Ella Maisy Purvis and Laura Fraser in "Patience"

Investigators solve crimes by putting together the jigsaw puzzle of a case one piece at a time. A fresh perspective can put new pieces in the pile that make the outcome appear in a completely different way. In "Patience," a new crime drama premiering on PBS on Sunday, June 15, that alternative point of view is exactly what the Yorkshire police are about to get.

The joint British-Belgian detective series, adapted from the original French show "Astrid et Raphaëlle," stars Ella Maisy Purvis ("A Kind of Spark") as Patience Evans, an autistic woman who works in the city of York's criminal records office as an archivist. Deep in records work, Patience is far from the investigative action that makes up DI Bea Metcalf's (Laura Fraser, "Crime") daily grind.

When Patience and Bea's paths cross, it becomes clear to Bea that the archivist has a real gift. Not for sorting through paperwork, but for connecting the threads of serial criminals' offenses going under the radar in York. Bea is eager to use Patience's knack for seeing a bigger picture to solve nagging cases on her desk as much as she is motivated to push Patience to not waste her potential.

While Bea's confidence in her abilities is inspiring, the change to routine could have consequences for Patience, as being thrust into an entirely new environment could be destabilizing for her, even though she is theoretically in her element as a sidekick to DI Metcalf. "The only things that really interest me are forensics and criminology," Patience tells Bea over lunch in an official trailer for the upcoming series.

Also starring in "Patience" are Nathan Welsh ("Trying") as DS Jake Hunter; Mark Benton ("Smoggy Queens") as Calvin Baxter; Ali Ariaie ("The Great") as DC Will Akbari; Tom Lewis ("Gentleman Jack") as Elliot Scott; Liza Sadovy ("A Small Light") as Dr. Loretta Parsons; Adrian Rawlins ("Unforgotten") as Douglas Gilmour; Jamie MacLachlan ("Slow Horses") as George Evans; Connor Curran ("Dodger") as Billy Thompson; Maxwell Whitelock ("Boat Story") as Alfie Metcalf-Haynes; Eddie Elks ("The Day of the Jackal") as David Haynes; and newcomer Lotte Lauren as Mathilde Evans.

Out in the field, Bea and Patience form a strong partnership, bonding over their shared fixation with leaving no mystery unsolved. However, as Patience's new work forces her to confront her difficult past and share more about her childhood with Bea, the self-taught detective may find herself out too far in the deep end of York's criminal underworld.

Neurodivergent herself, Purvis spoke to The Hollywood Reporter about her character in January when the series first aired on Channel 4 in the U.K. Speaking about Patience representing a more realistic characterization of autism on screen, Purvis said, "I think there are a lot of misconceptions that autistic people are apathetic, whereas we see in the show that Patience cares so deeply about things."

Expanding on both the diversity and universality of Patience's traits, Purvis added, "I think I'm more obsessive than determined. But I certainly share that [passion]. Patience is so internal and very calculated, while I often don't know what I'm going to say next."

Checking in with
MONICA BARBARO

Sometimes, things just work out, as Monica Barbaro surely knows.

The actress got what appeared to be her big break when she was cast in "Chicago Justice," seemingly a sure bet when it was spun off from "Chicago P.D." to become part of Dick Wolf's One Chicago franchise in 2017. As it happened, it lasted only 13 episodes, but Barbaro kept working — principally in more television roles. Now, after a blockbuster film in "Top Gun: Maverick" (2022) and an Oscar nomination for last year's "A Complete Unknown," she's back in a series by returning opposite Terminator franchise star Arnold Schwarzenegger in the now-streaming second season of the Netflix comedy adventure "FUBAR."

In a premise that echoes Schwarzenegger's 1994 movie hit, "True Lies," he and Barbaro play a father and daughter who each didn't know the other works for the CIA. As they're partnered on missions, they discover a lot they weren't aware of, which alters their relationship — especially as dad, Luke (Schwarzenegger), tries to offer pointers to his offspring, Emma (Barbaro), who has her own skill set she's constantly challenged to prove to him.

Barbaro also worked for Netflix earlier as a New York police detective overseeing a paroled ex-officer (Tony Danza, "Who's the Boss?") in the 2018 series "The Good Cop," and she also had recurring roles in two ABC shows: the comedy "Splitting Up Together" and the crime drama "Stumptown." Staying in the game set her up for the part that immediately took her career to another level: Phoenix, one of the fighter pilots trained by the title character Pete "Maverick" Mitchell (Tom Cruise, "Mission: Impossible," 1996) for a highly risky assignment in "Top Gun: Maverick."

Resulting opportunities haven't been squandered by Barbaro, who was an Oscar contender for best supporting actress for her portrayal of singer-songwriter Joan

Baez (doing her own singing and instrument playing) opposite Timothée Chalamet's ("Dune: Part 2," 2024) Bob Dylan in "A Complete Unknown." The award went to Zoe Saldana for "Emilia Perez" (2024), but Barbaro is moving onward, working with Chris Hemsworth ("The Avengers," 2012), Mark Ruffalo ("Poor Things," 2023) and Halle Berry ("John Wick: Chapter 3 - Parabellum," 2019) in the forthcoming drama "Crime 101." Barbaro is also scheduled to make her stage debut in a London revival of "Les Liaisons Dangereuses."

While "FUBAR" is the title of the moment where she's concerned, more will be coming from Barbaro before long — and her recent Met Gala debut, for which she sported a Christian Dior look, only affirms that things are working out for her, indeed.
