Ravi Cabot-Conyers, Robert Timothy Smith, Jude Law and Kyriana Kratter star in "Star Wars: Skeleton Crew"

An unexpected galactic journey begins in 'Star Wars: Skeleton Crew'

One kid with a big imagination sends himself and his friends on an unbelievable adventure across the galaxy in the new series "Star Wars: Skeleton Crew," premiering on the Disney+ streaming service Tuesday, Dec. 3. Ravi Cabot-Conyers ("Encanto," 2021) stars in the family fantasy show as Wim, a young student on a peaceful planet whose head is firmly planted among the stars. His desire for adventure sends him and his friends KB (Kyriana Kratter, "Bunk'd"), Neel (Robert Timothy Smith, "Mythic Quest") and Fern (Ryan Kiera Armstrong, "Anne With an E") blasting through space.

Deep in a forest, the four friends discover what appears to be an abandoned Jedi temple. Quick to explore it, one wrong step sends them catapulting across the galaxy. Lost in space and trying to find their way home, the kid crew teams up with a possible Jedi, Jod Na Nawood (portrayed by Jude Law, "The New Pope"). Across the eight-episode series, per Disney, "finding their way home — and meeting unlikely allies and enemies — will be a greater adventure than they ever imagined."

Also starring in the new series are Kerry Condon ("The Banshees of Inisherin," 2022) and Tunde Adebimpe ("Twisters," 2024) as Fern's mom, Fara, and Wim's dad, Wendle, respectively. Nick Frost ("The Nevers") lends his voice to droid SM 33, who series co-creator Jon Watts ("The Old Man") described to People in July as "a rusty old, cranky droid that sort of reluctantly helps the kids along the way. ... The other thing about him is that he's the first mate of a mysterious ship."

Law also spoke to People about joining the famed franchise with "Skeleton Crew," saying, "it is a fun place to be, the universe of Star Wars." He added, "there are great references to old films and recent episodes and series. There's a lot of originality and I hope that will bring the feeling of fun to those who watch it."

The words "fun" and "originality" can also be used to describe a big reveal about the series. Episode director David Lowery ("The Green Knight," 2021) told Empire in October that the Teek, creatures only previously seen in the mostly-forgotten Ewok movies from the mid-1980s, make a grand reappearance in the new series. "I was most excited about having hand puppets on set," Lowery said about the practical magic behind the space critters.

"It's the most ancient technology being used with the most cutting-edge technology, simultaneously. That combination was absolutely magical," Lowery shared about mixing media to make both the puppetry and the special effects come to life. About seeing it all come together, he said, "in the final episode it's just a hand puppet in the middle of this crazy Volume set. The cognitive dissonance of seeing those two things together, live in front of you, is absolutely incredible."

BY JAY BOBBIN

Fantasy is more of a factor than usual for Maggie Lawson as she gets back in the holiday movie game.

Adept at both comedy and drama, the former "Psych" co-star has one of the most fanciful of her many Christmas films with "Sugarplummed," debuting Saturday, Dec. 7, on Hallmark Channel. The story is rather meta, involving a movie within the movie as Lawson's character, Emily, wants to create a holiday for her relatives that's as seemingly perfect as the one she sees in — here it comes — a seasonal TV movie, something she's never been quite able to pull off.

To Emily's great surprise, the film's main character, Sugarplum (played by "Pretty Little Liars" alum Janel Parrish), comes to life, determined to make the wish come true. All seems to go well initially, but as happens in so many holiday movies, complications arise en route to a hoped-for happy ending, with Emily eventually reassessing her yuletide goal.

Lawson has made several other holiday tales, appearing in them not only on Hallmark but sometimes on Great American Family. They include "A Lot Like Christmas" (2021), "Christmas in Evergreen: Tidings of Joy" (2019) and "Christmas Encore" (2017), and all of them typically get repeats during the channels' 24/7 marathons of seasonal movies at this time of year.

Of course, Lawson is also a familiar face from her work in weekly TV, and not only from "Psych," in which she played police detective Juliet O'Hara during the show's eight-season run and in its three movie sequels. Among her other series have been the ABC comedies "It's All Relative," "Back in the Game" and "Crumbs," the CBS sitcom "Angel From Hell," a Fox version of the Lethal Weapon action franchise, the Fox comedy "Outmatched" and the NBC sitcom "Inside Schwartz."

"Sugarplummed" proves that Lawson remains game to make Christmas magic, though, and chances are good that it won't be the last time she does.
