Jack Clawson missing since 1981

By Sedalia Democrat Staff

The remains of a man only known as 'Pipeline Pete' found in Granger, Wyoming in 1982 have finally been determined to be those of Sedalia man, Jack Clawson.

Jack Clawson, circa 1981.

Family members reported last seeing Clawson, then 21, in Fremont, CA, in 1981. He was supposed to return to Missouri shortly for a hunting trip, but never arrived.

Clawson's family reported him missing, and over a year later remains were discovered by workers surveying a remote pipeline near Granger.

No signs of foul play were found, and it is believed the yet unidentified man died of exposure.

With no identification, or way of linking the remains to the California missing person's case, Jack Clawson's body remained unidentified, and the case went cold.

An effort to solve a few "historical" cases, sheriff's detectives and forensic analysts at the state crime lab gathered samples of remains for DNA matching at the University of North Texas Health Science Center.

The Wyoming remains finally received a positive match to Jack Clawson in March 2023.

In a press release, Sweetwater County Sheriff John Grossnickle offered this praise to those who helped solve the 40-year-old case:

"The final resolution of this case for Mr. Clawson's family would not have been possible without the incredible technological advancements in forensic analysis and the outstanding teamwork of everyone involved including our lead detective Stephanie Cassidy, the University of Wyoming department of anthropology, the Wyoming state crime lab and the University of North Texas Health Science Center."

Disco music and unique vocals are coming to the stage this weekend as the Liberty Center Association of the Arts Jr. Theater students present "Xanadu."

The musical is based on the 1980s movie of the same name starring Olivia Newton-John and Gene Kelly. Lucy Lemke Clark, the director, said, "Xanadu" is a roller-disco extravaganza and a Greek tragedy to boot."

"So, you get a little bit of everything in there," she added with a smile. "We have Muses, we have Zeus, we have Greek goddesses. And then the Andrew Sisters are even in there."

"And 'The Tubes,' an 80s band," she continued. "So, there's a little bit of all these eras that go in there."

Clark said the original movie was a "flop," but it did become a cult classic.

"Because of how absurd it is and how fun it is," she said. "It's creative, and it's inventive. The Muses come to Venice Beach, California, to bring inspiration and creativity to everyone."

"But Kira, the leader of the Muses, comes to Venice Beach, and she inspires Sonny to open a roller disco," Clark continued. "And then they meet up with Danny who has this old building called 'The Xanadu,' an old theater that he's built ... so it all ties together beautifully."

Clark added that the musical is so much fun and great for the Jr. Theater age group.

"Honestly, they don't get all the jokes because they weren't around in 1980," she laughed. "But there's a

The Musical, "Xanadu," hosted at the Hayden Liberty Center, features 60 students ages 9 through 18. It's one of the largest productions since the pandemic.

Fifty-four students, ages 9 to 18, are in the cast, and six in the crew.

"It's a lot of kids," Clark said. "This is one of the biggest (productions) we've had in a long time since our post-pandemic production."

Warrensburg business owner facing child pornography charges

By Star-Journal Staff

WARRENSBURG — A Warrensburg business owner is charged with five counts of possession of child pornography following an investigation by the Missouri State Highway Patrol Division of Drug and Crime Control's Digital Forensics Investigations Unit.

Warrensburg resident and Warrior Jujitsu owner Billy R. Matheny, 57, was charged after investigators executed a search warrant at Matheny's residence and business on Friday, June 16.

During the execution of the search warrants, investigators discovered images and videos of child pornography on Matheny's computer. According to court documents, Matheny had multiple photos and videos with children appearing to be between the ages of 5 and 15. The videos in his possession ranged from 20 seconds in length to more than two minutes.

All the photos and videos display minors completely exposed and occasionally with another person.

In 2006, Matheny and his wife opened the martial arts studio in downtown Warrensburg. In addition to his martial arts studio, Matheny worked as a security forces instructor at Whiteman Air Force Base. He taught many courses to public safety, law enforcement and military members.

He is a certified instructor with the International Law Enforcement Educators and Trainers Association and the National Law Enforcement Training Center.

Warrior Jujitsu is a training facility to teach self-defense to not only men and women but also children. The website states, "Warrior Jujitsu is family and veteran owned and operated by Elite Warrior Training, LLC. We teach real world self defense to Men, Women and Children."

According to the probable cause statement, law enforcement interviewed Matheny as a part of a child molestation investigation in May 2023.

Prior to the interview in 2023, investigators obtained Facebook records.

Court documents state the Facebook data showed Matheny was in a private chat with another individual where they discussed Matheny's enjoyment he got out of touching children during private classes.

It's almost time to resume student loan payments

By Cora Lewis and Adriana Morga

Associated Press

It's almost time to resume student loan payments. Not doing so could cost you

NEW YORK — After three years, the pandemic-era freeze on student loan payments will end soon. Student loan interest will start accruing on September 1 and payments are starting in October.

It might seem tempting to just keep not making payments, but the consequences can be severe, including a hit to your credit score and exclusion from future aid and benefits.

More than 40 million Americans will have to start making federal student loan payments again at the end of the summer under the terms of a debt ceiling deal approved by Congress.

Millions are also waiting to find out whether the Supreme Court will allow President Joe Biden's student loan forgiveness plan to go ahead. But payments will resume regardless of what justices decide.

That means tough decisions for many borrowers, especially those in already-difficult financial situations.

Experts say that delinquency and bankruptcy should be options of last resort, and that deferment and forbearance — which pause payments, though interest may continue to accrue — are often better in the short term.

WHAT HAPPENS IF I DON'T MAKE STUDENT LOAN PAYMENTS?

Once the moratorium ends, borrowers who can't or don't pay risk delinquency and eventually default. That can badly hurt your credit rating and make you ineligible for additional aid and government benefits.

If you're struggling to pay, advisers first encourage you to check if you qualify for an income-driven repayment plan, which determines your payments by looking at your expenses. You can determine this by visiting the Federal Student Aid website. If you've worked for a government agency or a non-profit organization, you could also be eligible for the Public Service Loan Forgiveness Program, which forgives student debt after 10 years.

Carolina Rodriguez, Director of the Education Debt Consumer Assistance Program at the Community Service Society of New York, emphasizes that anyone temporarily unemployed should be able to qualify for a $0 payment plan. And many others qualify based on income and family size.

"The repercussions of falling into delinquency can be pretty severe," Rodriguez said. "The federal government can administratively intercept tax refunds and garnish wages. And it can affect Social Security, retirement, and disability benefits. Does it make financial sense at that point? Probably not."

Rodriguez says her organization always advises against deferment or forbearance except once a borrower has exhausted all other options. In the long term, those financial choices offer little benefit, as some loans will continue to accrue interest while deferred.

Abby Shafrroth, senior attorney and director of the Student Loan Borrower Assistance Project at the National Consumer Law Center, said that, of the two, deferment is generally a better option.

That's because interest generally does not accrue on Direct Subsidized Loans, the subsidized portion of Direct Consolidation Loans, Subsidized Federal Stafford Loans, the subsidized portion of FFEL Consolidation Loans, and Federal Perkins Loans. All other federal student loans that are deferred will continue to accrue interest.

"Forbearance allows you to postpone payments without it being held against you, but interest does accrue. So you're going to see your balance increase every month."

WHAT ABOUT DECLARING BANKRUPTCY?

For most student loan borrowers, it's still very difficult to have your loans discharged, or canceled, through bankruptcy. Borrowers must prove a very hard standard of financial circumstances, called "undue hardship."

"That doesn't mean people shouldn't look into it," Rodriguez said. "But they may not be successful at discharging their loans."

For borrowers who show that level of financial strain, chances are they have other options, Rodriguez said.

She advises that borrowers make sure they are speaking to a bankruptcy attorney who understands student loan bankruptcy, which requires a different proceeding than other types of bankruptcy.

Shafrroth, of the NCLC, says that new guidance on student loan bankruptcy has been coming out in recent years.

"Though it is difficult to get your loans discharged through the bankruptcy process, an increasing number of borrowers are eligible to get their loans discharged that way," she said. "A lot of people write that off as 'there's no way, it's impossible.' But it's increasingly possible."

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN A LOAN GOES INTO DEFAULT?

When you fall behind on a loan by 270 days — roughly 9 months — the loan appears on your credit report as being in default.

"At that point, it's not just behind, it's in collections," Shafrroth said. "That's when you become ineligible to take out new federal student aid. A lot of people go into default because they weren't able to complete their degree the first time. This prevents them from going back to school."

Once a loan is in default, it's subject to the collection processes mentioned above. That means the government can garnish wages (without a court order) to go towards paying back the loan, intercept tax refunds, and seize portions of Social Security checks and other benefit payments.

WHAT ARE OTHER OPTIONS IF I CAN'T MAKE PAYMENTS?

Shafrroth said that many borrowers may still be eligible to have loans canceled via a patchwork of programs outside of the Biden administration's proposed debt relief program.

"If your school closed before you could complete your program, you're eligible for relief. If your school lied to you or misrepresented the outcome of what your enrolling would be, you can file a borrower defense application, and request your loan be canceled on that basis," she said.

Shafrroth encourages borrowers to look at the Student Aid website to see what their options might be before missing payments.

