Vivian and Timothy Olyphant
in "Justified: City Primeval"

A familiar path: 'Justified' returns to FX with 'City Primeval' sequel

To those who enjoyed the initial drama, a sequel to it is likely to seem quite "Justified."

Timothy Olyphant returns in the further adventures of lawman Raylan Givens as the FX series "Justified: City Primeval" debuts with the first two of its eight episodes Tuesday, July 18. Set 15 years after "Justified" ended, the saga adapts another story by Elmore Leonard ("City Primeval: High Noon in Detroit") and newly factors Givens into it, with the U.S. marshal living in Miami after his time in Kentucky.

A situation that develops in Florida leads him to Detroit and a vicious felon known as the Oklahoma Wildman (played by Boyd Holbrook, previously of "Narcos"), whose lawyer ("King Richard" Oscar nominee Aunjanue Ellis) has her own reasons for wanting to help her client elude the scales of justice.

With Olyphant also an executive producer of the show along with author Leonard's estate, "Justified: City Primeval" includes Adelaide Clemens ("Rectify"), Vondie Curtis-Hall ("The Recruit"), Marin Ireland ("Hell or High Water," 2016), double Tony Award winner Norbert Leo Butz ("The Girl From Plainville"), Ravi Patel ("Animal Control") and Vivian Olyphant — the star's daughter, who plays Givens' offspring — among additional cast members. They're new to the "Justified" world, as is actress Ellis, who felt she couldn't go wrong with material that originally came from the mind of Leonard.

"I just had a general familiarity with 'Justified,'" she says. "I knew it was an Elmore Leonard adaptation, and I was interested in that because I'm a big reader. Then, when I started working on this, I watched (the original show) and got to see Tim being 'that guy.' It was one of those things where you feel a character was written for somebody, even if the author did not have that person in mind.

"There was a great singer named Phyllis Hyman, and Duke Ellington's granddaughter says that she believes he wrote his songs for Phyllis Hyman even before she was born," Ellis explains. "There also are acting roles like that, and I just feel that Tim is the person who was meant to walk in these boots."

Much of the appeal for Ellis in playing attorney Carolyn Wilder in "Justified: City Primeval" came from what she defines as "taking that 'Justified' world and putting it inside Detroit, and seeing those worlds collide. (Givens) certainly is a fish out of water there, and I love how Carolyn is very confrontational with him. She says, 'I know how you've been doing things, but you can't do them here ... not in my town, and not with me."

Still, there's room for Carolyn to have her own development arc. "There's the world of justice and the world of law, and sometimes, those don't meet," Ellis reasons. "I think Carolyn is one of those people who feel that justice isn't necessarily found in a courthouse or a legislative building. You have to find it where you can find it, and I think that's what makes her and Raylan kindred spirits. She does things that are necessary, but she still has to find her footing and be true to herself."

Most of Ellis's scenes in "Justified: City Primeval" are with Olyphant, but she also enjoyed sharing on-camera moments with co-star Curtis-Hall ("I just think he's one of the best actors who has ever acted"). For as many strong women as she has portrayed, she found Carolyn a unique role, maintaining that she has little desire "to pull from other parts. Particularly for a woman on television, there's an expectation that you fall in line within particular roles, but I wanted something new and something I had to grasp as I went along."

The making of "Justified: City Primeval" had an alarming interruption when several cars involved in a shootout reached a Chicago location where filming was under way. (Security was enhanced following the incident.) Ellis recalls, with evident relief, that she "had just left to go to another location. I was so upset and so angry, and just scared to death for everybody I worked with. They were literally running for their lives. It was terrifying."

Following her appearances in such other series as "Lovecraft Country," "When They See Us" and "True Blood" — and movies including "Ray," "The Help" and "If Beale Street Could Talk" — Ellis is having a very visible professional year. The existing two seasons of the former AMC drama series "61st Street," in which she appears, have been picked up for upcoming telecast on The CW. She also plays Mama in the film of the stage-musical version of "The Color Purple," slated for release on Christmas Day.

"I like being able to jump into different worlds, not just different characters," Ellis says, "and that's what I appreciate about 'Justified.' There's world-building there, and that happens a lot with something that is adapted from a novel, because that's what authors do. They can take the space and time to develop a world."

Checking in with ZAC EFRON

Zac Efron may not always get credit for it, but his career has been marked by considerable versatility.

For someone whose fame really began with Disney's "High School Musical" franchise (though he had done the series "Summerland" prior to that), the actor frequently has zigged when others might have expected him to zag. A perfect example of that is "Down to Earth With Zac Efron," his Daytime Emmy Award-winning, unscripted series that originally ran on Netflix over two seasons. It's now resurfacing as part of the summer lineup on The CW, where it will air beginning Tuesday, July 18.

"Down to Earth" is in large part a travelogue, with Efron and wellness expert Darin Olien — who also are among the show's executive producers — venturing to various countries and playing traditional tourists while also examining the sites' relevance to nature, energy and sustainability. The itinerary for the first season (which debuted in 2020) began in Iceland, with subsequent episodes set in France, Costa Rica, Sardinia, Lima, Puerto Rico, London and the Peruvian city Iquitos.

The second season of "Down to Earth" arrived in the fall of 2022 and included the subtitle "Down Under," and for good reason: It was set entirely in Australia, where Efron relocated from Los Angeles, with lots of territory covered (quite literally) in the eight episodes. It also was nominated for outstanding travel, adventure and nature program, and for all of the information it presents, it hinges largely on Efron's personality. He received Daytime Emmy nominations of his own for both seasons as the show's host.

It's yet to be decided if or how Efron might continue in the reality realm (he has his own YouTube channel), but the broadcast premiere of "Down to Earth With Zac Efron" could play a role in helping to determine that.
