By Faith Bemiss

An ice cream social hosted by the Pettis County Democrats will benefit local community outreach programs.

On Wednesday, July 12, several fundraising committee members gathered to make 75 of 150 homemade waffle bowls for the event slated for Thursday, July 20. Proceeds will go toward high school scholarships, a Christmas outreach project, and a donation of drinks for the Rose Nolen Black History Library Open House on Saturday, July 29. Sharyn Fante-Hession said committee members included herself, Robin Schroeder, Karen Franklin, Mona McCormick, Tina Schroeder, Carol Dahlin, and Donna Sue Franklin.

Fante-Hession added the event isn't a political event, just a fundraiser.

Community evacuation exercise practices for heat-related blackouts

By Chris Howell

Thursday, July 13, a community emergency preparedness exercise was held focusing on the evacuation of a long-term care facility due to a power failure during extremely hot weather.

With summer stresses on an overloaded electrical grid, power outages are a reality public planners must be prepared for, especially when no air conditioning could easily put senior citizens at risk.

Dawn Williams, of the Pettis County Health Center, was the Emergency Preparedness Planner for the exercise that coordinated departments across the city to find temporary shelter for actors playing those evacuated from their homes.

"It is a full-skill emergency evacuation exercise," Williams said. "Today is dealing with an excessive heat wave that we've been experiencing for the past week that has caused power outages."

121 Farmhouse gears up for 10th anniversary

WARRENSBURG – 121 Farmhouse Kitchen will celebrate its 10-year anniversary of being in business with an event later this month.

Ashland Bell, baker and owner of 121 Farmhouse Kitchen, said she is looking forward to the celebration, which will be hosted from 5 to 7:30 p.m. Friday, July 28 at the business, 1047 NE 121st Road in Warrensburg.

"We will have a lot of vendors with giveaways. There will be raffles, T-shirts, and we are working on adding some more special things as we get closer to the event," Bell said.

While celebrating its 10-year anniversary, 121 Farmhouse Kitchen will also be celebrating the third birthday of having a brick-and-mortar storefront.

"We are also wanting to show our customers some customer appreciation. This year we have a lot to celebrate," Bell said.

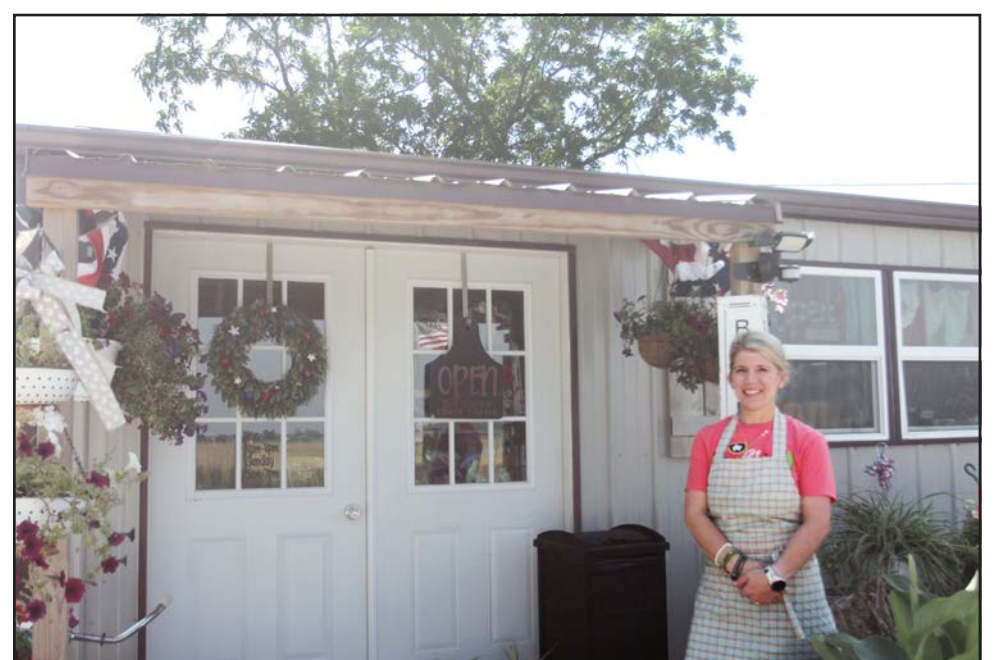

The love for baking comes from Bell's childhood, as she has been baking from a young age. By mixing her passion for baking with her appreciation for the community, she has been able to garner a strong customer base.

"I have been baking ever since I could start," Bell laughed. "So I guess around 7 or 8 years old. While I don't have a favorite thing to bake, I probably end up baking drop cookies more than anything. My absolute favorite thing a customer can do, though, is to give me a theme for their birthday or anniversary or any other cake. That way, I get to use my creative side in my baking."

The side business began to help Ashland during tough times. Ever since its creation, the business has continued to grow.

El Nino threatening rice crops

By Aniruddha Ghosal

Associated Press

NEW DELHI — Warmer, drier weather because of an earlier than usual El Nino is expected to hamper rice production across Asia, hitting global food security in a world still reeling from the impacts of the war in Ukraine.

An El Nino is a natural, temporary and occasional warming of part of the Pacific that shifts global weather patterns, and climate change is making them stronger. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration announced this one in June, a month or two earlier than it usually does. This gives it time to grow. Scientists say there's a one in four chance it will expand to supersized levels.

That's bad news for rice farmers, particularly in Asia where 90% of the world's rice is grown and eaten, since a strong El Nino typically means less rainfall for the thirsty crop.

Past El Ninos have resulted in extreme weather, ranging from drought to floods.

There are already "alarm bells," said Abdullah Mamun, a research analyst at the International Food Policy Research Institute or IFPRI, pointing to rising rice prices due to shortfalls in production. The average price of 5% broken white rice in June in Thailand was about 16% higher than last year's average.

Global stocks have run low since last year, in part due to devastating floods in Pakistan, a major rice exporter. This year's El Nino may amplify other woes for rice-producing countries, such as reduced availability of fertilizer due to the war and some countries' export restrictions on rice. Myanmar, Cambodia and Nepal are particularly vulnerable, warned a recent report by research firm BMI.

Grain supplies already squeezed by Ukraine war

"There is uncertainty over the horizon," Mamun said.

Recently, global average temperatures have hit record highs. Monsoon rains over India were lighter than usual by the end of June. Indonesian President Joko Widodo on Monday asked his ministers to anticipate a long dry season. And in the Philippines, authorities are carefully managing water to protect vulnerable areas.

