coverstory
BY SARAH PASSINGHAM

What you don't know can't hurt you, right? While that may be true sometimes, a new procedural drama supposes what could happen if the most dangerous secret facility imaginable was breached. In the brand-new series "The Hunting Party," premiering Monday, Feb. 3, on NBC, FBI agent Rebecca "Bex" Henderson (Melissa Roxburgh, "Manifest") is tasked with tracking down the country's most unpredictable inmates, who have escaped from an underground, off-the-books prison.

Most people are familiar with the FBI's most wanted list of suspects alleged to have committed serious crimes. But what happens when those suspects are brought to justice and disappear into the system, never to be heard of again? "The Hunting Party" suggests that a high-level operation of deep solitary confinement keeps America's most vicious criminals hidden far underground, away from society.

The inciting incident in the series is an explosion revealing the classified prison hidden beneath innocuous-looking farmland. The blast sets many inmates — who have been disappeared in one way or another on paper — free to roam and possibly commit more crimes in a world that has no idea they are still alive. Skilled profiler Bex Henderson is brought in to lead a small team of highly specialized agents, only learning about the existence of the bunker facility once she's brought on board to round up those inmates who have survived the blast and are now in the wild.

Bex's team searches for the fugitives, but as they get deeper down the rabbit hole of the investigation, it becomes clear that there was a sinister reason behind the jailbreak — the explosion was planned.

"The blast was no accident," Oliver Odell (Nick Wechsler, "Revenge") tells Bex in the series' official trailer, "Someone wanted those killers back out in the world."

Oliver, who joins Bex's investigative team, has a romantic past with the profiler, but both agents have bigger fish to fry and try to put their past behind them to work together. The rest of the team is made up of Ryan Hassani (Patrick Sabongui, "The Flash"), Shane Florence (Josh McKenzie, "La Brea") and Jennifer Morales (Sara Garcia, "Ride").

"The Hunting Party" was created by JJ Bailey ("Echo"), who serves as the series' co-showrunner with writer Jake Coburn ("The Endgame"). Thor Freudenthal ("Carnival Row") directs the series, while Keto Shimizu ("DC's Legends of Tomorrow") writes alongside Bailey and Coburn. All four also executive produce the show.

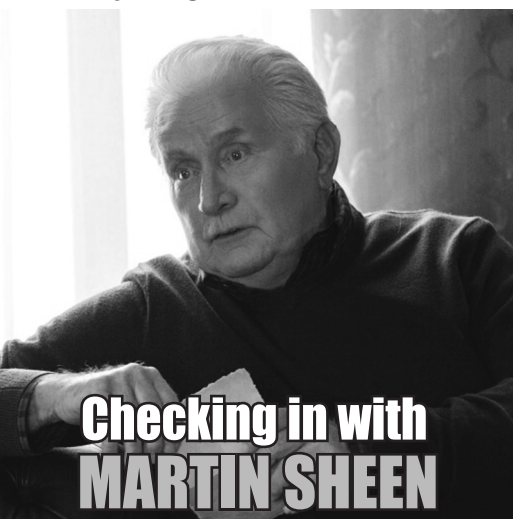

Also starring in the series is Tobias Jelinek ("This Is Us") as serial killer Richard Harris, who is used to introduce Bex to the secret prison. Brought in by Elizabeth Mallory (Zabryna Guevara, "New Amsterdam") to provide an assessment of the murderer, Bex questions why she has been asked to give a profile of a dead killer. Little does she know that Harris is alive and unwell and, now on the run, is ready for a cat-and-mouse chase with the investigator.

"The longer they're out there, the more dangerous they're going to become," Bex tells her team in the trailer, underlining how important it is that they find the escapees. The trailer also features shots of elaborately staged crime scenes with unnervingly posed corpses — reminiscent of the work of serial killer Hannibal Lecter, portrayed by Mads Mikkelsen ("Casino Royale," 2006), in NBC's beloved horror series "Hannibal." "Highly intelligent malignant narcissists," Bex calls the inmates they're searching for. They are the most sophisticated and hard to pin down of all the criminals, unless of course the searching is being done by a team made up exclusively of elites like Bex.

Checking in with
MARTIN SHEEN

Martin Sheen will always have TV fame for playing one of the home screen's most renowned politicians, and he's going a much different route as he returns to series work.

The three-time Emmy winner doesn't channel much of his presidential role from "The West Wing" as he tackles a recurring part in "Wild Cards," the mystery-adventure series that starts its second season Wednesday, Feb. 5, on The CW.

Sheen joins the show as Joseph Edwards, a professional schemer with ties to demoted policeman Cole Ellis (played by Giacomo Gianniotti, "Grey's Anatomy") and con woman Max Mitchell (Vanessa Morgan, "Riverdale"), who have been given the opportunity to redeem themselves by working together to solve crimes. Jason Priestley ("Beverly Hills, 90210") also stars as George Graham, Max's incarcerated father who also is an expert on scamming others.

While Sheen is certainly a familiar face, also from his bountiful film work, he hasn't been a series regular all that often. He had a number of guest-star credits and TV movies on his resume by the time he began his first live-action starring role on the home screen as President Josiah "Jed" Bartlett on NBC's "The West Wing" (1999-2006), a character who ironically wasn't meant to be a regular presence as originally envisioned by creator-producer Aaron Sorkin ("A Few Good Men," 1992).

Another recurring part came Sheen's way in the 2012-14 FX series version of the movie "Anger Management," which cast him as the father of the therapist played by Sheen's own son Charlie ("Two and a Half Men"). Then, the elder Sheen had another sizable series run as the ex-husband of Jane Fonda's ("Book Club," 2018) Grace and the partner, professionally and personally, of "Law & Order" star Sam Waterston's Sol in the Netflix comedy "Grace and Frankie."

Though Sheen's status on "Wild Cards" is listed as "recurring," it's a good bet that the show uses him as much as possible. And, given his stature and experience in entertainment, that is absolutely no surprise.

tonight's picks

Finding Your Roots With Henry Louis Gates, Jr.

8 8 7 p.m.

Professional chefs can often trace their love of food to their family ancestry, so it makes perfect sense for well-known chefs José Andrés and Sean Sherman to find themselves sitting across from Dr. Henry Louis Gates Jr. as they climb their family trees.

Wildcard Kitchen

31 8 p.m.

Professional chefs aren't as known for their poker faces, but Chef Eric Adjepong welcomes chefs Michael Symon, Esther Choi and Marcel Vigneron to the show to try their hand over three rounds, creating dishes based on the cards they're dealt.

FBI: International

3 3 8 p.m.

Keep calm and carry on is pushed to its extreme during this latest episode, as the FBI's International Fly Team, led by Wes Mitchell (Jesse Lee Soffer), must contain a highly dangerous biotoxin before it's too late. Vinessa Viodotto also stars.

Deal or No Deal Island

46 5 8 p.m.

The field is dwindling down faster than ever as Season 2 of this "Deal or No Deal" spinoff continues. Will the remaining contestants be able to survive the banker's devious challenges? Or will they fall before banking any cash? Joe Manganiello hosts.

The Joe Schmo Show

60 8 p.m.

The red flags are flying high for Ben as he starts to suspect the show itself after a prank goes off the rails. In order to lower his suspicions, host Cat Deeley, the producers and the actors go all-hands-on-deck to try to keep Ben from figuring things out.

House Hunters International

33 9 p.m.

A couple from Manchester, England, look to put down roots after spending years globe-trotting during this all-new episode. Although they decide to settle down in Costa Rica, local plumbing problems and a long wish list make it difficult to find a house.
