060.

At the end of the day, county government is only successful when it works for the people.

At the same time, our operating budget continues to make public safety a priority. That means putting more police officers on our streets and building on the progress of Operation Safe and Lasting Return. We continue to reform the county's Child Protective Services to better protect our most vulnerable children and families. That is why I want residents to know that help is just a phone call away. If you have a non-emergency question or need assistance with a county service, call 311. Our operators will connect you with the right county department or direct you to the appropriate resource.

Suffolk County Executive Ed Romaine.

Our job is simple: provide the services people need, spend their tax dollars responsibly and make Suffolk County safer, stronger and more affordable.

Two-thirds of Great River meeting attendees call for sewer revote

BY SAVE THE GREAT SOUTH BAY

As Suffolk County moves forward with plans to sewer neighboring Oakdale, residents of Great River are asking an important question: Why are we being left behind?

At a June 24 community meeting hosted by Save The Great South Bay (SGSB) at the Great River Fire Department, 34 of the 52 residents in attendance—nearly two-thirds—signed a petition calling for a new vote on sewerage in Great River.

The message was clear: There is renewed interest in revisiting a decision made seven years ago.

In 2019, Great River's sewer referendum failed by just 74 votes. It was the first sewer referendum held in Suffolk County in decades, at a time when many residents were unfamiliar with the environmental benefits, costs, and implications of sewer infrastructure.

Much has changed since then.

Public awareness of the connection between outdated wastewater systems, nitrogen pollution, and the health of our waterways has grown significantly. Suffolk County voters overwhelmingly approved the 2024 Water Quality Restoration Act, establishing a long-term funding source for wastewater infrastructure and clean water protection.

Most recently, Oakdale residents approved sewerage with an extraordinary 89 percent voting in favor.

Yet, across the Connetquot River, Great River remains without a clear path forward.

One River. Two Communities. Different Futures.

The Connetquot River has the poorest water quality of the county's 191 monitoring stations. At our June meeting, experts from The Nature Conservancy and the Suffolk County Department of Health helped residents better understand the serious water quality challenges facing the river and Great South Bay.

The environmental issues do not stop at the river's edge. Nitrogen pollution from outdated cesspools and septic systems affects the entire watershed, regardless of municipal boundaries.

While Oakdale moves toward sewer construction, Great River residents are being encouraged to install Innovative and Alternative Onsite Wastewater Treatment Systems (I/A systems).

These systems can provide meaningful reductions in nitrogen pollution, and substantial grant funding is available to help homeowners with installation costs. They are an important part of Suffolk County's clean water strategy.

But residents are asking whether individual wastewater systems are the best long-term solution for a community between an area sewerage long ago and that is immediately adjacent to a major sewer expansion.

Some residents also expressed concerns about the low-pressure sewer systems being installed in other communities, preferring traditional gravity-based infrastructure. These concerns deserve thoughtful consideration and clear answers.

Great River Residents Deserve Answers

Since our June meeting, Save The Great South Bay has shared residents' concerns with Suffolk County Legis. Trish Bergin and has been working to meet with deputy county executive Jennifer Juengst to discuss the community's options.

Our Great River Creek Defender, Ron Gibbons, and local residents have raised several important questions.

If Great River residents must endure the disruption of sewer construction in neighboring Oakdale, shouldn't they also have an opportunity to benefit from that investment?

What would it take for Great River to be reconsidered for sewerage, and what funding opportunities might be available?

How do the long-term financial and environmental benefits of individual I/A systems compare with connecting homes to a public sewer system? Sewers would add $100,000 to the value of each Great River home. Do IA systems add similar value?

And beyond wastewater infrastructure, how can the county support a comprehensive stormwater management strategy that incorporates natural solutions, including native plants and green infrastructure, to reduce polluted runoff into the Connetquot River? Save the Great South Bay's Great River leaders are interested in tackling run-off water pollution.

These are reasonable questions that deserve transparent answers.

A Watershed Approach to Clean Water

Save The Great South Bay is also participating in the newly launched Connetquot River Watershed Management Plan, working alongside government agencies, scientists, and community stakeholders to identify strategies for improving the river's health.