Some countries are bracing for food shortages. Indonesia was among the worst hit by India's decision to restrict rice exports last year after less rain fell than expected and a historic heat wave scorched wheat, raising worries that domestic food prices would surge.

Last month, India said it would send over 1 million metric tons (1.1 million U.S. tons) to Indonesia, Senegal and Gambia to help them meet "their food security needs."

Fertilizer is another crucial variable. Last year China, a major producer, restricted exports to keep domestic prices in check after fertilizers were among exports affected by sanctions on Russian ally Belarus for human rights violations. Sanctions on Russia for its invasion of Ukraine don't specifically target fertilizers but the war has disrupted shipments of the three main chemical fertilizers: potash, phosphorus, and nitrogen.

Bangladesh found suppliers in Canada to make up for lost potash shipments from Belarus, but many countries are still scrambling to find new sources.

Farmers like Abu Bakar Siddique, who cultivates 1.2 hectares (3 acres) in northern Bangladesh, had enough fertilizer to keep his yields steady last year. But less rainfall meant he had to rely more on electric pumps for his winter harvest at a time of power shortages due to war-related shortfalls of diesel and coal.

"This increased my costs," he said.

Each El Nino is different, but historical trends suggest scarce rainfall in South and Southeast Asia will parch the soil, causing cascading effects in coming years, said Beau Damen, a natural resources officer with the Food and Agriculture Organization based in Bangkok, Thailand. Some countries, like Indonesia, may be more vulnerable in the early stages of the phenomenon, he said.

Kusnan, a farmer in Indonesia's East Java, said rice farmers there have tried to anticipate that by planting earlier so that when the El Nino hits, the rice might be ready for harvest and not needing so much water. Kusnan, who like many Indonesians uses only one name, said he hoped high yields last year would help offset any losses this year.

Indonesian President Joko Widodo has stressed the need to manage water well in the coming weeks, warning that various factors including export restrictions and fertilizer shortages could combine with the El Nino to "make this a particularly damaging event."

Baldev Singh, a 52-year-old farmer in northern India's Punjab state, is already worried. He typically sows rice from late June until mid-July, but then needs the monsoon rains to flood the paddies. Less than a tenth of the usual rainfall had come by early this month, and then floods ravaged northern India, battering young crops that had just been planted.

The government has encouraged Punjab farmers to grow rice along with their traditional wheat crops since the 1960s to improve India's food security, even though farmers like Singh don't typically eat rice and irrigation of rice fields has drained the area's aquifers. But he keeps growing it, counting on the certainty of government purchases at fixed prices.

Here's how geothermal energy heats and cools a home

By Isabella O'Malley
Associated Press

Heat pumps are becoming a popular choice for homeowners looking to efficiently heat and cool their home. But there's a lesser-known form of heat pump that is even better for the planet and yields long-term savings. It's a ground source or geothermal heat pump. The technology is very efficient at extracting heat from the ground, which is a constant temperature, and equally efficient at removing heat from the house and dumping it into the ground. The technology is based on some of the same physics as regular refrigeration. Some homeowners looking to switch out their heating and cooling systems are turning to home geothermal — also known as ground source — heat pumps. It's a technology that relies on a simple physical fact: Dig several feet below Earth's surface, in the coldest winter or the hottest summer, and the temperature will be around 55 degrees. Geothermal takes advantage of that constant temperature by pushing water with some anti-freeze through a loop of flexible pipe that runs deep underground. The water gets circulated by a heat pump system, usually located in the basement. When the house needs cooling — say on an 85-degree July day — a refrigerant, which is a special fluid, absorbs unwanted heat indoors and transfers it to water in the long piping, circulating it underground, giving it time to cool to the constant mid-50s below. House air blows across the cool fluid. Having dumped its heat, it can absorb more for transfer to the outdoors. Warming the building works much the same, in reverse. On a sub-freezing January day, the system circulates the water underground, warming it to about 55 degrees. Arriving back at the pump, the water in the loop now heats the refrigerant, making it want to expand. An electric pump then compresses it, which spikes the temperature. The system then pushes air over the hot refrigerant and into the house until the air in the house reaches thermostat temperature. In apartment buildings, schools or other commercial buildings, the underground loop may be just a few feet deep and extend horizontally over a wide area. For smaller residential lots, the solution is to drill deeper — as much as 300 feet or more — to get a loop that is long enough for the water be in contact with the ground and equalize with its constant temperature. Geothermal systems cost more up front than typical furnaces, sometimes tens of thousands of dollars. Supporters say lower operating costs eventually make that worthwhile, because the superpower of ground source heat pumps is that they use very little electricity to move heat around. They're designed to last more than 50 years for the underground parts, with the above-ground components expected to last 25 years or more. Gas furnaces typically last 15 to 30 years on average. Geothermal or ground-source heat pumps are still the exception rather than the rule. Air-source heat pump are far more common and work by extracting energy from outdoor air to both heat and cool the home.

First over-the-counter birth control pill gets FDA approval

By Matthew Perrone
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators on Thursday approved the nation's first over-the-counter birth control pill in a landmark decision that will soon allow American women and girls to obtain contraceptive medication as easily as they buy aspirin and eyedrops. The Food and Drug Administration cleared once-a-day Opill to be sold without a prescription, making it the first such medication to be moved out from behind the pharmacy counter. The manufacturer, Ireland-based Perrigo, won't start shipping the pill until early next year, and there will be no age restrictions on sales.

Hormone-based pills have long been the most common form of birth control in the U.S., used by tens of millions of women since the 1960s. Until now, all of them required a prescription.

Medical societies and women's health groups have pushed for wider access for decades, noting that an estimated 45% of the 6 million annual pregnancies in the U.S. are unintended. Teens and girls, women of color and those with low incomes report greater hurdles in getting prescriptions and picking them up.

The challenges can include paying for a doctor's visit, getting time off from work and finding child care.

"This is really a transformation in access to contraceptive care," said Kelly Blanchard, president of Ibis Reproductive Health, a nonprofit group that supported the approval. "Hopefully this will help people overcome those barriers that exist now."

Perrigo says Opill could be an important new option for the estimated 15 million U.S. women who currently use no birth control or less effective methods, such as condoms.

They are a fifth of women who are child-bearing age. But how many women will actually gain access depends on the medication's price, which Perrigo plans to announce later this year. "The reason why so many of us worked tirelessly for years to get over-the-counter birth control pills is to improve access ... cost shouldn't be one of those barriers," said Dr. Pratima Gupta of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

Most older birth control pills cost $15 to $30 for a month's supply without insurance coverage. Over-the-counter medicines are generally much cheaper than prescriptions, but they typically aren't covered by insurance.