WHAT IF MY LOANS WERE IN DEFAULT BEFORE MARCH 2020?

Under the Biden administration's Fresh Start program, borrowers with federal student loans who were in default before the pause have a chance to become current.

Borrowers who were in default will not be subject to collection processes or have wages garnished through about August 2024, or roughly one year after the payment freeze ends. These borrowers have also been granted permission to apply for federal student loans again, to complete degrees. Lastly, these defaulted loans are now being reported to credit bureaus as current.

The latest on the search for the Titan submersible and outlook for rescue

The search for the submersible vessel carrying five people that disappeared while on an expedition to view the wreckage of the Titanic neared the critical 96-hour mark Thursday.

A growing number of aircraft, ships and underwater equipment from the U.S., Canada and France have been searching for the Titan submersible, which was estimated to have a 96-hour supply of breathable air when it launched Sunday morning in the North Atlantic.

That means the deadline to find and rescue the sub is roughly between 6 a.m. EDT (1000 GMT) and 8 a.m. EDT (1200 GMT), based on information the U.S. Coast Guard and company behind the expedition have provided. Experts emphasized that is an imprecise estimate and could be extended if passengers have taken measures to conserve breathable air.

The small craft named Titan, owned by under-sea exploration company OceanGate Expeditions, has been chronicling the Titanic's decay and the underwater ecosystem around it via yearly voyages since 2021.

Here's what we know so far about the submersible and what's being done to find it:

WHAT'S THE LATEST ON THE SEARCH?

A Canadian aircraft detected underwater noises in the search area Tuesday and Wednesday, according to the U.S. Coast Guard. Officials said they don't know what made the sounds, and a robotic vessel scouring the area so far has "yielded negative results."

Additional remotely operated vessels were sent.

"The equipment that is onsite and coming is the most sophisticated in the world and certainly capable of reaching those depths," said Sean Leet, chief executive of Canadian company Horizon Maritime.

As of Wednesday, searchers had covered an area twice the size of Connecticut in waters 2 1/2 miles deep — the depth at which the wreck of the Titanic lies.

WHEN AND WHERE DID THE TITAN GO MISSING?

The craft submerged

Sunday morning, and its support vessel lost contact with it about an hour and 45 minutes later, according to the Coast Guard.

The vessel was reported overdue about 435 miles (700 kilometers) south of St. John's, Newfoundland, according to Canada's Joint Rescue Coordination Centre in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

The Titan was launched from an icebreaker that was hired by OceanGate and formerly operated by the Canadian Coast Guard. The ship has ferried dozens of people and the submersible craft to the North Atlantic wreck site, where the Titan has made multiple dives.

IS THERE ANY HOPE?

Experts say the best-case scenario would be finding the Titan on the ocean's surface. It is equipped with safety systems to help it rise to the surface during an emergency even if everyone on board is unconscious.

If the Titan is stuck on the ocean floor, however, the occupants would eventually run out of oxygen and develop hypothermia from extreme cold. The vessel also could be caught in a fishing net or other entanglement. In those cases, the best chance to reach it could be to use a remotely operated robot on a fiber optic cable, said Jeff Karson, a professor emeritus of earth and environmental sciences at Syracuse University.

A breach of the Titan's hull at depth would mean instant death from the heavy pressure in the deep ocean. Still, a U.S. Coast Guard official said the efforts to find the vessel remained a "search and rescue mission, 100 percent."

Joyce Murray, Canada's minister of Fisheries, Oceans and the Canadian Coast Guard, echoed that sentiment.

"We have to retain hope as part of what we are doing as a human community to find the explorers and bring them to safety," she said.

A U.S. Navy official said Wednesday that a special naval salvage system that could be used to haul the Titan to the surface had arrived in St. John's. Officials were in the process of identifying a vessel that it could be attached to, and once one is chartered, it would take about 24 hours to weld the system to the deck.

The announcement that federal prosecutors have reached a plea deal with President Joe Biden's son Hunter over tax and gun charges marks the likely end of a five-year Justice Department investigation that has dogged the Biden family. It doesn't, however, mean that congressional Republicans are done with their own wide-ranging probe into nearly every facet of Hunter Biden's business dealings. Some of the Republican candidates hoping to face off against President Biden in the 2024 election are decrying the deal as evidence of an unfair justice system, particularly in light of the federal charges against Donald Trump, though there are obvious differences between the two cases.

The announcement that federal prosecutors have reached a plea deal with President Joe Biden's son Hunter over tax and gun charges marks the likely end of a five-year Justice Department investigation that has dogged the Biden family.

It doesn't, however, mean that congressional Republicans are done with their own wide-ranging probe into nearly every facet of Hunter Biden's business dealings, including examining foreign payments and other aspects of his finances.

Some of the Republican candidates hoping to face off against President Biden in the 2024 election are decrying the deal as evidence of an unfair justice system, particularly in light of the recent federal indictment of GOP front-runner Donald Trump, though there are obvious differences between the two cases.

Here's what to know about the charges, plea agreement, other probes involving the president's son and the politics:

WHAT ARE THE CHARGES?

According to a letter filed in U.S. District Court in Delaware, Hunter Biden has been charged with misdemeanor charges of failing to pay federal income tax. Court documents allege that he failed to pay more than $200,000 in federal income taxes for 2017 and 2018.

The federal probe into Hunter Biden began in 2018, bursting into public view in December 2020 — one month after the presidential election — when he revealed that he had received a subpoena as part of the Justice Department's scrutiny of his taxes.

That subpoena sought information on the younger Biden's business dealings with a number of entities, including Burisma, a Ukraine gas company whose board he joined in 2014. That move sparked concerns about the perceptions of a conflict of interest, given the elder Biden was deeply involved in U.S. policy toward Ukraine.

An investigation by the then-Republican-controlled Senate did not identify any policies that were directly affected by Hunter Biden's work.

At the time of that subpoena, Hunter Biden said that he was "confident that a professional and objective review of these matters will demonstrate that I handled my affairs legally and appropriately, including with the benefit of professional tax advisors."

The younger Biden has also reached an agreement with the Justice Department on a charge that he illegally possessed a firearm while being a drug user.

Federal law prohibits people who use drugs from possessing firearms or ammunition, although a federal judge challenged the legality earlier this year. According to the Justice Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, between 1998 and 2014, nearly 100,000 prospective gun purchasers went home empty-handed because they were flagged as using illegal drugs.

WHAT DOES THE PLEA AGREEMENT MEAN?

By entering a plea, Hunter Biden avoids a trial, and it's unlikely that he will spend time in jail, although penalties are ultimately up to a judge.

Biden was charged under an information, a formal document that lays out the charges against him but doesn't require a vote by a grand jury, which would be an indictment.

A person familiar with the investigation said the Justice Department would recommend probation for the tax charges. But the decision to go along with any deal is up to a judge. The person was not authorized to speak publicly and spoke to The Associated Press on the condition of anonymity.

The charge of willful failure to file a tax return is rarely used as a primary charge by federal prosecutors, according to data from the Transactional Records Access Clearinghouse at Syracuse University. There were just 48 prosecutions in the last six fiscal years, according to TRAC.

The gun charge carries a maximum sentence of up to 10 years in prison, but the Justice Department says Hunter Biden has reached a pretrial agreement on that charge, too.

It is somewhat unusual to resolve a federal criminal case at the same time the charges are filed in court, though it is not totally unheard of.

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT?

The agreement essentially means the case is over, unless Hunter Biden fails to abide by it.

A deferred prosecution is an agreement offered by prosecutors in which a defendant must adhere to strict conditions, which will be known after he appears in court. A date for that appearance hasn't been set.

Usually a judge sets regular check-ins for the defendant to appear to ensure they are playing by the rules. If they don't, their deal is revoked and the criminal charges reinstated, which in Hunter Biden's case carry a maximum of a decade in prison. But if he does adhere to the rules, the case will be wiped from his record.

ISN'T THERE ANOTHER PROBE?

Yes. Congressional Republicans have been pursuing their own investigations into nearly every facet of Hunter Biden's business dealings, including examining foreign payments and other aspects of his finances.

The misdemeanor tax crimes that the younger Biden is set to plead guilty to are far more limited in scope than the allegations that have been pursued for years by congressional Republicans.

On Tuesday, Rep. James Comer, the Republican chair of the House Oversight Committee, said that the "charges against Hunter Biden and sweetheart plea deal have no impact on" his panel's probe.

Even before he ran for president in 2020, Joe Biden has faced questions about his son's business dealings and drug addiction.

And there have been other controversies. While his father was vice president, Hunter joined the Naval Reserve and was discharged after testing positive for cocaine in his system, later revealing a yearslong struggle with addiction.

In the weeks before the 2020 election, Trump supporters used the existence of a laptop they said was connected to Hunter

Biden — and the emergence of someone who maintains he had business discussions with him — to raise questions about Joe Biden's knowledge of his son's activities in Ukraine and China.

President Biden has said he did not discuss his son's international business dealings with him and has denied having ever taken money from a foreign country.

WHAT ARE THE POLITICS?

News of the plea agreement comes days after Trump appeared in federal court on charges related to his retention of classified documents. In the wake of those 37 charges, Republicans across the country have levied criticism against the Biden administration, accusing the Justice Department of "politicization" and assailing Hunter Biden's business dealings.

