Pedro Pascal stars in "The Last of Us"

At a crossroads: Past choices lead down new paths in 'The Last of Us' Season 2

Eventually, we all make choices that come to define us. When that happens, we must decide which path forward we will take and be willing to face the consequences for that action — no matter what they may be. Faced with the question of survival for those you love, would you hang on to your morals or do everything you can to protect them? Would they forgive you? These are questions at the heart of "The Last of Us" Season 2, which premieres Sunday, April 13, on HBO and Max.

The return of HBO's acclaimed post-apocalyptic drama reunites audiences with Joel (Pedro Pascal, "The Mandalorian") and Ellie (Bella Ramsey, "Game of Thrones") five years after the events of Season 1's pulse-pounding finale. Now, the hardened smuggler and smart-mouthed teen have settled down into a life nearly resembling a time before the fungal plague turned billions into horrifying creatures. The surrogate father-daughter duo has found community in Jackson, Wyoming with Joel's brother, Tommy (Gabriel Luna, "Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D."), and his partner, Maria (Rutina Wesley, "Queen Sugar"), as well as new friends Dina (Isabela Merced, "Alien: Romulus," 2024) and Jesse (Young Mazino, "Beef"). But behind the fortified walls of their safe haven, all is not well.

Decisions made in Season 1 — those spoiler-heavy, life-changing decisions made in order to protect loved ones — have forged a major rift between Joel and Ellie. The second season's tagline, "Every path has a price," acts as an ominous reminder that Joel's earlier actions will have consequences that could drive away the very person he fights hardest to protect. And as paths tend to do, our duo's paths have branched apart, leading Ellie on a new journey west.

Ellie won't be flying solo, however, as she'll be accompanied by her friend-recently-turned-girlfriend Dina. The character is more than just a romantic lead, as Dina is a very capable survivor in her own right. Speaking to Empire, Merced touched on how her character brings important levity to an otherwise dark story: "In the middle of an apocalypse, I would be the first one cracking jokes in the most inappropriate times."

Backing up their co-star, Ramsey says, "She brought such a light and energy and silliness to the show in such a brilliant way."

In Seattle, now 25 years post-outbreak and ruled by an iron-fisted paramilitary organization, this season introduces viewers to Abby (Kaitlyn Dever, "Dopesick"). As a skilled member of the Washington Liberation Front, Abby faces her own tough choices to make as the WLF fights for control of the city — but her own deeply ingrained sense of right and wrong fuel her own expedition. With Ellie headed her way, their paths are certain to meet, for better or worse.

The wedge between Joel and Ellie at the heart of this season is sure to get fans talking given their journey so far. The first season sees Joel, closed off after losing his daughter (Nico Parker, "Bridget Jones: Mad About the Boy," 2025) in the outbreak, charged with smuggling Ellie cross-country to a resistance group hoping to use her immunity to develop a cure for the infection. Over this journey, the two develop a strong emotional bond as they face both the horrors of the infected and the desperate lengths people take to survive.

In an interview with Variety, Pascal and Ramsey both note that they, too, felt the pain of Season 2's estrangement. "This season was much more of an isolated one for Ellie. It was a lonelier experience, but I don't say that in a negative way," Ramsey states. Pascal mirrors this sentiment, noting that "to not have them near me for every part of Season 2 felt like a cruel separation."

Checking in with MINKA KELLY

Minka Kelly has had plenty of variety in her acting career, much of it supplied by television work.

She continues that as the female lead in "Ransom Canyon," a new Netflix drama that starts streaming its 10-episode season Thursday, April 17. Based on books by Jodi Thomas, the series casts Kelly as Quinn O'Grady, a Texas dance hall owner who lends support to Staten Kirkland (played by "Las Vegas" alum Josh Duhamel), a rancher who vies with other landowners for control of the area. James Brolin ("Traffic," 2000), Lizzy Greene ("A Million Little Things"), Eoin Macken ("Resident Evil: The Final Chapter," 2016) and Meta Golding ("Empire") are also among the cast regulars.

"Ransom Canyon" was filmed partially in Albuquerque, New Mexico, where Kelly lived for much of her teen years. Her biological father was Rick Dufay, a guitarist with the rock group Aerosmith from 1982 to 1984 who was based in Los Angeles. After moving back there upon reestablishing ties with him, she began modeling ... which introduced her to the person who would help her get her initial jobs in show business, ranging from commercials to series guest shots.

Kelly's first major role was Lyla Garrity in the 2006-09 NBC high school football drama "Friday Night Lights," on which she was a co-star in the first three seasons and a guest in the fourth. She branched into movie work but returned to NBC with a recurring part in the 2010-11 season of "Parenthood," then landed a very visible job as Eve French in ABC's remake of the detective show "Charlie's Angels," which proved to have only a brief run in 2011.

Though she had another short TV series engagement in Fox's sci-fi drama "Almost Human," Kelly has largely been a free agent in recent years. Not only has "Ransom Canyon" brought her to Netflix, but she's also made the forthcoming romantic-comedy movie "Champagne Problems" (filmed in France) for the streamer — so she has clearly found a new professional home for at least a while.

tonight's picks

NHL Hockey

The First 48 Presents Critical Minutes

(42) 7 p.m.

Former "First 48" detectives host a new episode of this true crime docuseries. First,

Next Level Chef

(462) (52) 7 p.m.

As Season 4 of this unique cooking competition continues, the remaining chefs must make a Cajun dish that combines southern flare with French influence for a coveted time token, which gives one lucky chef the advantage in the next challenge.

Law & Order: Special Victims Unit

(46) (5) 8 p.m.

When Capt. Benson (Mariska Hargitay) receives a mysterious phone call that leads detectives to the scene of a brutal murder, SVU reaches out to the 2-7 for help. Their combined effort uncovers a pattern of rape and murder targeting marginalized women.

Matlock