Forcing insurers to cover over-the-counter birth control would require a regulatory change by the federal government, which women's advocates are urging the Biden administration to implement.

The FDA approval gives U.S. women another birth control option amid the legal and political battles over reproductive health, including last year's reversal of Roe v. Wade, which has upended abortion access across the U.S.

That said, Opill's approval is unrelated to the ongoing court battles over the abortion pill mifepristone. And anti-abortion groups have generally emphasized that they do not oppose contraceptives, which are used to prevent pregnancies, not end them.

However, that has done little to ease fears that contraception could someday become a target. When the Supreme Court overturned Roe, Justice Clarence Thomas wrote a separate opinion in which he explicitly called on his colleagues to put the high court's same-sex marriage, gay sex and contraception cases on the table.

In the last year, the FDA has faced pressure from Democratic politicians, health advocates and medical professionals to improve access to birth control. The American Medical Association and other leading medical groups backed Opill's application for over-the-counter status.

Birth control pills are available without a prescription across much of South America, Asia and Africa.

Perrigo submitted years of research to the FDA to show that women could understand and follow instructions for using the pill. Thursday's approval came despite some concerns by FDA scientists about the company's results, including whether women with certain underlying medical conditions would understand that they shouldn't take the drug.

The FDA's action only applies to Opill. It's in an older class of contraceptives, sometimes called minipills, that contain a single synthetic hormone and generally carry fewer side effects than more popular combination hormone pills.

But women's health advocates hope the decision paves the way for more over-the-counter birth control options and, eventually, for abortion pills to do the same.

An outside panel of FDA advisers unanimously voted in favor of the switch at a hearing in May where dozens of public speakers called for Opill's approval.

Dyvia Huitron was among those who presented, explaining how she has been unable to get prescription birth control more than three years after becoming sexually active. The 19-year-old University of Alabama student said she still isn't comfortable getting a prescription because the school's health system reports medical exams and medications to parents.

"My parents did not let me go on the pill," Huitron said in a recent interview.

"There was just a lot of cultural stigma around being sexually active before you're married."

While she uses other forms of contraception, "I would have much preferred to have birth control and use these additional methods to ensure that I was being as safe as possible."

Advocates were particularly interested in Opill because it raised fewer safety concerns. The pill was first approved in the U.S. five decades ago.

"It's been around a long time, and we have a large amount of data supporting that this pill is safe and effective for over-the-counter use," Blanchard said.

Newer birth control pills typically combine two hormones, estrogen and progestin, which can help make periods lighter and more regular. But their use carries a heightened risk of blood clots, and they shouldn't be used by women at risk for heart problems, such as those who smoke and are over 35. Opill has only progestin, which prevents pregnancy by blocking sperm from reaching the cervix. It must be taken around the same time daily to be most effective.

In its internal review published in May, the FDA noted that some women in Perrigo's study had trouble understanding the drug's labeling information. In particular, the instructions warn that women with a history of breast cancer should not take the pill because it could spur tumor growth.

Common side effects include bleeding, headaches, dizziness and cramps, according to the FDA. The label also cautions that certain drugs can interfere with Opill's effectiveness, including medications for seizures, HIV and hypertension.

Perrigo executives said the company will spend the rest of the year manufacturing the pill so it can be available in stores early next year.

ANSWERS TO Sedalia Democrat's PRIZEWEEK PUZZLE

July 8th Answers $1300 Could Have Been Yours!

There was NO WINNER last week, so be sure to look in Saturday's Sedalia Democrat for your chance to win up to $1350

ACROSS

- MEAT not seat. You can order "the best" MEAT on the menu, which is often determined by its price, but in the case of a seat in a restaurant, club or theater, it's generally a matter of sitting in the "best" section.
- LAWN not fawn. "Beautiful new" LAWN is a good answer. "New" is superfluous with a baby deer (e.g., fawn).
- HIT not bit. Since "making quite a" bit is one sign of being a HIT, HIT makes an all-encompassing answer.
- HIDES not rides. There's a possibility the "son" wasn't aware the "bike" he was riding was "stolen." However, HIDING "a stolen bike" is not merely "suspicious," it also makes the person a part of the crime, whether he's the thief or an accessory to a robbery.
- COVER not coves. A "sheltered coastline" with lots of COVER to hide illegal drugs makes a solid answer. No matter how accessible coves are, if there's little COVER to hide the drugs, there's no reason for using them.
- ROME not home. ROME has existed for centuries and will likely remain so; therefore, "getting to see it" twice in a lifetime is a possibility. Many people, however, will never see their childhood homes

DOWN

- LAZY not hazy. LAZINESS is a behavior "pattern" and, therefore, fits well in the clue. A hazy "state of mind" might only happen once in a while.
- TIMED not tired. They "would" "expect" to be TIMED. As for tired, "during" needs further explanation since it could be referring to the period shortly after the start of the "practice" run, when it's very unlikely the the purchase item is being discussed in terms of its amount of strength implies that there could be a range from weakest to strongest, which matches up well with STEER. Steel is generally considered to have an all-encompassing strength.

- DEEDS not needs. Being "modest," she might well be reluctant to discuss her heroic DEEDS for fear of seeming boastful, but she wouldn't be seen as vain by talking about her needs, which the "heroine" might have to endure.
- SOME not same. There are many reasons for puppies whimpering; for example, from hunger or wanting attention or from fright. But whether they're feeling the same way or they're whimpering for SOME other "reason," they all have a "reason" for the noise they're making. Therefore, SOME is a comprehensive answer.
- PULLS not culls. Since to cull means to obtain from a variety of sources, the clue's reference to a "vast array" makes culls redundant. PULLS is a better choice.
- HOVEL not novel. If a "local politician" is renting out a HOVEL, (i.e., a squalid, unpleasant dwelling) or is even living in one, that's likely to agitate "residents." But a "disturbing" novel would probably agitate a lot of readers outside of the community, not just locals.
- TIN not tan. "No other type" of container, such as "polish" in a bottle or jar, "has satisfied him as much" as TINNED "polish." Grammatically speaking, in reference to tan, the clue should read "no other" shade or color.

Even the most populous places are pushing for US census corrections to boost funding

By Miker Schneider

Associated Press

A misplaced naval ship in California. Overlooked college students in New York City. Missed inmates in Texas.

These are some of the reasons why the two most populous states and the largest city in the U.S. filed last-minute requests for corrections to their 2020 census figures right before the deadline at the end of last month. California, Texas and New York City were joined by a dozen and a half other stragglers, including Illinois and New Orleans, that made down-to-the-deadline appeals over the numbers that help determine political power and the annual distribution of $2.8 trillion in federal funding.

