coverstory

BY DANA SIMPSON

Kristin Scott Thomas as seen in "Slow Horses"

'Horses' welcome Weaving: Acclaimed actor joins 'Slow Horses' Season 4

Apple TV+'s horses may be slow, but they sure are relentless. With plenty of the story left to tell — and having already secured a fifth season from Apple — the British Intelligence-based TV series is back for more deceit, double-crossing and potentially deadly duties. Season 4 of "Slow Horses" premieres its first two episodes Wednesday, Sept. 4, on Apple TV+.

Released and shared on X (formerly Twitter) as soon as last season ended, the Season 4 trailer for "Slow Horses" reveals everything from the threat of a serial bomber in London to a death on the Slough House team and the addition of at least one new character, named Frank Harkness.

Played by Hugo Weaving, who is best known for his roles as people's terrorist V in "V for Vendetta" (2005), Agent Smith in the original Matrix trilogy (1999-2005) and Elrond in Peter Jackson's Lord of the Rings trilogy (2001-2003), Harkness is billed as "one of the most exciting developments in the Apple TV+ show" (per ScreenRant). Developed as a villainous force to be reckoned with, ScreenRant writer Sarah Little points to Weaving's "Slow Horses" character as being poised to possibly "become the best villain the show has ever featured."

Leading man Gary Oldman ("Darkest Hour," 2017), however — unlike his character, Jackson Lamb — is simply delighted to be back at it again on television.

"Some of the best stuff you see is on your television screen," Oldman shared during a TV news event, adding, "I love long-form."

During the same event, as reported by IndieWire journalist Ben Travers in May of this year, Oldman revealed that he had always wished to "revisit a character" on an episodic basis. Luckily, "Slow Horses," his first leading television role, has offered him the perfect chance to do exactly that. And given the recent renewal of a fifth season, it seems there will be plenty more of disgraced (at times disgraceful) MI5 Agent Lamb to go around. In fact, Oldman has said he would be happy to play Lamb until Apple TV+ exhausted the Slough House source material by author Mick Herron.

"If they're [Apple TV+] happy to keep us on the air, then I'm very happy to ... do all eight books," Oldman told the panel of entertainment reporters during the aforementioned press junket earlier this year. "And since we started, [Herron] has written another one, so who knows? Maybe it'll be nine books, and I'll be happy to play Jackson Lamb [in all of them.]"

Based on the Slough House book series by Herron, "Slow Horses" Season 4 also stars Saskia Reeves ("Luther"), Kristin Scott Thomas ("Gosford Park," 2001), Christopher Chung ("Waterloo Road"), Rosalind Eleazar ("Howards End"), Sophie Okonedo ("The Wheel of Time"), Aimee-Ffion Edwards ("Peaky Blinders"), Kadiff Kirwan ("Chewing Gum") and Ruth Bradley ("Ted Lasso").

Checking in with LAROYCE HAWKINS

With Hailey Upton (Tracy Spiridakos, "Revolution") gone from "Chicago P.D.," there's room for another detective in the unit ... but who will it be?

"It would be nice to get a detective in the unit who's homegrown," says LaRoyce Hawkins, who has played Officer Kevin Atwater from the beginning of the Dick Wolf-produced NBC series. As the Wednesday police drama nears the Sept. 25 debut of its 12th season, Hawkins talks about Atwater and other characters who have yet to get a promotion to detective: "Whether it was Atwater or Burgess [played by Marina Squerciati, "Marshall," 2017] or Ruzek [Patrick John Flueger, "The 4400"], I'd be happy for whoever takes that next step. Hopefully, we'll see that."

Still, Hawkins laments the departure of Spiridakos. "It's always tough," he says of such cast exits, "and because it is so tough for us as a unit, I think that's what also makes it tough for the audience. We love working with each other, and hopefully, that shows. And I think that informs the audience about how to feel when somebody leaves. If we weren't so tight, I'm not sure if anybody would care who came or went."

As "Chicago P.D." (also shown in repeats on USA Network and ION Television) has unfolded, Atwater certainly has had his share of situations to deal with. To cite examples, while taking care of his younger brother and sister on the personal side, he has run afoul of some corrupt cops by being willing to testify about what he has witnessed on the professional front.

"He's got a full plate, a lot on his shoulders," Hawkins notes of his "Chicago P.D." alter ego. "Atwater is the type who doesn't let things go. He holds on extremely tight, and I think that moving forward, he's going to try to find himself in a place where he can let go a little more ... but he'll always be good at holding on. That's who he is and how he's built."

Other television credits include: "Chicago Fire," "Chicago Med," "South Side," "Ballers," "Underemployed," "Detroit 1-8-7"

Movie credits include: "North of the 10," "Hands Up," "The Killing of Kenneth Chamberlain," "Hope Springs Eternal," "Canal Street," "The Express: The Ernie Davis Story"
