Scott Wolf in "Doc"

Doctor's order: Scott Wolf returns to series work in Fox's 'Doc'

Scott Wolf has played doctor before, but not in the way he does in a new series.

The veteran of such shows as "Party of Five" and "Nancy Drew" was a medical man in the then-WB's "Everwood" and NBC's "The Night Shift," and he returns to that profession — and weekly TV work — as a physician with his own agenda in "Doc," a Fox drama premiering Tuesday, Jan. 7. Based on a fact-inspired Italian series "Doc – Nelle tue mani," it casts Molly Parker ("Lost in Space") as Dr. Amy Larsen, a Minneapolis hospital's no-nonsense internal medicine chief who suffers a brain injury in a car accident, erasing the past eight years of her memory.

She's shocked by how much she suddenly can't remember, including her divorce from the facility's chief medical officer, Dr. Michael Hamda (Omar Metwally, "The Affair"). Her colleague Dr. Richard Miller (Wolf) knows she has damaging information on him that could end his career, though she can't remember it now; as he assumes her job while she fights to remain a doctor, he worries that she might eventually recall what she knew.

Charlotte Fountain-Jardim ("Ted") plays the teenage daughter on whom Amy relies to help her fill in missing pieces of her past. "Doc" cast regulars also include Amirah Vann ("How to Get Away With Murder"), Jon-Michael Ecker ("Queen of the South") and Anya Banerjee ("The Blacklist").

The executive producers of "Doc" include Barbie Kligman ("Private Practice") and Hank Steinberg ("Without a Trace"), and they "made it clear that they had no interest in a sort of mustache-twirling, on-the-nose bad guy," Wolf says. "One of the interesting things about the show is that every character in it, including the central one, is a beautiful but flawed human being. There really are no 'good people' or 'bad people' here, just people who are doing the best they can to take care of themselves and their families.

"My character happens to be a good person who has wound up in a very bad situation," the friendly Wolf adds. "Even the most sinister characters within a story never see themselves as bad people. There's always something guiding them to do what they believe in, and in this case, Richard is living parallel lives ... one that he can show everyone and the other that's completely hidden from view. He has to manage himself and bear the burden of himself."

Wolf appreciates that "Doc" lets him continue pursuing the different types of parts he has long sought: "When I finished 'Party of Five' years ago, my biggest worry — as I think it is for any actor who comes off a series that's lasted a significant amount of time — was, 'Is this the only way that people are going to be able to see me?' That character, Bailey Salinger, was an earnest person who wore his heart on his sleeve, so I worried, 'Can I play someone who people can't trust?'"

Shows including "V" and "The Nine" afforded Wolf such opportunities, he believes, "so I feel like I have been utilized in ways that feel interesting [to] me. What happens when you take someone who had a nice-guy face and put him in a role where you're not quite sure how you feel about that person? I think that makes for a fun challenge, and not just for me but also for the audience."

With "Doc," Wolf reasons that he's "taking that to a whole new level. The level of commitment to the secrets that Richard holds is deeper and more powerful than with any other character I've played up to this point. When you're given somebody who has to be two different people from one moment to the next, it's pretty interesting stuff to work from."

Checking in with HODA KOTB

Weekday mornings won't be the same on NBC, simply for the fact that Hoda Kotb will no longer be there.

Though the network has indicated that the energetic and sunny personality may return for special assignments from time to time, she'll end her run as a co-host of "Today" on Friday, Jan. 10. She'll be succeeded as Savannah Guthrie's on-air partner by current "Today" news anchor Craig Melvin, and her imminent departure means that Jenna Bush Hager will also have someone else sitting beside her as the fourth hour of "Today" is retitled "Today With Jenna & Friends," beginning Jan. 13.

Before she started her morning duties, Kotb was a "Dateline NBC" correspondent who contributed to the various platforms of NBC News. She initially joined the "Today" franchise when she was named the first host of the program's fourth weekday hour when it began in the fall of 2007, with Kathie Lee Gifford joining her as a co-host several months later. (Hager would succeed Gifford in 2019.)

In November 2017, Kotb stepped in on extremely short notice to join Guthrie on "Today" when then-co-host Matt Lauer was terminated over allegations of misconduct. Kotb continued in that role for the rest of that year, also maintaining her fourth-hour "Today" duties. That arrangement was made permanent — at least at that time — at the start of 2018.

A single parent of two adopted daughters, Kotb announced last September that she would be leaving "Today," explaining that upon marking her 60th birthday, she felt it was time to "try something new." That might be with NBC News, which has said she will continue with the division in an as yet "unspecified" job.

Whatever the future may hold, she has made history by teaming with Guthrie as the first regularly scheduled two-woman anchor team in network-broadcast morning TV, something that genuinely brought a new day to "Today."

Birthdate: Aug. 9, 1964

Birthplace: Norman, Okla.

Current residence: New York

Marital status: Divorced; she has two adopted daughters

Movie credits include: "Marry Me"

Her previous employment includes: WWL-TV, New Orleans, La.; WINK-TV, Fort Myers, Fla.; WQAD-TV, Moline, Ill.; WXTV-TV, Greenville, Miss.; CBS News

Her honors include: A Daytime Emmy (shared with Gifford), a Peabody Award, an Alfred I. duPont-Columbia University Award, an Edward R. Murrow Award, three Gracie Awards, a Matrix Award