This planning process is important and will help guide future restoration investments. However, residents should not have to wait years for a completed watershed plan simply to understand their options for sewerage.

We believe the county can advance its watershed planning efforts while engaging Great River residents in a meaningful discussion about wastewater infrastructure today.

The strong support for a revote expressed at our June meeting suggests that the community's perspective may have changed since 2019. While meeting attendees do not represent every voter in Great River, their response provides a compelling reason to reopen the conversation.

It's Time to Revisit the Question

Save The Great South Bay is not asking Suffolk County to disregard the results of the 2019 referendum. We are asking the county to recognize that circumstances have changed, new funding is available, and residents deserve the opportunity to reconsider their future with better information.

The Connetquot River cannot be restored one shoreline at a time. Protecting this vital waterway requires a coordinated approach that addresses pollution on both sides of the river.

Great River residents deserve to be part of that conversation—and part of the solution.

‘Falling’ in love with music with Strings Attached

Strings Attached performs its fall concert, “Fall... In love with music with Strings Attached” this Saturday at 4 p.m. at Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Great River. SCN/Patton Strings Attached radiates joy and community while performing, whether it’s sight-reading at a first rehearsal, placing finishing touches during dress rehearsal, or performing during a concert.

Ensemble performs this Saturday

BY CONNOR PATTON

The nearly dozen-member music ensemble Strings Attached is bringing audiences along for a journey into autumn through its upcoming concert “Fall... In love with music with Strings Attached.”

The 11-member group will perform 12 pieces from different genres including rock, pop, and classical in its program which begins by wishing summer goodbye, before delving into autumnal anthems and spooky tunes. Strings Attached performs its fall concert on Saturday, Oct. 24 at 4 p.m. at Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Great River.

“We start out saying goodbye to summer, and then we do falling leaves and autumn dances, then a little beer-drinking song, and then we get scary,” said violinist and group director, Barbara Llobell.

The program starts with “A Summer Song” by Metcalf, Noble, and Stuart, before transitioning into “Autumn’s Dance” by Fiona Hickie and the “Maple Leaf Rag” by Scott Joplin. The group then performs other genres like folk and rock, including The Beatles’ “Blackbird” and Queen’s “Under Pressure,” before playing more Halloween-themed pieces like “In the Hall of the Mountain King” by Edvard Grieg and “Phantom of the Opera” by Andrew Lloyd Weber.

“We try to do every different genre,” Llobell said. “From Bach to Bowie.”

Strings Attached features violin, viola, cello, flute, percussion and guitar players who often take turns singing, like violinist John Kuegel for “Blackbird” and violist Gabby Albanese for “Haunted” by Taylor Swift.

Emmanuel Episcopal Church’s high ceilings provide great acoustics from any seat in the room, which was relieving for the group to hear during this week’s dress rehearsal, since they practice only once at their venue before the show.

Strings Attached practices weekly inside violinist Llobell’s home alongside their “mascot,” Llobell’s dog Finn. Without a conductor, each member of the group listens to themselves and each other more closely, with different members counting the group off, or calling out where they feel retouches are needed.

The group’s small size and informal atmosphere have led to strong communal bonds. This includes a fun and “chaotic” group chat, barbecues and picnics, and even laughing at themselves when something might go wrong during a rehearsal.

“This is such a fun group; there’s so many different personalities,” said violinist Danae Butler. “We’re a motley crew and I love it!”

Most members knew each other before joining Strings Attached, which Llobell formed with other musicians during the COVID-19 pandemic as a needed artistic outlet, through outside connections, including the Bay Area Friends of the Fine Arts Symphony Orchestra.

During Saturday’s concert, like all of their performances, Strings Attached encourages audiences to take in the music and get up and dance when it calls to them. “The fact that we have so much inherent joy in what we do, I think that passes out into the audience as we play,” said percussionist Yvonne Sing.

“We are community, the definition of it,” added cellist Claire Yannacone. ■

Canine Companions celebrates Yappy Hour with their national CEO

BY JOSEPH CALIGIURI

Bay Shore's Kismet Coffee welcomed nonprofit Canine Companions for a "Paws & Pours: Yappy Hour" event last week. CEO of Canine Companions Paige Mazzoni was the honored special guest of the night, where she shed a spotlight on the recent growth the nonprofit has experienced.

