A new era of warfare: 'SEAL Team' returns for explosive final season

A world at war needs saving once again, and the only ones for the job are the brave members of the most elite unit of the Navy SEALs. The long-running military drama series "SEAL Team" concludes its run in a 10-episode final season, premiering exclusively on the Paramount+ streaming service Sunday, Aug. 11. The first two episodes drop on premiere day, with new episodes following weekly on Sundays.

The upcoming seventh season of "SEAL Team" sees Master Chief Special Warfare Operator Jason Hayes (David Boreanaz, "Bones") lead Bravo team on a final mission to defend the United States against enemies abroad. These SEALs take on the most high-stakes missions at the drop of a hat.

In an official trailer for the new season, with blood literally on his hands, Jason ruminates on the violence he's both endured and inflicted as a member of the highly trained unit and toasts "a new era of warfare." He stands strong for his unit but must admit the voices questioning how he can keep going back into the fire aren't wrong, especially as a widower with two children.

Also returning is Neil Brown Jr. ("Insecure") as Chief Warrant Officer Ray Perry, whose looming retirement has him questioning whether leaving service behind could really be an option for him. Special Warfare Operator Sonny Quinn (A.J. Buckley, "Justified") faces changing tactics and grief this season, while Lt. Lisa Davis (Toni Trucks, "Corporate") directs the team in a new direction that they may not all be ready to embrace.

"Operations like this are the next era of warfare ... invisible tactics with global consequences," Davis explains in the official trailer before emphasizing: "evolve or fall behind."

There's also talk of brotherhood throughout the trailer, with action shots of firefights, explosions and covert operations next to heartfelt moments with the families Bravo team leaves behind when duty calls.

Bravo team is called upon to step in and complete a complicated mission on behalf of its country. Uprooted from their family lives back home, SEAL team members drop everything to fight for peace in a foreign land. This time, part of the season was filmed on location in Colombia.

Season 6 cast addition Raffi Barsoumian ("DC's Legends of Tomorrow") is back as Senior Chief Special Warfare Operator Omar Hamza, whose new responsibilities in the unit help him immerse himself in the work to escape the trauma of his past.

Two new members join the unit for the series' final season. Beau Knapp ("Road House," 2024) is Drew Franklin, a chief special warfare officer; and "Blue Bloods" actor Dylan Walsh puts aside his NYC mayoral duties to slip into character as Capt. Walch.

Returning are Tyler Grey ("Northbound") as Trent Sawyer; Justin Melnick ("Justified: City Primeval") as Brock Reynolds; Alona Tal ("Truth Be Told") as Stella Baxter; and Parisa Fakhri ("What We Do In the Shadows") as Naima Perry.

The cast and crew of "SEAL Team" started saying their goodbyes to Bravo team when it was officially announced by Paramount+ that the series would end with its seventh season back in November of last year.

Boreanaz, also an executive producer of the series, reflected on his time making the show in a statement: "For six seasons I have been fortunate and blessed to be a part of an outstanding cast and crew. Every day spent was a note of thanks to our men and women in the military and Special Ops."

Checking in with OLIVER PLATT

Oliver Platt has been in the acting game for a long time, but he's having an especially fruitful time now.

Soon to enter his 10th season on the Wednesday NBC drama "Chicago Med," he's also seen on the widely acclaimed, FX-produced and Hulu-streamed series "The Bear," and the two roles — both with ties to the Windy City — give him great variety. In "Chicago Med," he plays hospital psychiatric chief Daniel Charles, who has faced plenty of his own challenges while also dealing with colleagues and patients. And in "The Bear," he's Jimmy "Cicero" Kalinowski (or "Uncle Jimmy"), a longtime friend and financial benefactor of the central family that runs a Chicago restaurant.

Canadian native Platt's career dates back to his part as an FBI agent in director Jonathan Demme's 1988 movie "Married to the Mob," and he also had a visible role the same year in the Mike Nichols-directed "Working Girl." Since then, it's been virtually non-stop work for Platt across film, television and stage, and he has earned Primetime Emmy and Tony nominations along the way.

Standout film parts for Platt have included an attorney who tries to draw up an unusual contract for a couple (Woody Harrelson, Demi Moore) who will earn $1 million if the wife spends a night with another man (Robert Redford) in "Indecent Proposal," and an engineer who sneaks aboard an airborne plane with a commando team to defeat terrorist hijackers in "Executive Decision" (1996).

Though TV has had most of Platt's professional attention for the past decade, he still has managed to keep his hand in the movie world. He was featured in the recent comedy "Babes," which marked the feature-directing debut of Pamela Adlon ("Better Things"). With "Chicago Med" returning and "The Bear" confirmed for a forthcoming fourth season, the home screen will remain Platt's home base for at least a while more.
