Back to 'You': Final season of Badgley-led thriller gets late-April premiere

What makes a murderer? And how can you tell them apart from everyone else? These sinister questions form the basis of "You," the Netflix thriller series that shot to popularity following its Season 1 debut in September 2018. Now, nearly seven years later, the series' fifth and final season brings murderous leading man Joe Goldberg, played by Penn Badgley ("Gossip Girl"), back to the New York City bookshop where it all began.

"You" Season 5 premieres Thursday, April 24, on Netflix.

Both true crime and human psychology have been hugely popular topics of public interest for centuries, but the rise of film, television and podcast culture has had a lasting impact on the way society views some of our most frightening peers — whether real or fictional. Author Caroline Kepnes capitalized on this morbid interest when she wrote her first novel, "You," in 2014, despite then being completely unaware that it would later be translated into 19 languages while spawning three sequels and a five-season Netflix series starring Badgley, one of TV's biggest small-screen darlings.

The novel — and subsequently the TV series' first season — follows bookstore employee Joe Goldberg, a charming and well-read young New Yorker with a troubling outlook on love who grows obsessed with budding author Guinevere Beck (played in Season 1 by "Ordinary Joe" actress Elizabeth Lail). Driven by his untamed "love" for her, Joe tracks her every move through the city, arranging "chance" encounters and ultimately forcing a relationship by any means possible. Determined to have the supposed love of his life by his side forever, Joe's passion sees him go to extreme lengths to secure Beck's loyalty to him.

Now four seasons and three big "loves" later, Joe is married and moving back to New York from London, where Season 4 took place.

"Every season they manage to find new space to make it interesting and relevant," Badgley told Netflix's Tudum while filming the series' fifth and final season. "I think somehow coming back to where it started allowed for it to just become grounded in the way that it needs to also have this kind of spectacular finish."

Based on press details released by Netflix, the "epic" fifth season was always expected to be "You's" last. Because of this, expectations will be high for the finale, and fans of the show are likely to be split in their desire to see Joe brought to justice for his numerous grisly crimes.

As for the plot of the series' final 10 episodes, Netflix has set the scene three years after Joe and his wife, Kate (Charlotte Ritchie, "Call the Midwife"), left the U.K. for New York. We learn that Joe has purchased Mooney's bookstore — the site of his meet-cute and final showdown with Beck — with some of the ample funds he has accrued by virtue of his marriage into the affluent Lockwood family. With Kate now in the role of CEO of Lockwood Corporation, "Joe is her loyal husband who has been dubbed Prince Charming by the adoring public, and they're both following through on their pact to help each other do good" (per Netflix).

Season 5 of "You" co-stars Griffin Matthews ("The Flight Attendant"), Anna Camp ("Pitch Perfect," 2012), Natasha Behnam ("The Girls on the Bus"), Pete Ploszek ("Captain Marvel," 2019), Nava Mau ("Baby Reindeer"), stage actor Tom Francis (Hope Mill Theatre's "Rent," 2020) and the mononymous b ("Station 19").

The sister of fellow actress Ashley Williams ("How I Met Your Mother"), Williams-Paisley is also known — along with her husband — for her philanthropy. The couple founded The Store, a physical Nashville location as well as an overall initiative to fight food insecurity, and it has expanded to encompass such services as counseling and literacy training.

Much more is on Williams-Paisley's own plate besides "Farmer Wants a Wife," but she remains married to her latest TV job.

Birthdate: June 24, 1980

Birthplace: Rye, N.Y.

Current residence: Nashville, Tenn.

Marital status: Married to country music artist Brad Paisley; they have two sons

Other television credits include: "Sister Swap: A Hometown Holiday," "Sister Swap: Christmas in the City," "The Flash," "Dolly Parton's Heartstrings," "The Christmas Train," "Two and a Half Men," "Nashville," "Royal Pains," "Amish Grace," "Boston Legal," "Less Than Perfect," "George Lopez," "According to Jim," "Follow the Stars Home," "The 10th Kingdom," "Relativity," "Jake's Women," "Tales From the Crypt"

Movie credits include: "Dog Gone," "The Christmas Chronicles," "The Christmas Chronicles 2," "The Violent Heart," "You Get Me," "Speech & Debate," "Alvin and the Chipmunks: The Road Chip," "Ask Me Anything," "We Are Marshall," "How to Eat Fried Worms," "Identity Theft," "How to Go Out on a Date in Queens," "Shade," "Ten Tiny Love Stories," "Simpatico," "Elephant Juice," "Safe House," "The War at Home," "Father of the Bride," "Father of the Bride Part II," "Indian Summer"

Stage credits include: "The Last Night of Ballyhoo"

Nonfiction book she wrote: "Where the Light Gets in: Losing My Mother Only to Find Her Again"

Kimberly Williams-Paisley now has a role that she hasn't played on camera that often: herself.

Well known for the "Father of the Bride" movie updates that basically launched her career, the actress is currently serving as host of "Farmer Wants a Wife," succeeding singer Jennifer Nettles ("The Righteous Gemstones") in that job as the unscripted series airs its third season Thursdays on Fox, where it moved to from the CW after its first season.

Williams-Paisley serves as a guide for viewers as well as four farmers who, true to the show's title, seek spouses from their respective fields of candidates. The women not only have to determine if they've found their man, they also have to gauge whether they're cut out for the farming life.

Williams-Paisley can relate to living a new life as a spouse, both fictionally and in reality. She earned popularity early in her career by playing the Steve Martin ("Only Murders in the Building") and Diane Keaton ("Something's Gotta Give," 2003) characters' newly engaged daughter in the first "Father of the Bride" remake in 1991, then she wed country musician Brad Paisley ("Whiskey Lullaby") in 2003.

Paisley has said that he was impressed with his then-future wife upon seeing her in "Bride," then a decade later, he met her by casting her in his music video for "I'm Gonna Miss Her (The Fishin' Song)."

Where television is concerned, Williams-Paisley starred in the ABC drama series "Relativity" from 1996 to 1997, from the producers of "thirtysomething." She had a much longer run on that network as Jim Belushi's ("Red Heat," 1988) sister-in-law in the sitcom "According to Jim," of which she also directed three episodes. Appropriately, since Williams-Paisley resides in the country music capital, she had a recurring role during the first two seasons of "Nashville," another ABC drama.