Overlooking locations across the country, Mazzoni has spearheaded the way forward for Canine Companions. Currently, she is focused on meeting the rising demands for service dogs.

"The service dog industry is growing, and the recognition of the work these dogs do is growing. So the demand for our service dogs is greater than ever. So we are doing everything we can to keep our waitlist in check, which means we're producing more dogs, we're training more dogs here on Long Island," Mazzoni explained. A major factor in this growth has been the expansion of the Northeast Training Center in Medford. By adding more kennels and dormitories, the greater capacity will enable Canine Companions to train more dogs.

Local volunteers and their pups were invited to celebrate as well during the "Yappy Hour".

These volunteers are a cornerstone of the entire nonprofit to Mazzoni, raising these pups so they can help others in need. Growing this volunteer pool is another goal for the group, and one way they're working on it is through spreading awareness.

"What we're really working on is explaining to people that helping us raise a puppy or transporter dog are all steps into changing someone's life," Mazzoni shared.

The most rewarding part of leading Canine Companions to Mazzoni is all about helping others.

"I think the most rewarding thing about being able to grow and get more dogs to more people is, every day, we change more lives. And we serve children and veterans, and people with hearing loss, and people with type 1 diabetes, and so many different categories of people. And being able to grow and help more people is just, it's an amazing ripple effect. It's more goodness in the world," Mazzoni said.

Kismet Coffee's owner Jackson Davis has kept a close connection to Canine Companions due to how their service dog, Feathers, helped his late brother, Nick, at just 5 years old.

"I was 2 years old when my brother got his service dog, so for me, my entire life, it was just what I was used to. So I kind of grew up with Canine Companions. And they've always just been a part of my life and I've tried to take any opportunity I can to involve them with the work that I'm doing," Davis shared. Holding Coffee and Canines events to raise awareness about the organization led him to the idea for the Yappy Hour.

With customers pouring in to meet the friendly pups—as well as the people that

Annual Howl-O-Ween pup party held to raise funds for dog advocacy

BY SAM DESMOND

It's the spooky soiree of the season for the pups, with Long Island Dog Owners' Group's (LI-DOG) annual Howl-O-Ween party at the Pine Grove Inn (One 1st Street, East Patchogue) on Sunday, Nov. 1 from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

"Calling all spooky pups, silly mutts, and dressed-up doggos—it's time to unleash the fun! LI-DOG is taking over The Pine Grove Inn for an afternoon packed with creative costumes, festive activities, and plenty of reasons for dogs and their people to celebrate together," said LI-DOG in a statement about the fur festivities.

"Our Howl-o-Ween Pawty is an important fundraiser for LI-DOG, which works to get more access to public parks and beaches on Long Island for dog owners and their pups! So, grab your dog-loving friends and family and join us on Nov. 1 for what should be a lot of fun and a great way to support LI-DOG's work!" said LI-DOG president, Ginny Munger Kahn.

Many local vendors generously donated to the cause, with the grand prize being a raffle for a $1,000 flight voucher with RetrievAir. On RetrievAir, your dog will receive their own seat in a calm environment with treats and water available throughout the entire flight.

Some of the destinations serviced by RetrievAir include Atlanta, Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Boston, Dallas, Fort Lauderdale, New York City, Scottsdale, and Washington.

For reference, a basic flight from New York to Atlanta for one human and one 40-to-70-pound dog during the December travel season is approximately $1,450.

The popular "Costume Contest" will be held this year, with Pine Grove's lawn serving as a "personal runway" for pups.

"Bring out the capes, crowns, clever characters, and coordinated ensembles for a costume contest where originality gets its moment in the spotlight," said LI-DOG.

There are two categories in the contest:

- Best Standalone Pet
- Best Dog & Human Team

Pet Wants Great South Bay generously sponsored the costume contest prizes in each category and feature a collective of $300 in prizes.

Pet Wants offers all-natural food, chews, treats, supplements, and more for dogs and cats. They will have a booth at the event for attendees, human or canine, to explore their products and learn more about what they offer.

