'The Neighborhood' moves into its 100th episode

Some people stay in their neighborhoods for a long time ... and as the show's 100th episode affirms, that's also true of those in television's "The Neighborhood."

Directed by star and executive producer Cedric the Entertainer, the CBS sitcom's milestone story airs Monday, April 10, as the series nears the end of its fifth season. While Calvin (Cedric) tries to find the perfect birthday gift for wife Tina (Tichina Arnold) – which he has failed miserably at doing the past – neighbor Gemma (Beth Behrs) tries to get Jerry O'Connell (appearing as himself) to donate tickets to his CBS show "The Talk," for a fundraiser where she's the principal and his children are students.

Max Greenfield, Sheaun McKinney, Marcel Spears and Hank Greenspan also are regular cast members in "The Neighborhood," which already has been renewed for a sixth season. The show has endured through multiple changes of executive producers (including series creator Jim Reynolds), and Cedric acknowledges that reaching 100 episodes is "very rare in the business of television these days, so we don't take it for granted."

Though humor is the main suit of "The Neighborhood," the show gets topical reasonably frequently. "In order to really get to the show that we were intending to do," Cedric explains, "(we had to) show the contentious nature of what happens when people just assume somebody is different from you because of skin color, religion, background, whatever. We kind of live in a culture where, 'If somebody is different from me, I don't like them.'

"It takes you back to the early Norman Lear shows ... 'All in the Family,' 'The Jeffersons.' That was very intentional in the way we wanted to approach the show, especially me."

However, Cedric notes that as the casting and the overall work process continued, that helped shaped what "The Neighborhood" has become: "We enjoyed each other. We laughed a lot. We got each other's sense of humor, and so it's harder to act that (tension) when you have this kind of natural connection."

Co-star Behrs agrees, reflecting, "There is a certain camaraderie here and a certain amount of fun. There's never a day where I wake up and I'm bummed to go to work. No matter what's happening in my personal life, I come here and I laugh all day long with these people."

The on-air result makes actor Greenfield wistful about the atmosphere the series promotes, since he notes, "I grew up in a neighborhood where we definitely knew our neighbors. You were able to walk around the town, and it felt like I had a lot more freedom back then. And now, I know none of my neighbors. And I care not to."

celebrity scoop

Recently, "CBS Saturday Morning" co-host Michelle Miller took an at-times painful journey into her past to write her memoir "Belonging: A Daughter's Search for Identity Through Loss and Love."

In the book, she describes her decades-long quest to reconnect with the mother that abandoned her at birth and to this day won't acknowledge her, and how her search for answers forced her to come to grips with her own identity as well as the secrets that have shaped her family for half a century.

In a recent interview with co-host Dana Jacobson on "CBS Saturday Morning," Miller fought back tears as she told her intensely personal story, one that apparently hit home with the book-buying public, as she found out at a recent book signing.

"Every other person told me this was their story," Miller says. "They were left behind, they are estranged, they are separated, they don't know who their parents are. The woman who drove me to my MSNBC interview told me she has not been acknowledged. ... So when I tell you that there are a wealth of people who I believe are living with secrets, living inside the reservoir of shame about their circumstances, living in pain, living in absence – man, I'm overwhelmed by the sheer numbers. I feel better about telling the story."

Miller's story also left co-hosts Jacobson and Jeff Glor visibly moved on that same telecast, and she considers her colleagues family of another kind.

"We work together in a way that complements one another," she says. "We stretch each other. And it is a space that I hope to help to improve, we help to counsel one another, we help to tell each other what's wrong and what we need to fix. ... It's an operation that you have relationships that matter and that mean more than just a 9 to 5. I mean, people are there for one another in a way that I haven't seen elsewhere."

Name: Michelle Miller Birth date: Dec. 8, 1967 Birthplace: Los Angeles

Education: Has a bachelor's degree in journalism from Howard University and Master's degree in urban studies from the University of New Orleans Page 4C - April 9 to April 15

Movie: Black Adam

Dwayne Johnson lets his famous brawn do much of the talking in this effects-packed adventure, casting him as the title DC Comics character who has to determine whether to use his powers for good or evil upon his being freed from thousands of years of entombment. A very valuable crown becomes part of his quest to re-establish himself, though others are sold on the notion that he is much more villain than hero, a thought that many of his actions seem to underscore.