In total, nearly 200 requests for corrections were filed by local, state and tribal governments through two programs started by the U.S. Census Bureau to give governments opportunities to have their population totals reviewed and corrected if need be.

If successful, any corrections will be applied only to future population estimates used for the rest of the decade in determining federal funding. They can't be used to change how many congressional seats each state was allotted during the apportionment process, nor for the data used for redrawing political districts. That's too bad for some cities and states — not to mention the two major political parties fighting over every foot of territory in a closely divided nation.

If the Democrat-leaning state of New York had counted 89 more residents — the equivalent of a small apartment building's tenants in New York City — during the 2020 census, it wouldn't have lost a congressional seat. Among Republican-controlled states, Texas had been expected to gain three additional congressional seats instead of the two it gained after the 2020 census.

In one of the most unusual reasons given for a correction request, sailors on an aircraft carrier in Southern California may have been assigned to the wrong city's population because of the location of the ship's slip.

Here's a look at some of the last-minute requests for corrections made by states and cities:

CALIFORNIA

The slip-up, so to speak, reportedly took place on the aircraft carrier USS Abraham Lincoln. California officials believe its more than 5,000 crew members were wrongly assigned to San Diego's population total instead of neighboring National City's figures. Although part of the ship is located in San Diego, officials said what matters is where crew members get off and on the ship: the part of Naval Base San Diego in National City.

"Kansas doesn't have this problem," said H.D. Palmer, deputy director of external affairs for the Department of Finance in California, the most populated U.S. state with 39 million residents.

California officials also contend that almost 10,000 college students and inmates were overlooked during the census. They were among the most difficult to count as campuses closed and prisons were locked down at the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, which coincided with the beginning of the head count. The Census Bureau created a separate program to handle these challenges.

California officials said they waited until the deadline to make their filings because they wanted to first see if local municipalities would file requests.

ILLINOIS

Illinois, the sixth most populous U.S. state with 12.5 million residents, was one of six states that had undercounts of its population, according to the Census Bureau. In his correction request, Gov. JB Pritzker didn't specify how many people he believes were missed but cited the bureau's estimate of almost 2% of the population. Among the omissions were residents in nursing homes, dorms, homeless shelters, residential treatment facilities and jails, Pritzker said in one of two letters submitted to the Census Bureau.

"Because of an inaccurate census count, the state of Illinois received inadequate federal funding for Medicare, affordable housing, homeland security and a number of other essential programs," said Alex Gough, a spokesperson for the governor's office.

NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans Mayor LaToya Cantrell said in a letter to the Census Bureau that 1,061 students living in dorms at Tulane University and Southern University appeared to have been missed as campuses emptied out due to the pandemic.

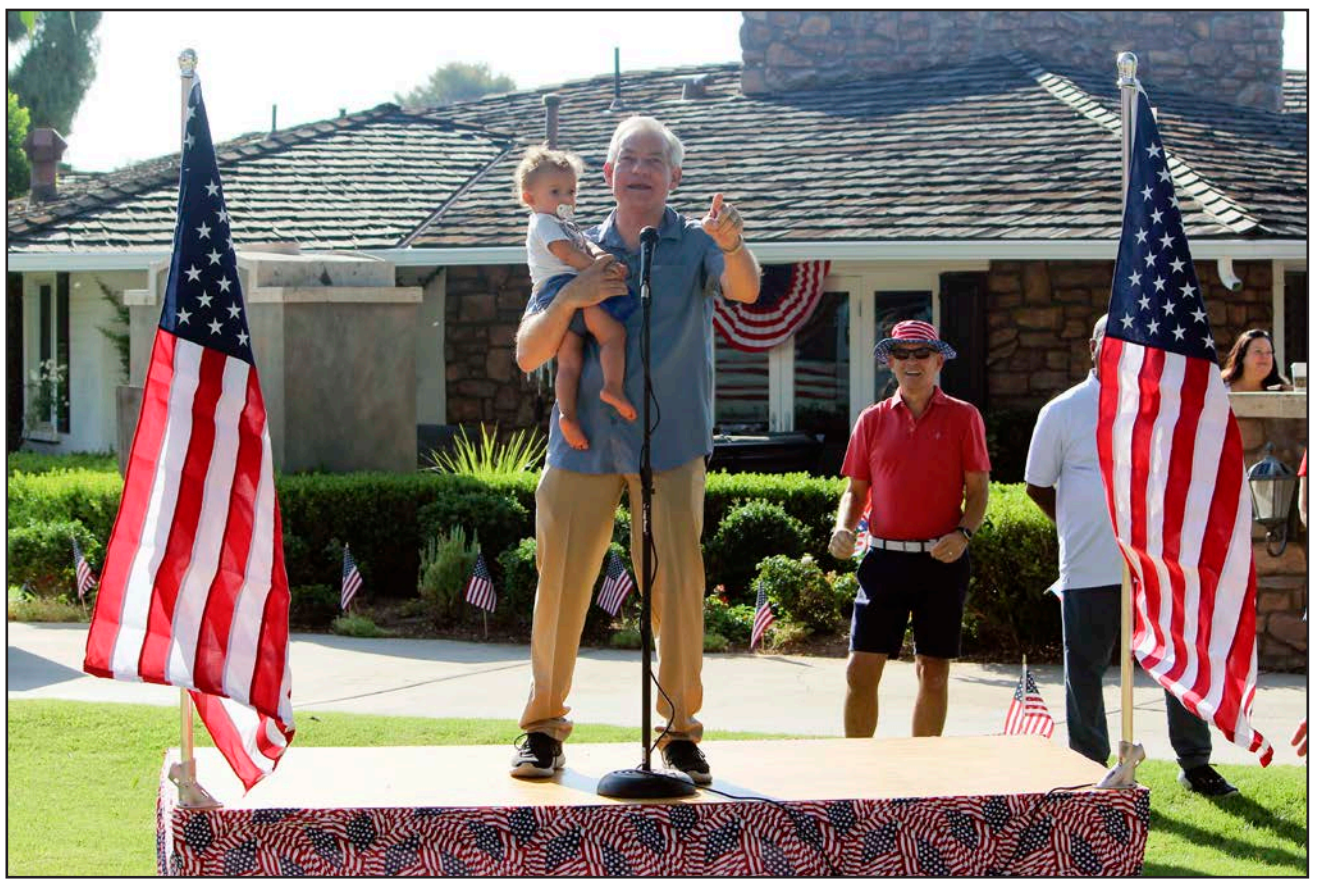

NEW YORK CITY

New York City officials believe 1,300 residents were overlooked. The head count may have missed an 800-bed jail and omitted or undercounted students living in dorms at Hunter College, Pace University and Wagner College, officials in the city's planning department said in a letter to the Census Bureau. The city waited until the deadline to file its challenge so it could conduct a thorough evaluation of the figures, said officials in the most populous U.S. city, with 8.3 million residents.