LI-DOG also had other "pawty" highlights including:

Pup-friendly snacks and bites for humans, available for purchase.

Creating a paw-print painting with your dog or decorating a spooky Halloween-themed cutout to bring home.

Special guests will be in attendance as VIPs (Very Important Pet vendors) sharing dog-friendly goodies and gear and valuable resources and services for you and your four-legged family members.

Wyldfire Photography will be on hand ready to snap picture-perfect shots of you and your pup dressed for the pawty.

Bark and Bead will be there with their festive handmade beaded collars and matching bracelets.

Community Pet Supplies will have treats, toys, and information on their upcoming Photos with Santa event.

Farmina Foods will tell you about their healthy pet meals and offer your pup a tasty morsel.

NY Safe Haven Animal Rescue will bring their adorable adoptable pups.

Pet Wants Great South Bay. Discover fresh, healthy pet food and all-natural chews and treats.

Who Lets Your Dog Out dog walking and dog care services will set up a small agility course.

DJ and longtime dog lover Mike Kaplow and his sidekick Ms. Maroney will be featuring a playlist of dog and human tunes.

Other raffle basket donations were made by: All Island K9 Services, Behr's Boutique, Brutus Bone Broth, Community Pet Supplies, The Fish Store Market & Restaurant, Health Extension Pet Products, Alan Meschkow, Gail Meschkow, Momo's Too Sports Bar & Grill, Laura Pea Photography, Pindar Vineyards, Stew Leonard's, Stop & Shop, and Who Lets Your Dog Out, among others.

Discounted advance tickets for $15 per person are now available for purchase. On the day of the event, tickets will be $20 per person. Dogs and children 12 and under are free.

For the fun and safety of all humans and pets:

Please be aware dogs must remain leashed on non-retractable leads.

Please walk your dog before entering.

Only service dogs are permitted inside the restaurant.

In the event of inclement weather, please check www.lidog.org, Facebook, or Meetup the morning of the event.

"If there is no announcement, the Pawty is on," said Munger Kahn. ■

Sayville plays BBP at whiteout game

SCN/Nico Cappiello

Clash of the Titans

BY JORDAN STANKOVICH

For the first time in 44 years, two dynamic football programs of the South Shore that are nearest in proximity faced off in a non-exhibition matchup. The defending Division III Long Island champion Sayville Golden Flashes hosted the defending Division IV Long Island champ Bayport-Blue Point Phantoms in a long-awaited meeting for the supremacy of Division IV.

In the opening quarter, Ryan Batter-berry chugged 12 yards for a rushing touchdown under four minutes into the scuffle to get Sayville on the board. His brother elevated the lead, when Connor Batterberry sprinted to the end zone on a 39-yard touchdown followed by a Matthew Damone PAT.

Late in the opening frame, Bayport-Blue Point's offense got going. Josh Franchak bolted down the sideline deep into Sayville territory on a long rushing play that took the Phantoms to the goal line. A few plays later on fourth down and inches in the closing minute of the period, Franchak barreled into the end zone to cross the plane for a half-dozen points for the Phantoms, and with 25 seconds remaining it was 13-7 Sayville.

In the second quarter, Jake Arato snatched a touchdown pass from Frankie Hanley, a 25-yarder ensued by a Damone extra point. Later in the second, Cole Canterella made a 71-yard interception return for a touchdown and afterwards ran six yards for a rushing touchdown and it was 34-6. In the waning seconds until the halftime intermission, Tommy Steyert slammed a 38-yard field goal and the score was 34-9 at the end of 24 minutes.

In the triadic frame, Rodney Magee made an interception for Bayport-Blue Point, but it was a scoreless third quarter on both sides. In quarter No. 4, Matt Bachmore slung a two-yard touchdown toss to Brayden Waldbauer for a Bayport-Blue Point touchdown.

Hanley threw another touchdown pass to Arato late in the game for the final score of the evening. The final score was Sayville 40, Bayport-Blue Point 15.

Sayville plays their next game at home on Friday vs. Kings Park while BBP will host Elwood-John Glenn this Friday. ■