The Trump charges came from a special counsel, appointed by Attorney General Merrick Garland to conduct an independent investigation to avoid any potential conflict of interest in the Justice Department. The Hunter Biden charges, meanwhile, were filed by the U.S. attorney for Delaware, Trump appointee David Weiss.

Some of the Republicans competing to potentially face off with Biden in the 2024 general election wasted no time taking their critique of the plea agreement public.

On his Truth Social platform, Trump on Tuesday said "the corrupt Biden DOJ just cleared up hundreds of years of criminal liability by giving Hunter Biden a mere traffic ticket."

Biotech entrepreneur Vivek Ramaswamy tweeted Tuesday that "it's no accident that the farcical Hunter Biden 'plea deal' comes right after the Trump indictment," calling it "the perfect fig leaf to pretend that 'no one is above the law' while absolutely putting certain people above the law."

Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis, in a tweet, also decried the "sweetheart deal" and said that, were Biden "not connected to the elite DC class he would have been put in jail a long time ago."

Asked about the plea deal during a Tuesday night Fox News town hall, Sen. Tim Scott of South Carolina called perceptions of inequality in the justice system "dangerous" and implored voters "to thank God" for congressional Republicans' ongoing inquiry into the president's son.

What to know about Hunter Biden's plea deal in federal tax and gun case

By Meg Kinnard

Associated Press

The announcement that federal prosecutors have reached a plea deal with President Joe Biden's son Hunter over tax and gun charges marks the likely end of a five-year Justice Department investigation that has dogged the Biden family. It doesn't, however, mean that congressional Republicans are done with their own wide-ranging probe into nearly every facet of Hunter Biden's business dealings. Some of the Republican candidates hoping to face off against President Biden in the 2024 election are decrying the deal as evidence of an unfair justice system, particularly in light of the federal charges against Donald Trump, though there are obvious differences between the two cases.

Some of the Republican candidates hoping to face off against President Biden in the 2024 election are decrying the deal as evidence of an unfair justice system, particularly in light of the recent federal indictment of GOP front-runner Donald Trump, though there are obvious differences between the two cases.

Here's what to know about the charges, plea agreement, other probes involving the president's son and the politics:

WHAT ARE THE CHARGES?

According to a letter filed in U.S. District Court in Delaware, Hunter Biden has been charged with misdemeanor charges of failing to pay federal income tax. Court documents allege that he failed to pay more than $200,000 in federal income taxes for 2017 and 2018.

The federal probe into Hunter Biden began in 2018, bursting into public view in December 2020 — one month after the presidential election — when he revealed that he had received a subpoena as part of the Justice Department's scrutiny of his taxes.

That subpoena sought information on the younger Biden's business dealings with a number of entities, including Burisma, a Ukraine gas company whose board he joined in 2014. That move sparked concerns about the perceptions of a conflict of interest, given the elder Biden was deeply involved in U.S. policy toward Ukraine.

Endeavor to keep the unity of the Spirit

By Gary Smith

Pastor, Liberty Life

Center Church

Revival! Awakening! Renewal! These prophetic words have been spoken often over the churches of America in recent months. Certainly, such is needed in our nation growing more divided, violent, corrupt and immoral each day. Certainly, repentance, humility and a genuine seeking of the Lord are needed and must precede revival of any kind, according to 2 Chronicles 7:14.

One area in the Church needing repentance is our disunity. Jesus' prayer to the Father for us was clear... "that all of them may be one, as You, Father, are in Me, and I am in You. May they also be in Us, so that the world may believe that You sent Me."

Jn 17:21

The Church, those who believe upon and are committed to the Lord Jesus Christ, have drifted far from such unity. It is interesting that throughout the scriptures, we discover all fellowships of Christ followers within a city or region were known as "the church" of that city. The church in Ephesus, the church in Smyrna, the church of God that meets in Corinth, etc. The church was not "denominated" or divided as it is today.

When the focus was on the commission of expanding the Gospel and together seeking the will of the Father, powerful moves of God transformed lives and communities were the outcome.

Not long ago, while meeting with other pastors of various churches of our city and region, I was convicted by Paul's exhortation to the church. In Ephesians 4:1-6 he wrote, "I, therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you to walk worthy of the calling with which you were called, with all lowliness and gentleness, with long-suffering, bearing with one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body and one Spirit, just as you were called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism; one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all."

Am I "endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit?" Endeavor means to exert oneself to do or effect something, to make an effort, to strive, to attempt earnestly! My honest answer was, "No, I haven't." In the past, I have been involved in and part of the leadership of several large multi-church events and outreaches in our community, from Impact World Tour at the Mathewson Exhibition Center, Bringing the Bible to Life at Liberty Park, Bless God America at the Heckart Center, and a Good Friday Unity Communion Service at the Agriculture Building on the Missouri State Fairgrounds.

These events joined together as many as 42 local congregations with thousands in attendance for the purpose of "together" lifting up the name of Jesus, bringing glory to God, and sharing the Gospel. Today, we the church of the region focus too much on what divides us rather than what unites us.

The call to the church of Sedalia remains the same: "Endeavor to keep the unity of the Spirit." That Spirit of unity in Christ is moving again among us. Over recent weeks, pastors, intercessors and those earnestly seeking revival are coming together, visioning together, and praying together. We recognize we can accomplish more for the Kingdom of God together than we can alone. We recognize our individual churches are but a part of the whole and we need each other and the redemptive gifts God has given to each one to really impact the region for Christ.

When we come alongside each other and pray for each other, giving aid where needed, we all win because we are part of the One Body!

An example of the moving of the Spirit among us is several churches are now coming alongside LifePointe Church as they prepare for a large tent revival July 12-16. We will pray with them, reach out to the community with and for them, and serve where needed. We expect hundreds, if not thousands, to be touched and ministered to in these days. Expect more activity toward unity of the church of Sedalia in the months ahead, and with that, revival!

This message is not just for pastors but for all believers. I envision a Jesus march through our city soon that will fill Ohio Avenue from Broadway to Main with hymns of praise and exalting the name of Jesus. If our school football team can fill the streets, how much more for the church? Let us all endeavor to keep the unity of the Spirit!

Response to fiery Ohio derailment frustrated by poor communication and incomplete information

By Josh Funk

Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Firefighters who responded to February's fiery train derailment in Ohio struggled to immediately identify the hazardous chemicals the train was hauling due to a lack of communication from the railroad, officials said Thursday.

During a public hearing in East Palestine — where thousands of residents had to evacuate their homes because of the derailment — National Transportation Safety Board chairwoman Jennifer Homendy asked why Norfolk Southern was able to provide details of the freight to one of its contractors within 10 minutes of the Feb. 3 derailment, but that it took an hour to get that information to first responders.

Knowing what was on the train helps firefighters determine the proper response.

The two-day NTSB hearing was designed to provide information to residents, officials and investigators about the emergency response and the crucial decision three days after the derailment to release toxic vinyl chloride from five tank cars and burn it to keep them from exploding.

That sent a towering plume of black smoke over the town near the Ohio-Pennsylvania border and prompted the evacuation of about half of its 5,000 residents. Even now, residents are concerned about lingering impacts on health, even though state and federal officials say tests show the town's air and water are safe.

East Palestine Fire Chief Keith Drabick said Thursday that there was a consensus in the command center that releasing and burning the chemicals was the "least bad option."

Railroad experts and contractors who helped with the emergency re-

In this photo taken with a drone, portions of a Norfolk Southern freight train that derailed the previous night in East Palestine, Ohio, remain on fire at mid-day, Feb. 4, 2023. The Pipelines and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration proposed a new rule Wednesday, June 21, that would require all railroads to quickly provide the details of everything aboard their trains electronically to every emergency responder within 10 miles of a derailment.

sponse said they believed they had no choice except to use explosives to blow a hole in the tank cars to release and burn the vinyl chloride. Moving the cars or draining the chemicals were not options.

Temperature readings and malfunctioning pressure relief valves led experts to believe a chemical reaction was taking place inside the tank cars that was building pressure, and that this could cause an explosion.

Drew McCarty with Specialized Profession Services said one of the tank cars "frankly scared the hell out of us" when it violently released vinyl chloride with a roar after hours of calm. McCarty said that, combined with his decades of experience, made him think the cars could explode.

Officials from Oxy

Vinyls — the company that produced the vinyl chloride — said they were convinced that the chemical remained stable inside those cars and they tried to explain that to the railroad before officials decided to vent the cars and burn the vinyl chloride, but Norfolk Southern didn't explain that to decision makers. Tests the company did later showed no evidence that the reaction had occurred.

Drabick said it would have been helpful to know about Oxy Vinyls' opinion

at the time, but he doesn't think it would have changed the decision.

Norfolk Southern's

Robert Wood said even if there wasn't a chemical reaction, officials were still concerned that the tank

cars could fail and release the vinyl chloride.

"If that car fails, that is a large cloud of liquefied flammable gas that's going to light off and can have devastating consequences,"

Wood said.

Drabick and other first responders who testified said firefighters need more training — particularly volunteer firefighters like those first on the scene after the derailment — on how to handle hazardous materials. But he conceded it would be hard to imagine ever being fully ready for a disaster of that magnitude.

