Looking back on great Super Bowl plays after a year of uncertainty

Like just about everything in American life the last year, Super Bowl LV will look different.

Indeed, when the Kansas City Chiefs and Tampa Bay Buccaneers square off in the NFL title game on Sunday, Feb. 7, on CBS, both teams, announcers Jim Nantz and Tony Romo and viewers at home will likely be seeing a Raymond James Stadium in Tampa, Fla., that will be filled to only 20 percent of its approximately 66,000-fan capacity, meaning about 13,000 attendees and a lot of cardboard figures. This per league pandemic protocols, and as usual, that could change by kickoff.

But what is known is there will likely be a play, a drive or a defensive stand that will have everyone talking Monday morning. It could be a seemingly impossible catch on fourth and long, a key interception in the closing seconds or a long field goal as time runs out. But it will be something for which this game will be remembered.

The following are a few from Super Bowls past that stand out.

"The Tackle" (Super Bowl XXXIV: St. Louis Rams vs. Tennessee Titans, 2000): Ahead 23-16 with 10 seconds remaining, Rams linebacker Mike Jones brought down Titans wide receiver Kevin Dyson one-yard shy of the goal line as time ran out, thus preserving the Rams' heart-stopping victory.

"The Helmet Catch" (Super Bowl XLII: New England Patriots vs. New York Giants, 2008): Giants WR David Tyree hauls down a 32-yard pass from Eli Manning, pinning the ball against his helmet as he fell, a critical closingseconds play that kept the gamewinning drive alive in New York's 17-14 upset of the previously undefeated Pats.

"The Stop" (Super Bowl XVI: Cincinnati Bengals vs. San Francisco 49ers, 1982): It was only one yard the Bengals needed to get into the end zone and back into what was a 20-7 game in the third quarter. But the defense didn't give an inch in four plays, the Niners regained possession and went on to a 26-21 victory.

"Elway's Helicopter Spin" (Super Bowl XXXII: Denver Broncos vs. Green Bay Packers, 1998): At third and six from the Packers' 12 in the third quarter of a tie game, Broncos quarterback John Elway's decision to leap head-first over a trio of Packers defenders resulted in a spinning first down - and ultimately the game-deciding drive in a 31-24 Denver

"Riggins' Run" (Super Bowl XVII: Miami Dolphins vs. Washington Redskins, 1983): Down 17-13 and needing a yard to continue a third quarter drive, Washington called on bruising running back John Riggins to go off tackle to get the first down. But he did a little better, bouncing off defenders and rambling 43 yards for the score in a Washington 27-17 win.

"The Ambush": (Super Bowl XLIV: Indianapolis Colts vs. New Orleans Saints, 2010): After watching his team sleep-walk through two quarters, Saints coach Sean Payton called for a onside kick to start the second half. The gutsy move paid off as New Orleans recovered, drove down the field for a touchdown that gave them the lead and momentum in what would become a Saints 31-17 victory.

Even when he's not in character as "Black Lightning," Cress Williams likes to keep his body in top condition.

Indeed, the 50-year-old star of The CW action series, which returns for its fourth and final season Monday, Feb. 8, watches what he eats and works out six days a week in the gym in his Atlanta-area home. It's a habit that's deeply ingrained in his lifestyle and something he misses when he can't do it.

"Even before the show came about, I think right around when I turned 40, I really got into health and fitness and really kind of cracked the codebook, diet and exercise-wise," the 50-year-old actor explains. "And I built a home gym like back in 2013 so I've always had one, which is really good during these COVID times, so working out is something I just have always done and it's like a big part of my life and I really enjoy it. So that's been easy and it's something I'll just maintain long after the show is gone."

Details are few regarding what's in store for the series' final season, save that one episode will reportedly serve as a backdoor pilot for Jordan Calloway's character of Painkiller, who was revealed to still be alive at the end of Season 3.

As for Jefferson/Black Lightning, he'll be dealing with the loss of Chief Henderson (former cast member Damon Gupton), who was killed saving Black Lightning's life in the Season 3 finale.

"(He's) feeling guilty about that and just trying to reconcile that ...," Williams says. "Henderson was like his closest male friend so that's really what he's wrestling with in the very beginning."

One Deadly Mistake

In a new episode called "Hidden in Plain Sight," homicide detectives in Chicopee, Mass., definitely aren't lacking for viable suspects after a free-spirited young woman who appeared to have no enemies is found murdered in the kitchen of her home. After the initial investigation fails to turn up any conclusive evidence, the police belatedly realize that the clue they've needed to identify the killer is actually right there under their noses.

A Wild Year On Earth

The vast arctic ice sheets start to thaw and crash as the frigid mass begins moving toward the shore during July's iceberg-calving season in the new episode "July-August: A Time of Migration." The subsequent summer months on the Arctic island of Svalbard near Norway is a time when migrating seabirds revel in nutrients from the rich icemelt water, while a wily Arctic fox adapts its hunting style to the short summer season. Laura Carmichael ("Downton Abbev") narrates.