TEXAS

Texas is asking the Census Bureau to review whether the count missed more than 41,000 residents living in prisons, nursing facilities, psychiatric hospitals and student housing. Texas officials said they waited until the deadline to file requests because of the number of institutions they needed to contact to confirm what they believed were the correct totals and the complexities of the bureau's requirements. Texas is the second most populous state in the U.S. with 30 million residents.

"Texas is particularly challenging because of its size," said Helen You, associate director of the Texas Demographic Center.

US House majority in play next year after weak midterm, recent court ruling

By Jonathan J. Cooper

Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Republican Rep. David Schweikert used to win his wealthy, suburban Phoenix congressional district by nearly 30 points. Then Donald Trump was elected president, and his victories started shrinking.

Schweikert, who won his last election by just 3,200 votes, is now among the top 2024 targets for Democrats, who sense better-than-expected odds of retaking the House majority they lost last year.

After an anemic showing in the midterms, Republicans have virtually no cushion in their quest to retain control of the House, which was made all the more complicated by a surprise U.S. Supreme Court decision last month that will likely bring two new safely Democratic districts. Democrats need to pick up just five seats to control the House.

Republicans are counting on a strong showing from incumbents like Schweikert, one of 18 GOP lawmakers representing districts that supported Democrat Joe Biden for president in 2020. Many are in upscale suburbs like Scottsdale that lean conservative but have rejected Trump and the party he now dominates.

In contrast, only five Democrats represent districts that Trump won.

"I've been Republican since JFK," said Roy Ross, a 74-year-old retired oil company manager who registered as an independent when he moved to Schweikert's district from Tennessee two years ago. "But the last two elections, I just said, 'I can't do that.'"

Still, he said, "I can't say that I'm hearing a lot from Democrats, either."

Schweikert's fate in Arizona, and that of the GOP's House majority, will come down to the decisions of voters like Ross.

Other factors make for a volatile 2024 House landscape and point to terrain much more favorable to Democrats than what they faced in last year's midterms.

Trump is the early front-runner for the GOP presidential nomination, which could drive up turnout among his critics and force vulnerable Republicans to take uncomfortable positions. And abortion, which helped power Democratic victories in the midterms, remains salient a year after the conservative majority on the Supreme Court eliminated the constitutional right to terminate a pregnancy.

Democrats are already targeting key Republicans over abortion and looking to tie them to GOP figures like Trump who are unpopular with swing voters.

"Between overturning state-level protections for reproductive freedoms to prioritizing tax breaks for the wealthiest few and big corporations, vulnerable Republicans are signing their own pink slips ahead of next November's election," said Courtney Rice, a spokesperson for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, the House Democrats' campaign arm.

Republicans see plenty of reasons for optimism. Looking to expand the playing field beyond the 18 districts that voted for Biden, Republicans are targeting 37 other districts where they believe a Democratic incumbent is vulnerable.

Two Democrats from swing districts — Reps. Elissa Slotkin in Michigan and Katie Porter in California — are leaving their House seats to run for the Senate, improving the odds for Republicans who won't have to run against an incumbent. Biden's lackluster popularity could be a drain on his party, and prices for gas, food and housing remain high.

"Democrats are reminding voters why they took away the Democrats' gavels in the first place — extreme, unreasonable, and out of touch," said Rep. Richard Hudson, chair of the National Republican Congressional Committee, the GOP's House race arm. "Republicans are on offense, recruiting dynamic candidates and out-raising the Democrats, putting us in position to grow our majority."

After Trump's 2016 election, Schweikert's district started trending toward the center as some voters who historically backed Republicans reluctantly voted for Democrats or left their ballots blank. Redistricting ahead of the 2022 midterms accelerated the trend.

Schweikert eked out a victory of less than 1 percentage point last year against a relatively unknown rival who got minimal support from national Democrats. Neither party will be ignoring the district this time around. Democrats have already started attacking Schweikert over abortion.

The race has attracted interest from a crowded field of Democrats, with no obvious front-runner.

Schweikert has walked a fine line, managing to avoid associating too closely with Trump without jeopardizing his path to the GOP nomination. On abortion, he says he opposes it but believes it should be left to the states.

"The parties have changed," Schweikert said, describing the district's shifting voting patterns between conversations with doctors, entrepreneurs and a physicist at a neighborhood parade in Arcadia, one of Phoenix's most prestigious enclaves. "These people want me to fixate on their prosperity and not the eccentricities of the virus, the last election, those sorts of things."

The U.S. Supreme Court found last month that Alabama's congressional map violated the Voting Rights Act, a ruling that will require the state to create a second majority-Black district that strategists in both parties believe will be safely Democratic. Thanks to the ruling, a similar process is likely to play out in Louisiana, giving Democrats another safe seat.

In New York, Democrats are hopeful an ongoing lawsuit will allow them to draft a new political map that tilts in their favor. An appeals court on Thursday ordered new congressional lines to be drawn, though Republicans pledged to appeal.

But Republicans have the advantage in North Carolina, where conservatives recently took the majority of the state Supreme Court and are expected to draw new maps that favor the GOP. The U.S. Supreme Court just reaffirmed the court's power to get involved.

Control of the House will largely come down to staunchly red or blue states that won't get much attention from presidential campaigns.

More than half of the 18 Republican-held districts that Biden won are in New York and California, two states that defied the midterm Democratic successes in much of the rest of the country. Most of the rest are scattered around the West — two in Arizona and one each in New Mexico and Oregon.

Strategists who work on House races believe several factors were behind Democrats' struggles in New York and California, states they usually dominate. They say voters there were uniquely drawn to Republican messaging targeting crime and homelessness and, as residents of states staunchly supportive of abortion rights, were less swayed by fears of losing access. Republicans still see crime and homelessness as potent issues, along with immigration.

"There are two public policy issues that look as though they could dominate next year's election, abortion and immigration," said Dan Schnur, a former Republican strategist who now teaches politics at three California universities. "Both of the parties are not only vulnerable on one of those issues but don't appear to have any clue as to how to deal with them."

