Home is far 'Away' for Hilary Swank in Netflix space saga

"Star Trek" already was in his family, but Jerry O'Connell didn't know a cartoon would draw him into the franchise, too.

While wife Rebecca Romijn has appeared as Number One on "Star Trek: Discovery," the veteran of series from "Sliders" to "Billions" now lends his voice to the animated Commander Jack Ransom on CBS All Access' Thursday series "Star Trek: Lower Decks," a lighthearted take on Gene Roddenberry's original concept. Despite his Starfleet designation, Ransom rarely plays by the rules, giving O'Connell license to have fun with the part.

"I have a healthy fear of the 'Star Trek' fan base," the goodhumored O'Connell allows. "I think of them often. I don't want to offend them, obviously, but I want my work to be up to their standards. I want to be able to look them in the eye, when we're all allowed to be together again, and not get yelled at."

Indeed, O'Connell reasons that "Star Trek' belongs to the fans. If you break it down from a business standpoint, it's owned by CBS or whatever ... but really, it's owned by the fans. And every decision I make as an actor is for the people I work for. CBS may sign the checks, but I consider the fans to be my superiors."

Space may not be the final frontier for Hilary Swank, but it certainly is her next one.

The two-time Oscar winner heads the cast as her character leads a mission to Mars in "Away," a Netflix drama series that begins streaming Friday, Sept. 4. Crossing the cosmos with an international crew means being away from her husband ("The Good Wife" alum Josh Charles) and teenage daughter (Talitha Bateman) for Emma Green (Swank), who often struggles with her torn emotions en route to the "Red Planet." Ato Essandoh, Vivian Wu, Mark Ivanir and Ray Panthaki play her fellow astronauts, who have their own personal concerns.

Also an executive producer of "Away," Swank says she was drawn to Emma being written as "an immensely deep, layered human being. I love that the commander of this mission to Mars is a woman and that's not the drama of the story. I think that shows how far we've come working towards equality.

"The drama is these richly different racial backgrounds," adds Swank, "these people who are on this journey working towards a goal together while having this gravitational pull to Earth, all having these families that make it a love story. That's one of the big reasons I wanted to come onboard not only as an actor, but as an executive producer."

"Parenthood" and "Friday Night Lights" veteran Jason Katims also is among "Away's" executive producers, and he reasons that the saga has even more relevance in the age of the coronavirus pandemic.

"We shot the first season of the show, and then we were in post-production," Katims reflects, "and a few months ago, we all had to go home and we worked remotely. Editors and producers and visual-effects people were all sending notes and cuts back and forth to each other, and we were trying to figure out how to do something without having the normal human interaction that's so important to the creative process and to life.

"Suddenly, when we started to re-watch these cuts in this context, the show started to resonate in a way that we never imagined before ... like, the idea of not being able to be with the people that are most important to you."

However, "Away" writer and executive producer Andrew Hinderaker believes that optimism also is a huge element of the drama. Basing it partially on a magazine article about astronaut Scott Kelly's preparation for a year aboard the International Space Station, he says, "Now, more than ever, is the time to remember what we're capable of and what happens when we believe in science and when the world works together. We're in just such a prime moment to capture that space-exploration excitement, absolutely."

To that end, O'Connell feels fortunate to be playing a new role, though with some similarities to Jonathan Frakes' Will Riker on "Star Trek: The Next Generation." He notes, "When you work in 'Star Trek,' you want to act like you know more than you really do, so I tend not to ask that many questions. I just nod a lot."

SUNDAY EVENING

8 p.m. on 32; 12 a.m. on 32 Paranormal Caught on Camera A father and son manage to record tangible evidence of what looks to be a monster in a Canadian lake in the new episode "An Ogopogo Sighting and More." In other stories, a doorbell security camera captures a terrifying scene of fiery orbs falling from the

the restless spirits of a murdered family in Nevada. 8 p.m. on (401); 10:30 p.m. on 401; 1 a.m. on 401

Lovecraft Country Leti (Jurnee Smollett) transforms

a ramshackle Victorian on Chicago's North Side into a boarding house in a gesture she hopes will help mend fences with her sister Ruby (guest star Wunmi Mosaku) in the new episode "Holy Ghost." Unfortunately, the project only stokes racism in the neighborhood and awakens trapped spirits that have lain dormant in the house. Meanwhile, George's wife, Hippolyta (guest star Aunianue Ellis) pressures Atticus (Jonathan Majors) for details about what happened in 8 p.m. on (435); 10 p.m. on

(435); 12:30 a.m. on (435) Love Fraud This new four-part true-crime docuseries from filmmakers

Heidi Ewing and Rachel Grady chronicles the disreputable exploits of con man Richard Scott Smith, a charmer who wrecked the lives of several women who fell under the spell of this cad. Ultimately Smith is forced to go on the run, while his diverse victims find a common bond in their burning need to put this scoundrel behind bars. The premiere, "You Just Gotta Trust Me." centers on Tracy, whose daughters were leery of "Mickey" (Smith's alias) almost from the beginning. 8:01 p.m. on 33;

11 p.m. on 33 Mexico Life

After scrimping and saving for years, a Texas couple finally is ready and able to realize their dream of purchasing a home in Tulum in a new episode called "Love Nest in Tulum." She's focused on finding a place large enough for their three energetic teenagers, but her husband is thinking ahead and envisioning a low-maintenance love nest for just the two of them after the kids have flown the nest. Another new episode follows.
