Conan O'Brien says goodbye to late-night TV ... again

Playing spoiled socialite Alexis Rose in the 2015-20 comedy "Schitt's Creek" was a career-making role for Annie Murphy, resulting in a 2020 Emmy for best supporting actress in a comedy series. But it wasn't something she was looking to repeat – or even come close to.

So when along came the role of agreeable sitcom wife/ unfulfilled blue collar woman Allison McRoberts in the innovative comedy/drama hybrid "Kevin Can F... Himself," which airs Mondays on AMC and streams on AMC+, she embraced the departure. And she found going from multicamera sitcom to single-camera drama and back again to be easier than she anticipated.

"On multi-cam days I'm like I don't really have to prepare because I only have three lines," the 34-year-old Canadian actress explains. "You know, because it's so focused on the dudes who do such an incredible job. Eric (Petersen, who plays Kevin), in particular, is just so, so strong with the physical comedy. And so, he's just run ragged during his days of work. But, yeah, Mary Hollis (Inboden, who plays neighbor Patty) and I kind of like,

Conan O'Brien is no stranger to signing off from hosting a talk show, but that probably doesn't make it any easier for him now.

Famously a relative unknown (though he had written for "Saturday Night Live" and "The Simpsons") when he was tapped to succeed David Letterman in NBC's late-late-night slot in 1993, the gangly redhead won over an audience – primarily a young one – with his offbeat humor and eye for production. He then inherited "The Tonight Show" after Jay Leno left ... only for Leno to return and O'Brien to elect to leave NBC. After nearly 11 years, and despite the fact that it had been renewed through 2022, O'Brien's subsequent talk show "Conan" will end its TBS run Thursday, June 24.

While the almost-every-weeknight (except Fridays) "Conan" began traditionally in its structure, starting its hour with a topical monologue and then proceeding through comedy bits and celebrity interviews, its main difference has been (as it has in all of his talkshow ventures) O'Brien himself. Working within the genre's familiar format while eschewing it as much as he could (with assists from his affable longtime sidekick, Andy Richter), he has distinguished the program in part by taking it on location fairly often. And to some locations quite out of the ordinary, moreover.

First, O'Brien emulated talk-show legend Jack Paar by taking "Conan" to Cuba in 2005. Later that year, he went to Armenia (his assistant's native land), and subsequent years and episodes have seen him visit Qatar, Korea, Berlin, Mexico, Israel, Haiti, Italy, Japan, Australia, Ghana and Greenland.

That's a lot of passport-stamping, but at the start of 2019, "Conan's" length was reduced from an hour to a half-hour, loosening typical constraints of a talk show in a number of ways. O'Brien's wardrobe was more casual, and the host's desk was jettisoned ... decisions that would play through later when O'Brien did the show from his home during the start of the coronavirus pandemic. In July 2020, production moved to Los Angeles' Coronet Theater, where O'Brien did improvisational comedy early in his career.

Even though O'Brien is ending "Conan," he's not ready to give up being a public presence completely, understandable from his obvious appreciation of the media. He'll be staying in the WarnerMedia "family" by moving to the HBO Max streaming service, where he will produce a weekly series described as being in the variety genre.

While that may give O'Brien an easier schedule, the pace of doing a nightly program may turn out to be something he will miss, having done it for so long – so after the talk-show rebirths he's already had, don't be surprised if another lies in wait for him.

you know, sink into the background in multi-cam. And then when we're in single-cam, it's kind of our own world."

And Allison's world is a not happy one. When she's not living in Kevin's world as his personal straight woman in the comedy, she's wallowing in an unhappy situation in the drama. For Murphy, that's a serious message that both men and woman can take away.

"It just felt like a show that's going to entertain but it's also going to really make people think," she says.

There are still 15 chefs in play during tonight's new episode, but the legend in the spotlight, Iron Chef Masaharu Morimoto. really sets the bar high with a demonstration of his special monkfish dish. After they've seen this culinary master demonstrate his technique, the nervous "cheftestants" are desperate to deliver an impressive recreation for their first elimination challenge. Chef Morimoto joins the judging panel of Gordon Ramsay, Joe Bastianich and Aarón Sánchez to decide

Movie: Doomsday Mom: The Lori Vallow Story Idaho wife and mother Lori Val-

low (Lauren Lee Smith, "Frankie Drake Mysteries") attracts national attention after her two children go missing from their home in fall of 2019. The discovery that Lori and her husband, Chad Daybell (Marc Blucas, "The Fix"), are members of a "doomsday prepper" group sends investigators down a twisting road that spans five states and several dubious deaths. The following June, the backyard of Chad's cock's 2021 neo-noir crime thriller boasts strong performances from three Academy Award-winning actors. Denzel Washington and Rami Malek star as a pair of police detectives who are investigating a string of murders in 1990 Los Angeles. The trail of clues eventually takes them to a strange loner (Jared Leto) they suspect may be the killer. Leto's performance here earned him best supporting actor nominations at the Golden Globe and Screen Actors Guild Awards.