"121 Farmhouse Kitchen all started when there was a buyout at what I thought was going to be my lifelong career," Bell explained. "I turned to baking first, starting with an in-home bakery that I ran on the side while working my other job. I opened an Etsy shop as well for a little bit. When the pandemic came, that's when everything blew up. We were shipping bread all over the country. Since then, we have had to move to a shed and then we expanded into the building we have now." When discussing goals for the business' future, Bell said: "My goal is to sustain. I don't think I would want another building or anything like that. I want to focus on what my customers want and to keep up with their needs."

121 Farmhouse Kitchen carries an assortment of items such as baked goods, local produce and dairy products, jewelry, kitchen goods, and more. For more information, visit facebook.com/121farmhousekitchen.

"Tickets are $12, and they can get them at the door," she noted. "We are going to have make-your-own sundaes with homemade toppings — I believe there will be hot fudge, pineapple, and strawberry.

"Then, of course, we made the waffle bowls for the ice cream," she continued. "And it's going to include sliders and French fries and drinks, iced tea and lemonade."

There will be two types of sliders, ham-tomato-and-cucumber and chicken salad. Robin Schroeder has created a unique spice blend for the French fries, and the rolls will be freshly baked the day before the event.

"Everyone will get one of each," Fante-Hession said of the sliders. "Unless they don't eat ham, then they will get two chicken sliders."

For the price, each person will receive two chicken sliders, an ice cream waffle bowl, seasoned French fries, and a drink.

She noted the women spent around six hours making half of the waffle bowls on Wednesday and will make the rest at a later date. She has also created summer-themed flower arrangements for the tables with Mason jars painted with chalk paint and decoupage.

"It should be festive and summery," she noted. "We just want anyone and everyone to come and enjoy a good meal for $12 and just companionship. Our aim is to pull the community together."

The Pettis County Democrats' Ice Cream Social will be hosted from 5 to 8 p.m. Thursday, July 20, at the First United Methodist Church, 916 Thompson Blvd. The cost is $12 for adults and free for children 6 and under. There will also be a cakewalk during the event.

Biden says he's serious about prisoner exchange for reporter in Russia

By Seung Min Kim and Chris Megerian

Associated Press

HELSINKI — President Joe Biden on Thursday said he's serious about pursuing a prisoner exchange for a Wall Street Journal reporter who has been detained in Russia for more than 100 days.

The Kremlin earlier this month suggested that it was open to a possible prisoner exchange that could involve Evan Gershkovich, but it underscored that such talks must be held out of the public eye.

Speaking at a news conference in Helsinki, Finland, Biden made clear that the U.S. is interested.

"I'm serious on a prisoner exchange," said Biden, who was concluding a five-day visit to Europe that took him to the UK, Lithuania and Finland. "And I'm serious about doing all we can to free Americans being illegally held in Russia or anywhere else for that matter, and that process is underway."

Gershkovich was arrested on espionage charges in the city of Yekaterinburg while on a reporting trip. He is being held at Moscow's Lefortovo prison, notorious for its harsh conditions. A Moscow court recently upheld a ruling to keep him in custody until Aug. 30.

Gershkovich and his employer deny the allegations, and the U.S. government has declared him to be wrongfully detained. His arrest rattled journalists in Russia. Authorities there have not provided any evidence to support the espionage charges.

White House national security adviser Jake Sullivan confirmed last week that there have been "discussions" between the two sides, but cautioned that there is not yet "a clear pathway" to winning Gershkovich's freedom.

Gershkovich is the first American reporter to face espionage charges in Russia since September 1986, when Nicholas Daniloff, a Moscow correspondent for U.S. News and World Report, was arrested by the KGB. Daniloff was released 20 days later in a swap for an employee of the Soviet Union's U.N. mission who was arrested by the FBI, also on spying charges.

Blackout

Those participating in the drill spoke of the power outages as if they were really happening across town.

"The power has gone out west of Ohio," Williams said. "The entire west side of Ohio is out, and then there are sporadic outages west of Engineer that are creating overloads on the facilities that have generators."

To make the drill as realistic as possible, young JROTC students volunteered to play the roles of older people forced to relocate.

"We have a group of ROTC students," Williams said. "There's 51 students that participated along with three of their commanding sergeants that were planning roles. We also shut down the Pettis County Health Center, so all of our staff are playing roles as actors, controllers, or observers."

Maria Olmedo works as a Pettis County Health Center receptionist. Her role is to keep the exercise as realistic as possible so in the future, facilities will be better prepared for similar emergencies.

"I am a controller," Olmedo said. "Making sure that people stay the coordinated amount of time to cool off to go back."

As actors pour into the lobby of the Sylvia G. Thompson Residential Care Center on West 10th Street, they complain of the heat, thirst, and other realistic complaints to test the care needed.

"The part I have to play is a 75-year-old resident from Seattle," JROTC Cadet Edith Rubio said. "I have to rush into this place and say my husband's having trouble breathing and has heart problems, but I couldn't get through."

Rubio and other "victims" are triaged and cared for, and the host facilities learn what types of help they can be counted on to provide.

Holly Doogs is the Director of Nursing at the Thompson Residence Center and has helped practice emergency scenarios previously.

"We've been part of the Consortium in Emergency Management and Planning with Pettis County and trying to coordinate all of the emergency services that we would provide or be able to assist with," Doogs said. "We have a large facility and would have plenty of space for people to come in and take some time and cool off. We'd be able to offer cool beverages and just maybe some activities, something to kind of pass the time until they're able to go back."

As emergency responders coordinate their response to the heat-related power outage, they must face additional problems they might one day encounter in real life. At the Bothwell Regional Health Center emergency room, actors came in seeking help for other related injuries.

"With that scenario, there's accidents and fires and everything that's happening throughout the city due to the power outages," Williams said. "People are rushing around trying to find a cool place and food, so it's created traffic accidents, and it's created house fires, and shoplifting scenarios."

