FRESH fruits and vegetables don't have to be expensive if you buy them in season and many are in season year round. To learn more, visit www.sdharvestofthemonth.com

FROZEN fruits and vegetables are packed and frozen within hours of harvest, so they don't lose their flavor or nutritional value. Try steaming vegetables in the microwave or stovetop rather than boiling to keep in more nutrients.

CANNED fruits and vegetables often get a bad rap but they are still nutritious. Choose 100% fruit juice with no added sugar and vegetables with no sale added. Remember to drain the water, juice, or syrup and rinse with water to help remove some of the extra sugar and salt.

On new territory: Kaitlin Olson has 'High Potential' in ABC series

Kaitlin Olson is ready to be sunny, as well as sleuthy, somewhere else.

The longtime co-star of the FXX sitcom "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia" has done extra duty before in her own series — Fox's "The Mick" — and she's now doing it again. ABC's seriocomic "High Potential" premieres Tuesday, Sept. 17, casting Olson as crime-scene cleaner Morgan, a single mother who solves cases in her own unconventional manner. To her surprise, police officials believe they can benefit from her skills and partner her with Karadec, a veteran detective played by "Rescue Me" alum Daniel Sunjata Adapted from the French series "HPI — Haut Potentiel Intellectuel," the show also features Judy Reyes ("Scrubs") as the duo's boss, Selena, and Taran Killam ("Saturday Night Live") as Morgan's ex, Ludo.

Also a producer of "High Potential," the lively and friendly Olson says, "I don't know that there was much of a process" in her making Morgan a separate character from "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia's" Dee.

"This woman has some similarities, very flawed, very mouthy ... but this woman is very grounded. She is a very loving mother. I'm a very loving mother. That wasn't so hard to jump into. It's just acting, so it's different, but it wasn't challenging. I didn't need to do any reprogramming."

Executive producer Drew Goddard, known for shows like "Lost" and "Alias," developed "High Potential" from its French forerunner, and he maintains that "part of the joy" of the series, "and this is in the French show as well, [is that] you feel the stress of Morgan's dilemma of,

'How do I get my kids to school and solve a murder at the same time?' To me, it's the soul of the show. I'm not that interested in plot, in a traditional sense. I'm interested in character and soul, so I always start from a place of character."

Olson maintains that "High Potential's" Morgan has a logical place in the line of roles she has played. "I love an underdog," she explains. "I love a character who is so deeply insecure that she acts out. Back when I was in first grade, I was a very insecure kid, and I've known from consciousness that I wanted to act. I don't know why. Then I discovered theater, but I was so shy that I never even attempted it. I didn't audition for a play at school until high school.

"So there was this inner weird balance between, 'I know I have this thing that I can do' and 'I'm way too shy and insecure to be vulnerable enough to open that up for other people to shoot me down.' That's always kind of been in there, so maybe that's why I'm drawn to characters like this. I just also find a more layered character so much more interesting, with complete opposites smashed into one person. I just like that."

Fans of "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia" (created by fellow star Rob McElhenney, who is Olson's husband) can rest assured of Olson's continuing presence in that show. It films near the "High Potential" set, and she has reserved several days to work exclusively on it when it resumes production for its 17th season. Asked if she'll ever separate fully from "Sunny," she leaves no doubt of her feeling: "No, no, no, no, no, Til never do that."

Ashley Williams has done many cable movie roles, but no other has likely been as per-

The Hallmark Channel regular returns in the new film "Falling Together," which makes its premiere on the network Saturday, Sept. 21 — appropriately timed for World Alzhaimer's Day.

The late mother of Williams and her fellow actress sister, Kimberly Williams-Paisley ("Father of the Bride," 1991), had Alzheimer's disease, and in the movie, Ashley's newly relocated character, Natalie, becomes involved in a Walk to End Alzheimer's in an effort to get a sense of community after failing to connect with her new neighbors. Paul Campbell ("Three Wise Men and a Baby," 2022) plays superintendent Mark Wallace, Natalie's potential love interest.

While servicing Hallmark Channel's seasonal Fall Into Love franchise, "Falling Together" also meets the channel's intent to expand its subject matter. "There are moments that are incredibly emotional," Ashley Williams confirms, "but it's really not a depressing movie. I look at it as a rom-com. My background is in drama, but I've learned so much from working in comedy over the years, and my favorite thing is blending those genres together."

Also an executive producer of "Falling Together" along with her husband, Neal Dodson ("Margin Call," 2011), the lively Williams has been active in Alzheimer's-related walks and (with her family) an annual Dance Party to End Alz, set this year for Avalon Hollywood in Los Angeles on Oct. 22. A pivotal scene in "Falling Together" features photos of Williams' mother, Linda, and the late parents of two of her close friends and fellow Hallmark Channel staples: Nikki DeLoach's ("Curious Caterer: Foiled Plans," 2024) father, who had dementia, and Andrew Walker's ("For Love & Honey," 2024) mother, who had Alzheimer's.

"There's much to mourn and to be heartbroken about when it relates to this disease," Williams acknowledges, "but the Walk to End Alzheimer's is a joyful occasion where people come together to honor their loved ones, honor the caretakers and raise money. And by the way, walking is one of the best things you can do to ward off dementia, so it's

Staying in the Hallmark family by hosting the forthcoming reality dating series "Small Town Setup" on the new Hallmark+ streaming service, Williams — also a driving force in the company's "Make Her Mark" initiative to mentor female film directors — is grateful for the deep involvement of the Alzheimer's Association in making "Falling Together."

"They were incredible," she maintains. "They sent us everything we needed to stage an entire walk in Vancouver [the movie's filming location], where they don't actually do a walk so this probably was the first done there. And that kicked it up a notch."