"I don't think you can ever be prepared for something like this," Drabick said.

Ohio officials said volunteer firefighters receive only 36 hours of initial training when they are certified — significantly less than the 200 hours

professional firefighters receive — and that includes

no hazardous materials training.

The fire chiefs said the initial response to the derailment was complicated because the radios used by the different departments

don't work with each other. It also took time for emergency responders to discover exactly what the train was carrying because the first firefighters on scene didn't have access to the AskRail app that railroads developed to provide that information. The train crew that also had that information was a mile away after moving the locomotive and didn't immediately connect with first responders.

Drabick said it took about 45 minutes for his department to discover what was in the cars.

Homendy said the railroad didn't immediately provide that information to dispatchers and officials who requested it.

Eventually, officials learned about the dangerous nature of the cargo and pulled firefighters back from the derailment site. They also ordered the evacuation of all homes within one mile.

The NTSB said in its preliminary report that an overheated bearing on one of the railcars likely caused the derailment, but it could take more than a year before the agency publishes its final report. The bearing started heating up miles before the derailment, according to sensors on the tracks, but it didn't get hot enough to trigger an alarm until just before the crash. The crew had little time to react.

Video gathered by investigators showed sparks or fire beneath one of the rail cars starting at least

26 miles (42 kilometers) before the derailment in Salem, Ohio.

The hearing on Friday will focus on tank car safety and the trackside detectors.

This derailment and others generated nationwide concern about railroad safety and prompted members of Congress to propose reforms. Norfolk

Southern's CEO Alan

Shaw was grilled at two Senate hearings where he apologized for the derai-lement and promised to make things right in East Palestine.

The Musical "Xanadu," presented by the Liberty Center Association for the Arts Jr. Theater, is based on the 1980s movie of the same name featuring Olivia Newton-John and Gene Kelly.

"Again, we have an amazing team of people—grownups who help on the creative side of it and the organizational side of it," she continued. "But the kids put it all together."

Clark noted the students built the set and painted it; they are doing the lighting and calling light cues, stage managing, and moving the props.

"They get the whole theatrical experience," Clark said. "It's something that we put the whole six weeks into. So, from head to toe, they're ready to go, and they're ready for the show."

Clark said she "feels blessed and fortunate" to work with the community's students.

"And creating a safe space and a positive space for this creation and collaboration," she added. "We've been so gifted with this space and the people who have the time and talents to do this. We always say things take a village, and this is something so many people have had a hand in."

She said she is thankful for the supporters, the fundraisers, the LCAA Board, the administration, and the theatre committees. Clark noted that Carl and Amber Hutcherson create costumes and provide technical support. While Chelsea Turner acts as the consulting director, and Michelle Gilger is the music director. Former student and graduate of the Jr. Theater program, Maggie Meyer is the student choreographer/intern.

"She has been my right-hand person," Clark said of Meyer. "She's helped me with everything. We are so grateful when they (the students) come back."

LCAA's Jr. Theatre, "Xanadu," will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 23, and Saturday, June 24, and a 2 p.m. on Sunday, June 25, at the Hayden Liberty Center, 111 W. Fifth St. Tickets are $15 and $10 for students and can be purchased at the door.

According to the probable cause statement, on Sept. 28, 2021, Matheny sent a chat that stated, "I can get away with stuff right in front of her parents." When asked if the child likes it, Matheny replied, "She doesn't like it, but I don't think she even knows or realizes I am feeling her."

The private chat also included Matheny and this individual discussing sexual intercourse with children and using vulgar language to describe the children's bodies.

During his June 16 interview with investigators, Matheny admitted that he "did it all."

Matheny is being held in the Pettis County Jail on a $100,000 bond. An arraignment took place Wednesday, June 21 in Johnson County Circuit Court.

In addition to the MSHP, the investigation was conducted by the Warrensburg Police Department, Johnson County Sheriff's Office, and the Air Force Office of Special Investigations.

After the holiday has ended, Kiwanis will collect the flags and store them for the next holiday display.

The cost is reasonable, and the funds raised will go to support local children receiving scholarships through Kiwanis.

"We're a service club,"

Van Leer said. "We're a civic organization that's a not-for-profit group. Our mission is completely serving the kids in our community, so anything we can do to raise funds through our various projects are going back to kids that are in our community in Sedalia and Pettis County."

The cost for a single flag flown for the four remaining holidays in 2023 is $55.

Orders of three flag displays are $150. Ten flags will be flown and collected four times for $450.

For more information, contact Tom Van Lear with the Kiwanis Club of Sedalia at 314-803-4109, or sedaliakiwanisflags@gmail.com or apply online at <https://form.jotform.com/231268769167065>.

Families detail stress, terror and sadness after Nashville school shooting in court documents

By Kimberlee

Kruesi

Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Nearly three months after a shooter killed six people at her daughter's school in Nashville, Katherine Heath watches the third-grader lie on her husband's chest whenever her child has a "sad day."

After losing multiple classmates, Heath's daughter is now visibly withdrawn, attending counseling, and learning to live in a world without her best friend.

"She will come to my husband and just lay on his chest. He will say something like 'It's been a hard month baby,'" Heath wrote in a recent court filing. "And she'll just faintly reply 'yea.'"

Heath and more than a dozen other parents wrote about life after the March 27 shooting at The Covenant School, offering images of their still-shaken children to compel a judge not to allow the release of the shooter's writings and other documents. Audrey Hale, a 28-year former Covenant student, indiscriminately opened fire at the private Christian elementary school in March, killing three children and three adults before being fatally shot by police.

That case is on hold after appellate judges ordered a pause in the court proceedings so that they could review whether Covenant parents, the school and the church should be stopped from intervening. The judges agreed to fast-track the appeal.

Parents, school officials and others have expressed outrage at the possibility that they might not be allowed to intervene, arguing that releasing the records could not only spark a copycat attack, but also retraumatize an already hurting and broken community that's attempting to heal from the shooting.

These stories tucked inside the court documents are the first time many of those closest impacted by the Covenant shooting have spoken out about it — particularly on their children who witnessed the terror first-hand. The details shared by the families are sobering: Children terrified of loud noises, repeatedly waking up screaming, and noticeably void of joy.

For Heath, she says that her other child, a son in third grade, continues to bring up memories about the shooting — at the time, he was outside at recess — as he works with a therapist to process that day.

"Mom, did you know I was wearing these shoes the day of the shooting?" he asked.

"Yes, I'm so proud of you for running to a safe

A child weeps while on the bus leaving The Covenant School following a mass shooting at the school in Nashville, Tenn., March 27, 2023. So far this year, the nation has witnessed the highest number on record of mass killings and deaths to this point in a single year. There have been more than 550 mass killing incidents since 2006, according to the database, in which at least 2,900 people have died and at least 2,000 people have been injured.

For Rachel and Bryan Bolton, it took weeks before their three young boys could sleep in their own beds. But now, once they're tucked in, any noises — the ice maker, the dryer, or even footsteps — must be avoided or risk sparking severe anxiety.

"The conversations and questions about why this happened were heavier than any conversations we have had," the Boltons wrote. "Their childlike innocence was taken from them. We attended five funerals in six days."

Marquita Oglesby says thinking back on past memories has been almost impossible because she always returns to the "savage way our father was murdered." Oglesby is one of the seven children of 61-year-old Mike Hill, a school custodian who was killed.

"This tragedy has spun our lives into turmoil, loneliness, anger, and anxiety," Oglesby wrote. "Every monumental moment in the future will now have a sense of emptiness and sadness."

A separate family talked about how their children count police officers while in a building to ensure there were enough "good guys" there to be able to stop the next shooter."

"If there were any hint of a cover-up or conspiracy resulting in our children's murders, would not the parents of the dead children cry out the loudest for the release of these documents?" wrote Erin Kinney, the mother of 9-year-old William Kinney who died in the shooting. "And yet, we collectively desire the complete opposite because we know there is nothing to be discovered."

The Tennessean newspaper, Star News Digital Media Inc., a state senator, a law enforcement nonprofit and a gun-rights organization are advocating for the release in the records. The Associated Press has also requested the records, but is not involved in the lawsuit.

"While it is wrenching to oppose what the grieving parents, school and church want, many of their legal arguments, if adopted by the courts, would turn on its head public access to crime records well beyond this case," said Deborah Fisher, executive director of Tennessee Coalition for Open Government.

Yet the records have also become a political lightning rod among the GOP-dominated Legislature, where many Republican lawmakers have declared they won't consider any possible gun control measures unless the shooter's writings are released.

Most are focusing on the shooter being transgender and touting the need to strengthen school buildings, and largely dismissed concerns over the ease of accessing a gun in Tennessee.

Gov. Bill Lee has also championed the release of the records. The Republican unsuccessfully pushed the General Assembly to pass legislation that would keep firearms away from people who could harm themselves or others.

After lawmakers refused to do so in the spring, Lee immediately called for a special session in August to again take up his proposal. It's unclear if the lawsuit over the shooter's records will still be ongoing.