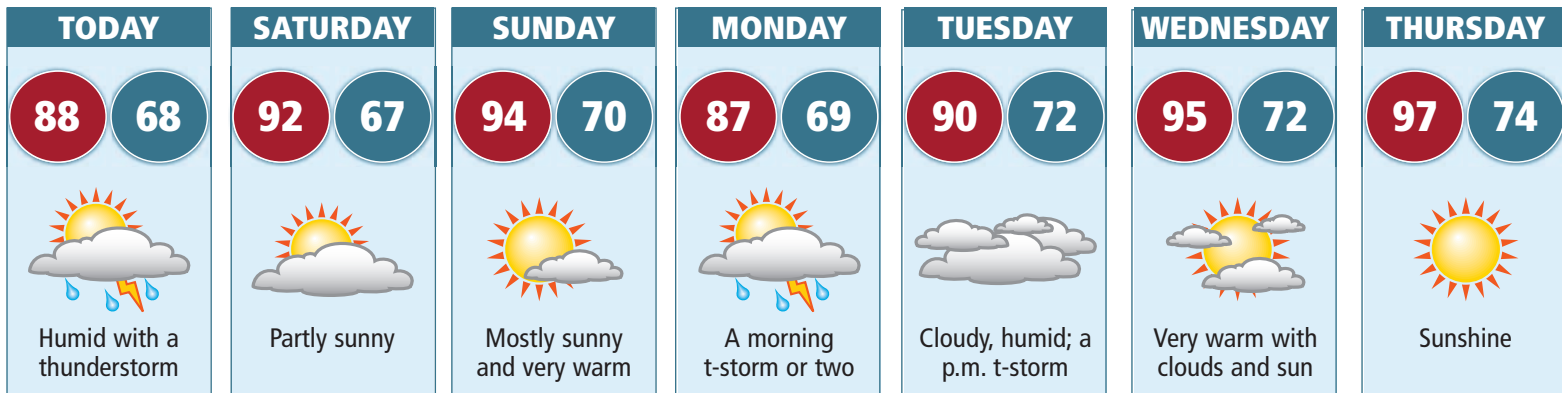

The exercise was conducted between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Jabeur makes second straight Wimbledon final, faces Vondrousova for title

By Howard Fendrich

AP Tennis Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — There was a time — a year ago; six months ago, even — that Ons Jabeur might not have recovered from the deficit she found herself in during the Wimbledon semifinals. Down a set. Down a break in the second set. So close to being just a game from defeat.

She credits a sports psychologist with helping her understand how to deal with those on-court situations, with managing to keep her focus, keep her strokes on-target. Thanks in part to that, and a steadiness down the stretch at Centre Court on Thursday, Jabeur is on her way to a second consecutive final at the All England Club and her third title match in the past five Grand Slam tournaments.

Now she wants to win a trophy. The sixth-seeded Jabeur earned the right to play for one again by beating big-hitting Aryna Sabalenka 6-7 (5), 6-4, 6-3.

“I’m very proud of myself, because maybe old me would have lost the match today and went back home already. But I’m glad that I kept digging very deep and finding the strength,” said Jabeur, a 28-year-old from Tunisia who already was the only Arab woman and only North African woman to reach a major final.

“I’m learning to transform the bad energy into a good one,” Jabeur said, explaining that she was able to get over the anger she felt after the first set. “Some things I have no control over: She can ace any time. She can hit the big serve, even if I have a break point. That’s frustrating a bit. But I’m glad that I’m accepting it and I’m digging deep to just go and win this match — and, hopefully, this tournament.”

To do that, Jabeur will need to get past Marketa Vondrousova, a left-hander from the Czech Republic, on Saturday. Vondrousova became the first unseeded women’s finalist at Wimbledon since Billie Jean King in 1963 by eliminating Elina Svitolina 6-3, 6-3.

Sedalia Travelers pitcher Chase Von Holton releases a pitch in the 12-5 victory over Jeff City Post 5 at Liberty Park Stadium on July 11. Post 642 begins its Zone Tournament on Monday, with action concluding two days later at Liberty Park Stadium.

Travelers get tune-up win before postseason

By Bryan Everson

bryane@sedaliademocrat.com

A fill-in opponent provided a chance for the Sedalia Travelers to get some innings in prior to next week’s AAA Zone Tournament.

Standing in for Blue Springs Fike on Tuesday night, Jeff City Post 5 visited Liberty Park Stadium, where the Travelers came out on top, 12-5.

“We really appreciated Jeff City coming down to play us on two days’ notice,” Travelers head coach Connor Spunauge said. “Our opponent had some kids on vacation, so to get this game in and not having to go a week without playing was huge. The main goal for tonight was just to get our pitchers an inning — the same for their side — and we were able to accomplish that.”

Rather than play the doubleheader initially scheduled, the teams agreed to play a full nine-inning contest. Sedalia used seven players on the hill — Gavin Locke, Keaton Frey, Riley Sanders, Avyn Burkhart, Isaac Nieters, Owen Caton, and Chase Von Holton — with all but the first two getting a single frame of work.

Locke’s two innings were scoreless, while Burkhart moved swiftly, needing just four pitches to get through the sixth frame.

At the plate, both Caton and Camden Everhart had triples. Jayden Kelley and Rock Azarro each finished 3-4 with a pair of runs driven in, while Nieters, Connor Hughes and Tanner Damlo all had a pair of hits as well.

The victory came after having two days off following a busy weekend of action, including five games that resulted in three victories.

“We went 3-2, and the two losses were by one run,” Spunauge said. “We had opportunities to win both and didn’t get timely hits, but it’s good to get competition before the playoffs, and a good reminder you have to be perfect against good teams.”

Among the highlights was a 10-0 victory over Springfield Post 143, where Josh Hagle hurled four scoreless innings and Elias Washington sent a two-run shot over the wall in right and ended with four RBIs.

The Travelers head into next week’s Zone Tournament with a 33-4 record. Beginning with the first two days that will be held at Hidden Valley Sports Complex, Post 642 opens the postseason Monday at 5 p.m. against Fike Post 499, and Oak Grove Post 379 will face Lee’s Summit Post 189 afterward. Action continues the following day when Sedalia will play at 2 p.m. if it wins Monday, and at 5 p.m. if not.

Action concludes Wednesday at 5 p.m. at Liberty Park Stadium, where the Zone Tournament Championship will be decided, unless an additional game that would follow that one is needed.

Two teams from the Zone will qualify for the AAA State Tournament, which begins July 24 in Sedalia.

“Only one team gets the advantage of sleeping at home in their own beds in the playoff and that’s us,” Spunauge said. “We’ve got to take advantage ... We just hope to be hot at the right time. That’s the thing about baseball. We’ve [already] played everyone we’ll see at Zone, but you still have to play the games. It’s one thing to win a lot of games, and that’s a lot of fun, but not if you have nothing to show for it at the end of the season.”

“I look forward to our depth on the mound helping us through the tournament, because it takes more than one guy to win this.”

SRX all-star racing series returns on ESPN

By Dave Skretta

Associated Press

Tony Stewart was busy ripping around Indiana short tracks some three decades ago, and winning just about every midget and Silver Crown race on his way to IndyCar and NASCAR stardom, with no idea who was watching on television.

Turns out a lot of people. Dale Earnhardt was one of them.

You see, Don Hawk was the president of Dale Earnhardt Inc. back in those days, and he remembers wrapping up Thursdays at the track with the Hall of Fame driver and heading out for an early dinner. The reason was simple: They wanted to get back to a hotel in time to watch “Thursday Night Thunder,” the pioneering program on ESPN that made Stewart and other drivers famous.

