Kevin Bacon lets music 'Play On' to do good in new CBS special

While he may be better known for making movies, Kevin Bacon also makes music.

Partnered melodically with sibling Michael as the Bacon Brothers, the veteran of such films as "Footloose" and "Apollo 13" combines his love of song with his philanthropy as a co-host (with Eve) and executive producer of "Play On: Celebrating the Power of Music to Make Change," a CBS concert special airing Saturday, Dec. 5. A wide-ranging lineup of artists performs from three cities to raise funds (through Bacon's SixDegrees.org initiative) to benefit WhyHunger and the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, Inc.

"There's a yearly fundraiser in New York called Love Rocks NYC," Bacon explains of aligning with its producers for the "Play On" hour, "and the Bacon Brothers played it one year, then I went back and did some announcing for it. (Those organizers) came up with the idea of doing a television event in the early days of the coronavirus pandemic, trying to put music out there and raise money for some good causes."

Bringing it to fruition as "Play On" has been "very, very challenging," allows Bacon, "and the fact that it's coming together gives us all a great sense of satisfaction." The event's executive producers also include LL Cool J and "CBS This Morning" co-anchor (and music buff) Anthony Mason.

Bon Jovi, Maren Morris, Sheryl Crow, Yola (backed by The Highwomen), Snoop Dogg, Ziggy Marley, Andra Day, Gary Clark Jr. and Jon Batiste are among talents the special showcases at three legendary sites: New York's Apollo Theater, Los Angeles' Troubadour and Nashville's Bluebird Cafe. Bacon notes such venues "have been hurting" during the pandemic: "I've played at two of them and been to all three, so we're highlighting them as well."

Bacon currently is at work on the second season of the Boston-based Showtime drama series "City on a Hill," while wife Kyra Sedgwick is on the opposite coast filming her upcoming ABC sitcom "Call Your Mother." Also with movie projects lined up as either an actor or a director, Bacon says he's glad to get back to business, though he realizes these uncertain times could put another halt to that at any point.

For the moment, though, Bacon maintains that "Play On" is "a show that I would be front-and-center for even if I had nothing to do with it. I would watch it live, I would put it on my DVR – even before this pandemic, I didn't feel there was enough live music on television. I grew up watching 'Don Kirshner's Rock Concert' and 'The Midnight Special' and, later on, 'Austin City Limits.' Here, you'll see great performances and the music will be really strong, and that's important to us."

Conventional wisdom has it that for an actor to be able to play a character, they have find some common ground with them.

For Grayson Gurnsey, who plays bar back Ricky in the drama series "Virgin River," currently streaming its second season on Netflix, that wasn't difficult.

"He reminds me a lot of how I was when I was young," the 20-year-old Calgary native explains, "in the way that he would interact with girls and the way he would be very shy. Like I was very shy when I was younger and it feels a lot like what I was like when I was young So he's like at least a solid 40 percent. He could be as high as 55 percent of me, which just makes this so easy because I can walk on the set and I can go, 'Yeah, this is who I am' and just kind of be there for the other actors and you don't have to worry about what my intentions are because I'm just being myself."

In the new season, Gurnsey becomes a cast regular with Ricky getting his own arc. As for what is in store for the character, the actor demurred, lest he give away spoilers. But he does admit there will be a new love interest in his life in Lizzie, played by Canadian actress Sarah Dugdale.

"I think it's a great story and it's very close to the books," Gurnsey says, "... and I love where they're going with this, to be honest, and this story arc between the two of them is very interesting. And I think it will work very well with the rest of the story and the other arcs very well. And yeah, I can't wait for it to be shown to everyone."