ACROSS

6. SNORES not snorts. The clue phrase "as it's sleeping" links up directly with SNORES. The "pug" doesn't have to be asleep to snort since it's not unusual for pugs and other kinds of dogs to make that sound while awake.
7. TRAINEE not trainer. A trainer could be limited in terms of how far she can go at her job. In other words, she might be restricted as a trainer to only one or two roles to rise to. But a TRAINEE, depending on the career, could have many job positions from which she might rise.
11. GRILLED not drilled. The exhaustion of "being" GRILLED and enduring an agitating experience might well be obvious on his "face." However, a drill is usually a very demanding, lengthy physical routine, so it probably wouldn't be just the soldier's "face" that would show exhaustion, but other parts of the body as well.
12. LEAD not head. To LEAD the "stallion" on a specific "route" makes a solid answer. The "worker" might simply be turning the horse, so that it's facing (e.g., heading) the opposite way when it's in the barn, for example.
17. LINK not line. LINK is all-encompassing since by establishing a LINK with his "customers," he is ultimately promoting his product's line.
18. TOPIC not tonic. The clue words "brighten up" make tonic (defined as: medicine with an invigorating effect) redundant. TOPIC is apt.
20. BATH not path. "Tourists" staying the night would "notice a dirty" tub but might not venture outside at all, so that an unsightly path would go unnoticed.

DOWN

1. SONG not long. SONG is best. There is no need for long because of the clue phrase "should finish a lot earlier."
2. HIRE not fire. HIRE is apt. It could be argued that firing "employees" is not a "right" or privilege. It is a more complex and sensitive issue than that, involving people's welfare, among many other factors.
3. ZEST not rest. ZEST is a stronger answer since, even if the "instructor" has had "insufficient" rest, he could still be getting his ZEST from adrenaline due to his excitement or anxiety. People can be "boring" in nature no matter how much they rest. But usually ZEST gives an energy boost, which can help eradicate boredom.
4. GAME not name. There's no need to use the word name since it's already implied in the word "team." GAME makes a better choice.
5. COAL not coat. Since the clue word "survival" suggests the man's situation is dire, his having to go without heat (e.g., COAL) might spell his doom. However, although he might not have money "to buy" a new coat, there is a possibility he has secondhand coats that are wearable and, therefore, would help him to survive the cold.
8. NINE not nice. The clue suggests that the "girl" doesn't know the "extended members of her family" in order to make a personal judgment as to whether they're nice. NINE makes a straightforward answer.
9. PAIN not vain. It's unlikely you'd find anyone who could "fathom" a life lived in" vain. Many people, however, know of someone or are themselves living with some sort of PAIN.
10. BOLD not bald. BOLD is apt. Since bald "statements" are defined as something you say without any sensitivity, bald is unnecessary in the clue.
14. SIGHT not night. The SIGHT of the "brilliant, star-studded sky" might well be "great." It's not the night itself that the "resident" is "looking at," but rather, it's the stars.
15. BOOK not rook. It's not the rook that has "helped him win," but the strategic moves he's made with it. A BOOK containing those strategic moves is a better answer.

Post 642 AUX sweeps ahead of wood bat tourney

By Bryan Everson
bryane@sedaliademocrat.com

Sedalia Post 642 AUX had one close call, then ran away with Game 2 of a double-header sweep Wednesday night over Blue Springs Fike Orange at Liberty Park Stadium.

An RBI single by Cade Tucker in the top of the sixth helped tie Game 1 at 3-3, but Charles Clemmerson escaped a bases-loaded jam with no outs in the seventh to force extras.

Gage Hanke put Fike ahead by a run with a hit that drove in Cadon Witcanack, but Sedalia had a better response in the bottom of the frame. After Hayden Zeiler was hit by a pitch, Caden Homan reached on an error and Zeiler crossed the plate to tie the game. One batter later, Homan scored, then Cooper Woolery doubled to left, narrowly missing a home run as Homan touched home to seal the win in walk-off fashion.

"This year, we haven't had too many chances to walk-off a game, and Cooper came up clutch there at the end when we needed it," Sedalia head coach Alex Lang said.

On delivering the winner, Woolery said, "I was looking for a nice pitch down the middle to drive somewhere with a runner in scoring position. He time one that looked good to me and I jumped on it. It was slow, but I think it was a fastball. It was exciting. They said it hit the fence, but the run scored, that's all that mattered."

Post 642 AUX had nine hits and drew seven walks leading up to the eighth, a sign that its typical run-scoring efficiency was absent.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Ty Norris has heard NASCAR fans both cheer and boo Ross Chastain, who seems to make more enemies by the race. The president of Trackhouse Racing doesn't mind: Norris thinks NASCAR should have 40 other drivers just like his "Melon Man."

"Ross is a driver that has become comfortable in making other drivers uncomfortable," Norris said. "He doesn't mind going three-wide. He doesn't mind going up against the wall. He doesn't mind poking his nose in there when he wants the space."

That aggression has crossed a line at times for some. Chastain punched Noah Gragson after the race at Kansas earlier this year. Chastain also spun Chase Elliott, NASCAR's most popular driver the past five years, early in the final stage of last year's finale — costing Elliott a chance at a second title.

McNeese State coach Wade hit with penalties, suspension for LSU violations

Then-LSU coach Will Wade gestures during the first half of an NCAA college basketball game against Arkansas, Wednesday, March 2, 2022, in Fayetteville, Ark. An independent infractions panel handed a two-year show-cause penalty and a 10-game suspension to former LSU and current McNeese State men's basketball coach Will Wade on Thursday, June 22, 2023, for multiple rules violations.

Former LSU and current McNeese State men's basketball coach Will Wade received a two-year show-cause penalty and a 10-game suspension Thursday for multiple rules violations, ending a slow-moving case originally rooted in a federal corruption investigation into the sport.

The ruling came from a panel of the Independent Accountability Resolution Process (IARP). It determined Wade failed to report potential violations, as well as making payments to the ex-fiancée of a former player — who he had coached before arriving at LSU in 2017 — to prevent the disclosure of potential violations.

Additionally, the panel found Wade failed to cooperate with the investigation running from December 2018 to August 2021, specifically by delaying full production of requested records and knowingly providing false or misleading information.

While Wade's case grew from the federal corruption probe, chief panel member Bruce Meyerson said the majority of allegations brought in this case were unrelated — and ultimately no violation was determined from an oft-cited FBI wiretap involving Wade.

LSU fired Wade in March 2022 and he was hired by McNeese State earlier this year.

Bills trainers cite Hamlin case as example for schools, youth leagues to make life-saving plans

By Michael Marot

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — When Buffalo Bills trainers Nate Breske and Denny Kellington rushed onto the field following Damar Hamlin's collapse in January, they stuck to the plan — right down to positioning Hamlin's teammates to shield the television cameras.

Their quick actions saved Hamlin's life. Now they're trying to save others.

On Thursday, Breske and Kellington told an athletic trainers convention in Indianapolis that pre-planning and regular practices helped prepare them for a worst-case scenario and they're urging schools and youth leagues to start creating their own emergency action plans.

"First up, I don't think anything can prepare you for what we went through in that moment," Breske said. "It was the first time we had seen it on a live human, but we had practiced it. We had done chest compressions before, we had done things with our paramedics and the other physicians, so we were ready, and everyone knew their role and what needed to happen in that moment."

The story of what happened has been retold many times over the past six months.

Hamlin, the former University of Pittsburgh star, went from sixth-round draft pick in 2021 to starter last season when veteran Micah Hyde suffered a neck injury in Week 3 and became a household name when he went into cardiac arrest after making a routine tackle during an NFL game at Cincinnati on Jan. 2.

Breske and Kellington helped resuscitate Hamlin with CPR and an automated external defibrillator before an ambulance took Hamlin to the University of Cincinnati Medical Center. One week later, he flew home to western New York.

Hamlin was cleared to resume full practices May 31 and is now using his charity, the Chasing M's Foundation, to distribute AEDs while amplifying the significance of CPR training.

In April, Hamlin's doctors concluded a hit to the chest caused his heart to stop because of a rare condition — commotio cordis, which occurs when a severe blow to the chest causes the heart to quiver and stop pumping blood efficiently.

He was fortunate because NFL teams invest heavily in medical equipment and staffing.

But in recreation and youth leagues and even high school and middle schools, employing trainers or buying machines such as AEDs can prove unaffordable.

According to the National Athletic Trainers Association, only 37% of America's public high schools have full access to athletic trainers despite statistics showing 93.4% of sports-related deaths in children are caused by sudden cardiac arrest, exertional heat stroke or exertional sickling, which can occur in people who carry the sickle cell trait.

Breske, Kellington, Hamlin and others want to change those numbers.

"There needs to be trainers out there," Kellington said. "I know cost is one thing and communities don't have the money to do it, but what's the cost of a life? How can you not have somebody there?"

If that's your child and something happens and there's nobody there to help, how upset would you be just for lack of funding or lack of knowledge?"

State lawmakers also are getting involved.

In 2022, the Sudden Cardiac Arrest Foundation reported 40 states required CPR training for all students before graduation while only 20 states and the District of Columbia required AEDs to be in schools.

California also mandates schools with sports teams must have AEDs on school grounds.

Hamlin's experience put a spotlight on the issue.

