coverstory
BY GEORGE DICKIE

"Broke" premieres Thursday on CBS.

Anyone who has followed Natasha Leggero's career knows she likes to mine class differences for laughs, be it in her stand-up comedy or film and TV roles. Which makes her latest project right up her alley.

In the multi-camera comedy "Broke," premiering Thursday, April 2, on CBS, Leggero ("Another Period," "The Do-Over") co-stars with Pauley Perrette ("NCIS") as Elizabeth and Jackie, working-class sisters who took divergent paths in life. While Elizabeth apparently married well with Javier (Jaime Camil, "Jane the Virgin"), stunningly handsome and heir to a Mexican family fortune, Jackie is a struggling single mom and divorcee with a young son and a ramshackle house in the Los Angeles suburb of Reseda.

But it turns out Elizabeth's life isn't so great, either. Spendthrifts and wastrels, they've gone through all of Javier's trust-fund money and Daddy has cut them off. With nary a dime to their name, they turn up on Jackie's doorstep seeking refuge – and Jackie isn't all that crazy about taking the people she resentfully refers to as "Aunt Hoity and Uncle Toity," as well as their manservant Luis (Izzy Diaz, "Telenovela"), in. But she does so – grudgingly.

The role gave Leggero the chance to play to her own strength to paint Elizabeth as a nouveau-riche princess with a full catalog of affectations, who is embarrassed by her working-class background and horrified by her new surroundings.

"I've always been obsessed with class," Leggero explains. "And even if you're not a certain class, why can't you just act like you're that class? And that's a lot of what I have done in my stand-up and so playing this part is really fun for me because it feels like an exact fit."

And those affectations also extend to Elizabeth's refined faux accent.

"I think people who travel a lot can sort of start talking in this Trans-Atlantic accent," Leggero says with a laugh. "And you know, it's just something that I think people who come from nothing try to affect a little bit to try to keep up with the other people who just all went to (elite schools)."

The role brought Leggero into the orbit of Perrette in her first TV role since her 15-season run on "NCIS" ended in 2018. She has high praise for her co-star for her ability to establish connections with everyone in the cast and crew and for the "instant chemistry" that has fostered.

"We did talk on the phone before we met," Leggero says. "She wanted to talk to everybody on the phone before we started shooting because that's just kind of who she is, she's just very down-to-earth. And so we talked for like an hour and she has a sister she's really close to, so I'm sure that helps her, having that close sister relationship."

Natasha Leggero goes 'Broke' in new CBS sitcom

With a much-anticipated "Friends" reunion special also on the horizon for him, Matt LeBlanc's plan these days is to stay happy and satisfied in his work.

Forever television-legendary as Joey Tribbiani of "How you doin'?" fame, the actor returns with the fourth season of his current CBS sitcom "Man With a Plan" Thursday, April 2. He continues his role as Pittsburgh construction-company co-owner Adam Burns, whose understanding of "family" expands with his increased involvement in helping his wife (Liza Snyder) raise their children (Grace Kaufman, Matthew McCann, Hala Finley).

"It's a fun show to work on," the friendly LeBlanc says, "and it's kind of a departure for me. I've always played the single guy or the guy who's not in a relationship and has no kids. Now, this makes sense for me. It's not a high-concept show, it's kind of right down the middle, and it's about the things that happen in life. And from my experience, some pretty funny, crazy things happen."

LeBlanc gives plenty of credit to "Man With a Plan" creators and executive producers Jackie and Jeff Filgo for getting the show to Season 4, deeming them "really smart. I think this season is our best thus far, because we're telling more character-driven stories, and we've figured out where the strengths of the show are."

That's something LeBlanc also knows well from his "Friends" days, and he's looking forward to rejoining his former co-stars to tape the special for the forthcoming HBO Max streaming service. "It's not like another episode, with us playing those characters again," he notes. "It's a celebration, if you will, of what an awesome experience that show was."

Call the Midwife
The funeral of Winston Churchill in January 1965 marks the beginning of this hit drama's ninth season, which sees the midwives facing a potential crisis as Nonnatus House itself comes under threat of demolition. All around them, society is moving at a breakneck pace, with a new East End rising from the ashes of the old. The core characters in the story are tested by new challenges and old diseases. Helen George, Jenny Agutter, Annabelle Apsion, Judy Parfitt and Linda Bassett lead the large ensemble.

 When Trevor (guest star Rainn Wilson), Bonnie's (Allison Janney) therapist, hits a serious rough patch in his life, she starts to worry that he might benefit from some time on a shrink's couch himself in the new episode “Texas Pete and a Parking Lot Carnival.” Meanwhile, Christy (Anna Faris) attempts to help Marjorie (Mimi Kennedy) when the latter has a really hard time adjusting to a new job. Jaime Pressly, William Fichtner and Kristen Johnston also star.

Broke
 After a long run as quirky forensic scientist Abby Sciuto on the CBS procedural drama “NCIS,” Pauley Perrette switches gears as she returns to the same network in this new sitcom, which casts her as Jackie, a single suburban mom who is completely rocked when her long-estranged sister, Elizabeth (Natasha Leggero, “Another Period”) appears at her door with hubby Javier (Jaime Camil, “Jane the Virgin”) in tow. The latter couple have blown through a sizable fortune and need a place to stay. Izzy Diaz co-stars.

How to Get Away With Murder
 Last November's midseason finale ended on a huge cliffhanger, with Wes Gibbons (Alfred Enoch), a character previously believed dead, showing up very much alive in a flash-forward to the funeral of Annalise Keating (Viola Davis), although earlier in that episode we had seen her fleeing for Philadelphia. As the sixth and final season begins, two of Annalise's students are arrested for the murder of Asher Millstone (Matt McGorry).

Movie: Good Boys

Co-screenwriter Gene Stupnitsky also made his well-received directorial debut with this charming 2019 coming-of-age comedy about three close-knit sixth-graders (Jacob Tremblay from "Room," Keith L. Williams and Brady Noon) who resort to desperate measures to sneak out and attend a party hosted by one of their A-list classmates. Will Forte, Molly Gordon, Lil Rel Howery, Retta, Michaela Watkins and Sam Richardson ("Veep") also are featured.

Movie: You're Bacon Me Crazy

Budding chef Cleo Morelli (Natalie Hall, "Charmed") has scored a success with Portland, Ore., foodies with the fresh sandwiches she serves at her busy food truck, so she's a little thrown to discover that Gabe (Michael Rady), her handsome new friend, actually owns a rival food truck that has started parking across the street from Cleo's spot. As the city's first-ever food truck contest nears, Cleo lets her competitive streak take over in a big way. Michael Karl Richards and Casey Manderson co-star in this 2020 romantic comedy.

Movie: The Last Picture Show

Peter Bogdanovich made the directing A-list with this 1971 drama of despair and deviance in a small Texas town in the early 1950s. Ben Johnson and Cloris Leachman won Oscars for their performances as, respectively, the town patriarch and a neglected housewife romanced and rejected by a local teen (Timothy Bottoms). Cybill Shepherd made her acting debut as a conniving rich girl who comes between Bottoms' character and his best friend (Jeff Bridges).

Line of Duty

Ranked in multiple U.K. critics polls as one of the best police dramas ever, this first-rate British series makes its AMC debut with the show's first season, which opens as Detective Sgt. Steve Arnott (Martin Compston) is transferred to the Anti-Corruption Unit after refusing to participate in a cover-up in his prior department. Under the stern supervision of Superintendent Ted Hastings (Adrian Dunbar), Steve and new colleague Detective Constable Katie Fleming (Vicky McClure) investigate corruption in the police ranks. Lennie James also stars.