Since then, a coalition of the NFL, NBA, NCAA NHL, MLS, Major League Baseball NATA, the American Heart Association and American Red Cross are lobbying to make emergency action plans, CPR and AED education for coaches and clearly marked defibrillators mandatory in all 50 states.

Last week, the Ohio House of Representatives approved legislation that would require AEDs to be available at nearly every school or sports and recreation venue in the state.

And to help defray the costs, the NFL Foundation has pledged $1 million in grant money.

"Teachers have tended to be taught CPR and how to use an AED in 10 minutes," Breske said. "You don't have to be certified to do it. It's awareness of what's going on, it's a 9-1-1 call, doing chest compressions and getting the AED in place."

Without those tools and the trainers' actions, Hamlin's return to the playing field might not have been possible, and Breske and Kellington know it.

So their mission now is to use their platform to inform, educate and push for changes to make the sports world safer at all levels of competition.

"Throughout these last few months, people ask 'Don't you have to be certified to do CPR or to use an AED? That's not the case,'" Kellington said.

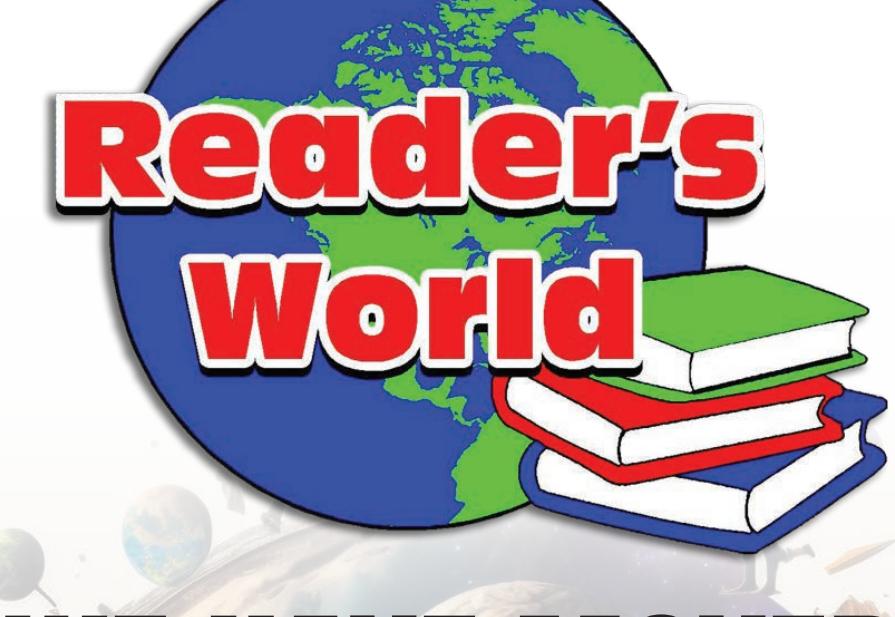

"Bystander CPR is a great way to save somebody's life. And, as I said earlier, the machine tells you what to do. The lack of not doing something is what puts kids in jeopardy. I think we all should take a look around and see what we're all doing."

Deion Sanders says he will undergo surgery for blood clots in legs

By Pat Graham

Associated Press

Deion Sanders is scheduled to undergo surgery Friday for a blood clot in each leg, the University of Colorado football coach revealed in a video he posted.

The news of Coach Prime's impending procedure began to spread Thursday after Pat McAfee discussed what was called an emergency surgery on his podcast with longtime NFL defensive back Adam Jones.

Later in the day, Sanders posted a video to clarify: "It's time for the horse to talk. You heard from everybody else but you hadn't heard it from me."

Sanders explained in the video on YouTube that his doctor found a blood clot in both legs, including one in his left thigh. He's struggled with the left foot since having two toes amputated in 2021 due to blood clot issues while at Jackson State.

He said that two of his three remaining toes on that foot are what he referred to as "hammer toes," a condition where there's an atypical bend in the middle joint.

The procedure he's having Friday is to "try to get those clots so I can have proper blood flow to the leg so they can fix the toes.

That's what's going on."

Last week, Sanders revealed he might lose his left foot as a result of circulation issues. Sanders allowed camera crews with "Thee Pregame Show" to film a meeting with his medical team at the University of Colorado, where he's preparing for his first season as head football coach.

On Thursday, Sanders said: "There is no talk of amputation. There's no talk of any of that whatsoever."

Sanders laughed as he told a story about someone reaching out that they had a remedy to have all his toes grow back. He later thanked everyone for their support and well-wishes.

"I ain't going nowhere because we're comin,'" Sanders said. "I'm just trying to get all this straight. So when I walk that sideline, and I walk my walk, because I'm gonna talk my talk, that I'm going to walk my walk. ... I appreciate you. I truly do."

The interest in Colorado football has soared since Sanders was hired last December to turn around the Buffaloes following a 1-11 season in 2022. Colorado sold out of its season-ticket allotment, marking the first time that's happened since 1996.

IOC banishes boxing governing body from Olympics, sport remains at Paris Games

By Graham Dunbar

Associated Press

GENEVA — The International Boxing Association was banished from the Olympic family on Thursday, ending a years-long dispute fueled by defying advice and instructions from the IOC. Boxing, however, will keep its status as an Olympic sport at the 2024 Paris Games.

The International Olympic Committee voted to derecognize the IBA at a specially called meeting — an outcome that was inevitable after being recommended two weeks ago by the executive board, a body chaired by IOC president Thomas Bach.

The vote was 69-1, with 10 members abstaining.

Boxing was never really in danger of being kicked out of the Olympics over the four years since the IOC suspended the sport's governing body in an effort to force changes.

"We highly value the sport of boxing. We have an extremely serious problem with IBA because of their governance," Bach told IOC members during their online meeting.

The dispute centered on the IBA's management under presidents from Uzbekistan and Russia who the IOC disapproved of, its finances being backed by Russian state energy firm Gazprom, plus the integrity of bouts and judging.

"The boxers fully deserve to be governed by an international federation with integrity and transparency," the IOC president said.

The IOC is already overseeing boxing competitions for the Paris Olympics without IBA involvement, as it did for the Tokyo Games in 2021.

It was unclear if boxers representing national federations who stay affiliated to the IBA will be classed as eligible for the Paris competition.

Boxing can now be confirmed on the 2028 Los Angeles Olympic program, which the IOC and Bach withheld as leverage against IBA.

Boxing is "guaranteed" to be in Los Angeles, members were told Thursday.

The sport is good for Olympic business with broad appeal — 25 different countries won boxing medals in Tokyo, with nine taking gold — and the IOC repeatedly said its problem was with boxing officials, not its athletes.

"We appreciate boxing as one of the most global sports. We embrace the values of boxing," Bach said, praising the sport's "important social role promoting inclusion."

The IBA, which called the decision a "tremendous error," can appeal to the Court of Arbitration for Sport.

The expulsion was "catastrophic for global boxing and blatantly contradicts the IOC's claims of acting in the best interests of boxing and athletes," the Lausanne-based boxing body said in a statement.

Olympic boxing has had a tainted reputation for decades, typified by notorious judging at the 1988 Seoul Games that denied American light-middleweight Roy Jones Jr. the gold medal against home fighter Park Si-hun. Jones, who now has Russian citizenship, was enlisted by the IBA last year to support its fight for Olympic status.

There were allegations ahead of the 2012 London Olympics of cash deals planned to fix medals, and further doubt cast by fighters on the integrity of bouts at the 2016 Rio de Janeiro Games.

At those Olympics, the president of boxing's governing body, then known by its French acronym AIBA, was long-time IOC member C.K. Wu of Taiwan.

"The IOC has failed to recognize the destructive actions of C.K. Wu, who led the International Boxing Association to bankruptcy, collapse, and corruption at all levels," the IBA said.

After Wu was ousted by boxing officials in 2017, the sport's problems with the IOC intensified.

National federations defied IOC warnings in 2018 by electing Gafur Rakhimov as president. The businessman from Uzbekistan allegedly had ties to organized crime and heroin trafficking.

Umar Kremlev's election to replace Rakhimov in 2020 followed another round of IOC election warnings that went unheeded.

The IBA's debts approaching $20 million were cleared under Kremlev and the IOC objected to the boxing body's financial reliance on Gazprom.

Kremlev announced last month at the men's world championships that the IBA was no longer sponsored by Gazprom, and his rhetoric against Olympic officials got more confrontational.

Thursday's meeting went ahead after a late appeal by the IBA to CAS against the IOC board's recommendation failed this week.

IOC vice president John Coates recused himself from the debate and vote on boxing because he has led the CAS management board for the past 12 years.

The IOC can now start to work with a rival organization created this year called World Boxing. It has drawn support from officials in the United States, Switzerland and Britain, countries whose national federations resisted Kremlev's leadership of the IBA.

Britain eyes boost for baseball with return of MLB, new youth programs

By Ken Maguire

Associated Press

LONDON — In a country full of soccer, rugby and cricket stars, young Alex Lintern went in a different direction on dress-up day at school.

"I was two people: a baseball player and Spider-Man," the 6-year-old Londoner said.

That was shortly after the World Baseball Classic, where Britain's first-ever win at the tournament sparked some interest back home. Harry Ford, the 20-year-old American catcher with British parents, became a mini-celebrity.

Baseball enthusiasts in the U.K. — there's more than you'd think, they say — hope to build on that momentum with the return of Major League Baseball to London this weekend when the St. Louis Cardinals face the Chicago Cubs at London Stadium.

"America's pastime" likely won't be challenging anytime soon as a first-choice sport in Britain, but baseball officials are optimistic they're making gains. In a country that has just 60 baseball clubs and a limited Little League system, five new youth programs popped up this spring.

"The WBC had a really galvanizing effect on baseball fans in this country," British Baseball Federation spokesman Richard Evans said. "The development of youth baseball is key for us."

Most of the players on the WBC team were American-born, and there's just one British player among the 90 teenagers competing this week at MLB's European Elite camp at the national baseball complex outside London.

Ford's triumphs were tracked by an elementary

A kid throws a baseball during the MLB First Pitch Festival, at the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park, in London, Thursday, June 22, 2023. Britain's relative success at the World Baseball Classic and the upcoming series between the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals has increased London's interest about baseball. The sport's governing body says it has seen an uptick in interest among kids.

school north of London. The Seattle Mariners prospect and Atlanta native was "knighted" at an assembly after he homered to help Britain beat Colombia 7-5, which earned them automatic qualification to the next WBC. Ford wrote back in a tweet: "You guys are awesome! Glad I could join your class."

"I definitely think that the exposure that they're getting from TV and from the events that are now coming to the U.K. really have a bigger impact than we realize," said Nicole De Caires, whose 6-year-old son Lucca recently started playing. "It's not in the schools and it's not commonly advertised for children. The kids have it drummed into them so early on that if you want to be successful in sports in the U.K., it's football."

MLB staged its first regular-season game in Europe four years ago when the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox played in London. The Cardinals-Cubs series had been slated to follow the next year, but the pandemic pushed those plans back.

Still, MLB says the 2019 series was a big success, drawing nearly 119,000 fans to London Stadium and opening the door to a broadcast deal with the BBC. WBC games were available via pay-TV service BT Sport.

"The good news is the interest remains," said Chris Marinak, MLB's chief operations and strategy officer. "The engagement is there. The ticket sales are super strong. A lot of the buzz from the market suggests that there's a really strong interest in baseball in the U.K."

Audience research company GWI's data showed that interest in baseball among British sports fans increased from 4% in 2019 to 5.9% last year, the league said.

Even U.K. Prime Minister Rishi Sunak has dipped his toes in the sport, taking in a Washington Nationals game on a recent official visit to the U.S. capital, though the British press carefully noted that Sunak did not throw out the first pitch — a ceremonial toss that even high-profile athletes can get wrong.

"There's definitely momentum and there's definitely interest. The challenge will continue to be to raise awareness," said Will Lintern — father of Alex — who worked with Britain's team at the WBC as a video coordinator. "At the moment, we're busy just handing out fliers and going into schools and just letting people know that baseball happens in this country."

Lintern, who played for the national team and at Menlo College in California, has developed a "T-Rex T-Ball" program for kids ages 4 to 6 that clubs have taken an interest in.

"If we are going to find that first major league player who is born and raised in the U.K., then they're going to have to start at a younger age," he said.

A British coach has made the jump already — Liam Carroll was appointed the manager of the Red Sox Single-A affiliate in Salem, Virginia, in January. Carroll was previously head coach of the British national team.

Eduardo De Cairnes, who is helping coach the new youth program at the Croydon Pirates club, said baseball is "quite the chat at the moment" given the WBC and the weekend series — not to mention on the fields in south London.

"It's been more popular than we expected," he said. "They're extending it by a month."

Later this year, a new facility described as the "first indoor destination for baseball and softball in Europe" is scheduled to open just north of London. It will have batting cages and a training center.

"British baseball has been going for a long time, it's just been out of the spotlight," said Chris Knoblock, spokesman for Baseball Softball UK, the national development and performance agency for the two sports.

"When we have the special moments where attention is paid to us, that's where we can really make a quick impact and grow the game quite rapidly."

UConn's Hurley cashes in on national title with new 6-year, $32.1M contract

By Pat Eaton-Robb

Associated Press

STORRS, Conn. — UConn men's basketball coach Dan Hurley has cashed in on the Huskies national championship, agreeing to a new six-year, $32.1 million contract, the school announced Thursday.

The deal, which runs through 2029, will pay Hurley an average of $5.35 million per season and includes incentives that could push his compensation higher, the school said. The school originally said the deal was worth $31.5 million, but said later that it had miscalculated the value.

The contract replaces a package signed in 2018

when Hurley was hired that paid him about $3 million per season.

"I am thrilled to have Dan Hurley leading our men's basketball program," David Benedict, the school's director of athletics, said. "The work he and his staff have done over the past five years in rebuilding our program, which culminated in the Huskies once again reaching the pinnacle of college basketball, has been nothing short of remarkable. I know all of UConn Nation is ecstatic that Dan will continue to lead this program for the foreseeable future."

The 50-year-old Hurley is 104-55 at UConn, a program he took over in March 2018 following three losing seasons and the firing of former coach Kevin Ollie amid NCAA violations.

The Huskies went 31-8 this past season on the way to the program's fifth national title, winning each game in the NCAA Tournament by double digits. Hurley's 13-year coaching record, which includes stints at Wagner and Rhode Island, is 255-160.

"I want to thank the players and staff who helped make this climb possible," Hurley said in a statement. "Coaching at the University of Connecticut is an honor and we intend to build on our success as one of the premier programs in college basketball."

Hurley was in New York Thursday to watch the NBA draft, which is expected to include UConn prospects Jordan Hawkins, Adama Sanogo and Andre Jackson Jr.

The school said the salary increases in Hurley's contract will be covered by donations to the Husky Athletic Fund and increased ticket sales revenue.

Wade's show-cause penalty through June 2025 means Wade cannot perform any off-campus recruiting activities during April and summer evaluation periods. There are also additional recruiting restrictions against Wade, who was determined to have committed three Level I violations — considered a severe breach of conduct — that include the rule governing overall head-coach responsibility for conduct within a program.

The case also included violations tied to the Tigers' football program and the school had self-imposed penalties for both sports, though the panel added three years of probation to begin this fall after the expiration of a school probation term already in place. Meyerson, a retired appeals court judge, said in a Zoom call with reporters that the panel sought to avoid imposing penalties hitting LSU athletes uninvolved in cases from years earlier.

The federal corruption investigation became public in September 2017. The cases that grew from that eventually entangled numerous schools, then notably touched Wade after 2019 reports about leaked wiretap excerpts that captured him speaking with someone convicted of funneling illegal payments to the families of recruits.

In transcripts of the phone call, Wade discussed presenting a "strong" offer to an apparent third party who represented then-LSU player Javonte Smart.

Meyerson said the panel didn't find sufficient evidence beyond the excerpt alone to conclude a violation. NCAA vice president of hearing operations Derrick Crawford said investigators were unable to obtain a full version of the wiretap.

"The NCAA made a number of efforts to obtain that piece of evidence from the federal government and they turned us down," Crawford said.

In a statement posted to its athletics site, McNeese State said the penalty would replace a five-game suspension and one-year show-cause penalty it had imposed after Wade's hiring.

"We accept and respect today's decision by the IARP in regards to Coach Wade," athletics director Heath Schroyer said. "We are all happy this is finally behind us and we have clarity moving forward. We have been proactive from the beginning in respecting the NCAA's process and in regards to protecting the integrity of our institution. That will not change moving forward."

"The enthusiasm around this program is at an all-time high and we are all excited about the future of McNeese Basketball with (Wade) leading the way."

LSU president William F. Tate IV and athletics director Scott Woodward issued a joint statement, saying they were "pleased that our current men's basketball student-athletes will not be punished for the acts of others" and that the panel accepted self-imposed football penalties.

"We are grateful to the members of the panel for their time and fairness," they said. "LSU is now moving forward along with our passionate fans supporting our current coaches and student-athletes in both men's basketball and football."

The panel's ruling included a fine for both the men's basketball and football programs in addition to probation, vacated records and the self-imposed penalties.

The IARP was created to handle complex cases and emerged out of proposals from the 2018 commission led by former U.S. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice to reform the sport. It will be eliminated after completing its slate of referred cases, a move announced last summer as the NCAA attempts to modernize its infractions process and make it move more efficiently.

The IARP took on six cases, five of which — Arizona, LSU, Louisville, Kansas and North Carolina State — had ties to the federal probe. The other involved Memphis and the recruitment of one-and-done big man James Wiseman.

N.C. State was the first of those cases to push through the system and reach a ruling in December 2021, while the LSU ruling leaves only Kansas with a case still pending in the IARP.

supplant guards Stephen Curry or Klay Thompson in Golden State's starting lineup.

So, at 38 years old and about to enter his 19th NBA season, Paul could find himself in a new position. But there is an obvious tradeoff, since the Warriors will almost certainly be considered a title-contender going into next season after winning four championships in the last decade — and Paul has never gotten his championship. He went to the NBA Finals with Phoenix in 2021, but the Suns blew a 2-0 series lead and lost to Milwaukee in six games.

The 12-time All-Star averaged 13.9 points and 8.9 assists this past season for Phoenix.

Poole, who turned 24 earlier this week, joins a Washington team now fully in the midst of a complete rebuild. He averaged 20.4 points this past season, one that began with Golden State veteran Draymond Green punching Poole at practice during training camp before taking a brief leave of absence from the team.

Green is set to become a free agent, one that the Warriors want to retain.

Free-agent TE Lewis awaits call for a record-setting 18th NFL season

By Mark Long

AP Pro Football Writer

Well before sunrise at a posh rental home in Mexico, Marcedes Lewis is working out. He's running sprints, lifting weights, jumping boxes, hitting heavy bags. It's how he starts his days, even on vacation.

It's also how the now-39-year-old Lewis stays ready for a phone call he believes is coming, one that will get him back in the NFL for what would be a record-setting 18th season.

The free-agent tight end, a guy nicknamed "Big Dog" because of his 6-foot-6, 270-pound frame and his adept leadership, anxiously awaits a chance to join a new team. He hopes it happens before training camps open next month but also understands it could take an unforeseen injury somewhere for him to strike a deal.

"I get the business side of it," Lewis told The Associated Press this week. "My agent is in talks with a handful of teams, but it's just small talk. I guess teams are trying to figure out their rosters and what they need."

"But if you just look at my film from the last three years, there's no decline in what I'm able to do. I'm the best blocking tight end out there."

Last year, Lewis tied Dallas' Jason Witten and Kansas City's Tony Gonzalez for the most seasons by a tight end in NFL history. One more would leave him alone atop the list.

A first-round draft pick

Green Bay Packers tight end Marcedes Lewis (89) watches from the bench during the first half of an NFL football game against the Arizona Cardinals, Thursday, Oct. 28, 2021, in Glendale, Ariz. Veteran NFL tight end Marcedes Lewis wants to go out on top. The 39-year-old Lewis is a free agent and is anxiously awaiting a chance to play an 18th season.

by Jacksonville in 2006, Lewis has played in 251 games and logged roughly 10,000 snaps over 17 NFL seasons. He totaled 375 catches for 4,502 yards and 33 scores in 12 years with the Jaguars — all franchise records for a tight end — and made his lone Pro Bowl in 2010.

Jacksonville unceremoniously dumped Lewis in 2018. He quickly landed in Green Bay, where he spent the past five years and became close friends with quarterback Aaron Rodgers, receiver Davante Adams and others. He was used primarily as a blocker with the Packers, finishing with 57 receptions for 582 yards and six

TDs.

His chances of returning to Green Bay

shrank considerably when

Rodgers was traded to the

New York Jets and then the Pack added two tight ends in April's NFL draft: Oregon State's Luke Musgrave in the second round and South Dakota State's Tucker Kraft in the third.

Following Rodgers

and his former offensive coordinator (Nathaniel Hackett) in Jacksonville and Green Bay to New York still could happen,

but the Jets currently have six tight ends on their roster.

"It is very common for new faces to want old faces to be able to come in and help accelerate the installation of an entire program," Jets coach Robert Saleh said last month, adding "you never know"

when asked specifically about the possibility of signing Lewis.

Lewis figured reuniting

with Adams in Las Vegas

— a short flight from his daughter and home in Los Angeles — might be an option, especially after the Raiders traded Darren Waller, but then they moved up to take Notre Dame standout Michael Mayer in the second round.

Sixteen tight ends were drafted in all, including an NFL-record nine in the first three rounds.

That leaves fewer spots for backups across the league, but Lewis considers himself an ideal role model for any rookie.

After all, he's never been suspended, has missed just one game in the past six seasons and has a sterling reputation as a teammate.

"For older players, there's two things where they could potentially not get picked up," Lewis said. "One is that their play is declining for their role. The second thing is they're asking for too much money. I'm neither of those. I just want to compete."

playing unselfish baseball and doing a job with runners in scoring position," Lang said. "We did that a lot better in game 2."

Woolery added, "They just said keep hitting the ball, they'll come around and we'll find gaps. [They stressed] situational hitting, 'don't be selfish. Play team ball. We definitely came out and executed."

Zeiler had a three-hit performance in the second game, while Jayden

Archibeque added a pair in the win.

In the first game, Homan finished 3-5.

The combined victories improved Post

642 AUX to 18-3 on the summer.

"It's been great," Woolery said.

"We're having a winning season, having lots of fun while doing it. It's always fun when you're winning games, but with this crew it's a lot more fun, too."

The team travels to Blue Springs this weekend where it'll play in the Fike Baseball Junior Wood Bat Classic Tournament.

Sedalia begins by taking on Sioux Falls Post 15 East on Friday at 5:30 p.m. The action continues Saturday at 11:30 a.m. with a game against Topeka Post 421, followed by one against Fike Blue later that day at 4:30 p.m. With four teams each in three pools, pool winners and one wild card team will advance to the semifinals, which take place at 11:30 a.m. Sunday, followed by the first-place contest.

also means a bit more with Music City officially Trackhouse Racing's home base. Trackhouse will even have Taylor Lee, who competed on "The Voice," performing an acoustic set before the race at the team's haulers.

Chastain, who ran tire tests at Bristol Motor Speedway on Tuesday and Wednesday, doesn't see any added pressure competing at Nashville, where he finished fifth last year in a weather-delayed race. Winning is what matters most.

"It's about the end for us," Chastain said.

Trackhouse owner Justin Marks lives outside of Nashville and had set this year for his team to be operating in Music City. The shop remains in Charlotte, North Carolina, but the team's headquarters will move from a Nashville suburb to the middle of the downtown entertainment district at the end of this season.

The racing team also has continued a local tie-in to famed honkytonk Tootsie's Orchid Lounge, which will be all over Daniel Suarez's car again for Sunday night's race.

Only the fifth Cup Series winner born outside the United States, the Mexican driver also has yet to win this season and is three points out of the final playoff position with 10 races remaining as he tries to make the postseason for a second straight year. Suarez finished seventh at the 1.33-mile track in Lebanon, Tennessee, in 2021 when it hosted the first Cup Series race in 37 years.

Norris said Trackhouse employees understand Nashville means a bit more than just the start of the push to the playoffs.

"I feel as if they put in just a few extra hours, a little bit extra care to make sure that everything that they can do positively to affect the outcome of this race," Norris said.

NBC takes over coverage down the stretch of the NASCAR season, and Hall of Famer Dale Earnhardt Jr. said it's been a great season with lots of storylines. A year ago, it was the Next Gen car debut creating challenges and problems for teams.

This year, the drama comes from drivers disagreeing on the track.

"It's been a fascinating year," Earnhardt said. "I'm sure that that is going to, as it does every year, kind of crescendo and build as we get closer to the playoffs. The pressure will mount. The risk taking will increase. The excitement that that creates for us will be plentiful."

Norris worked for Dale Earnhardt Inc. and recalled an event with the late Dale Earnhardt noting fans split 50-50 between cheers and boos. Norris isn't comparing the "Melon Man" to "The Intimidator," but he noted his former boss told him that even the fans who hated him still loved him as a driver.

Chastain's challenge is winning more races and an elusive Cup title. So far, his best Cup Series season finish came last year when he finished second to Joey Logano.

Until then, Chastain certainly isn't boring.

"What I will say is Ross is probably the closest to old school racing that we've seen come along," Norris said.

From Page A11

Paul had two of his title-hope seasons thwarted by the Warriors. In 2018, Paul and the Houston Rockets had a 3-2 series lead in the Western Conference finals before he got hurt, missed the final two games and Golden State prevailed — on the way to the NBA title.

And in 2019, the Warriors beat Paul and the Rockets again, that time in the West semifinals before ultimately falling to Toronto in the NBA Finals.

The move could also provide the Warriors with financial flexibility in future seasons. Poole is about to begin a four-year, $128 million deal. Paul is due about $31 million this coming season and has nothing guaranteed after that.

It may usher in something totally new and different for Paul — a bench role.

He has appeared in 1,214 regular-season games and another 149 in the playoffs, and has started every single one of them. But it obviously seems unlikely that he would supplant guards Stephen Curry or Klay Thompson in Golden State's starting lineup.

So, at 38 years old and about to enter his 19th NBA season, Paul could find himself in a new position. But there is an obvious tradeoff, since the Warriors will almost certainly be considered a title-contender going into next season after winning four championships in the last decade — and Paul has never gotten his championship. He went to the NBA Finals with Phoenix in 2021, but the Suns blew a 2-0 series lead and lost to Milwaukee in six games.

The 12-time All-Star averaged 13.9 points and 8.9 assists this past season for Phoenix.

Poole, who turned 24 earlier this week, joins a Washington team now fully in the midst of a complete rebuild. He averaged 20.4 points this past season, one that began with Golden State veteran Draymond Green punching Poole at practice during training camp before taking a brief leave of absence from the team.

Green is set to become a free agent, one that the Warriors want to retain.

Trackhouse Racing needs Chastain to start by winning his first race this season, which would lock him into the playoffs for a second straight year. He goes into Sunday's race at Nashville Superspeedway fourth in the Cup standings as the series resumes after the lone week off

"Eldorado: Everything the Nazis Hate" (2023)

(per Netflix).