“Thursday Night Thunder’ is where I met Jeff Gordon and met Tony Stewart, and I met them through a TV screen,” Hawk recalled this week. “The last winner of ‘Thursday Night Thunder,’ I believe in the year 2002 when they

The SRX car of Tony Stewart is seen during the debut race of Superstar Racing Experience (SRX) at Stafford Motor Speedway on June 12, 2021, in Stafford, Conn. signed off the air, was Tony Stewart, and he will be the first one to race when they return to the air.”

That happened this Thursday, when ESPN reintroduced the program with the return of SRX, a series that Stewart co-founded with Sandy Montag and George Pyne a few years ago to bring together top drivers from various series in spec race cars.

Hawk serves as the CEO after many years working for NASCAR and Speedway Motorsports Inc.

“The key for us moving to Thursday night was the power of ESPN’s brand and everything that goes with that,” said Montag, whose series the past two years aired on CBS and streaming on Paramount. “With Wimbledon now on ESPN and ABC, and the ESPYs coming up and baseball, it just made sense for us to shift away from Saturday night to Thursday night.”

“Thursday Night Thunder’ may have been 30 years ago when it started,” Montag said, “but I think the brand really resonated with Tony. We just thought it made a ton of sense and we’re excited to get going.”

Big 12 notebook: OK State loses lot of starters in transfer portal; Title game staying put

By Stephen Hawkins

Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Oklahoma State lost at least eight starters among the 18 players who went into the transfer portal since last season. The Cowboys also added 14 players from the portal.

“I attribute it to the times,” coach Mike Gundy said Wednesday at Big 12 football media days. “We can look across the country in the portal. We’ve got players that are playing on national championship teams that are leaving and going to other schools. We have players that are leaving after one year, players that are leaving after five years.”

Five of the Cowboys that left went to other Big 12 schools, including offensive tackle Caleb Etienne to league newcomer BYU and running back Domic Richardson to Baylor. Long-time starting quarterback Spencer Sanders went to Ole Miss.

“For a while there I thought it was interesting, but I’m almost considering NIL and the portal like religion and politics where it’s not even worth discussing because we don’t necessarily have a rhyme or reason for what’s happening,” Gundy said.

LEAVING A CHAMPION?

Texas has been tabbed the preseason favorite to win the Big 12 in its final season before moving to the SEC.

“It won’t be awkward for us,” Longhorns coach Steve Sarkisian said of the pending move. “We’ve got a roster full of players who quite frankly came to the University of Texas to try to win a Big 12 championship, and we’ve got one more opportunity to do that, and I think our guys are focused on that.”

The Longhorns have won the Big 12 three times, including the inaugural 1996 title. They were also conference champs in 2005, when they were the last Big 12 national champions, and in 2009.

Kansas State, which beat national runner-up TCU in the Big 12 title game last December, was picked second, ahead of departing Oklahoma, Texas Tech, the Horned Frogs, Baylor and Oklahoma State. Texas got 41 of the 67 first-place votes in the media poll, while K-State got 14.

Jets agree to contract extension with DT Williams, AP source says

By Dennis Waszak Jr.
 AP Pro Football Writer

New York Jets' Quinnen Williams speaks to reporters after a practice at the NFL football team's training facility in Florham Park, N.J., May 24, 2022. Williams and the Jets have agreed, Thursday, July 13, 2023, to a four-year contract extension worth $96 million, according to a person with knowledge of the deal.

All-Pro defensive tackle Quinnen Williams and the New York Jets agreed Thursday to a four-year contract extension worth $96 million, according to a person with knowledge of the deal.

Williams is now the second-highest paid defensive tackle in the NFL behind only the Rams' Aaron Donald, who is making $31.7 million per year.

The deal for Williams includes $66 million in guaranteed salary, according to the person who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the team didn't announce the contract. The guarantee is the largest in Jets history, surpassing the $51 million linebacker C.J. Mosley got as a free agent in 2019.

NFL Network and ESPN first reported the agreement between Williams and the Jets.

Williams will average $24 million per year on the contract that will keep him in New York through the 2027 season. The Titans' Jeffery Simmons ($23.5 million), Commanders' Daron Payne ($22.5 million) and Giants' Dexter Lawrence ($22.5 million) all received new deals this offseason, but Williams surpassed them all.

Williams did not attend the Jets' voluntary workouts while waiting for his agent and the Jets to reach an agreement on a new deal.

Jets coach Robert Saleh was optimistic throughout the offseason, maintaining his belief the sides would have a contract in place before the team opens training camp next week.

"I'll let the business guys handle all that stuff, but it's going to get done," Saleh said last month. "He'll be here for (training) camp, he'll be ready to roll. And once he is, I'm sure he'll be the same guy he was a year ago."

Williams removed the Jets from his Twitter bio during the offseason, creating some skepticism as to whether he'd get a new deal. That turned to optimism Thursday when he restored NEW YORK JETS in bold letters to his bio shortly before news of the contract extension began to leak.

The 25-year-old Williams had a breakout season after steadily improving the last few years. He was a first-time All-Pro and Pro Bowl selection and set career highs with 12 sacks, 28 quarterback hits and 12 tackles for loss while establishing himself as one of the game's elite defensive tackles. He was also selected the Jets' MVP by his teammates.

The third overall pick out of Alabama in 2019,

Williams was entering the final year of his rookie contract. He was due to make a fully guaranteed $9.6 million this year after his fifth-year option was picked up by the Jets last offseason.

But he was looking for a much bigger payday after he thought he proved his worth to the Jets.

"I did everything right on and off the field," Williams said after last season ended. "I want to be compensated for what I am."

Williams becomes the first Jets first-round draft pick to sign a second contract with the team since Muhammad Wilkerson in 2016.

Williams is expected to again anchor a talented defensive line that is among New York's top strengths this season as the Jets look to end a 12-year postseason drought with quarterback Aaron Rodgers leading the way.

Williams has 27 1/2 career sacks with 60 quarterback hits, 33 tackles for loss, four forced fumbles and two fumble recoveries in his four NFL seasons.

Each of the Big 12's four newcomers — BYU, Cincinnati, Houston and UCF — were picked to finish in the bottom half of the standings.

STAYING PUT

The Big 12 championship game will remain at AT&T Stadium through at least 2030.

Commissioner Brett Yormark said the six-year extension announced Wednesday allows the league to host its title game "at a world-class venue in our own backyard."

Yormark also said that for the first time this year, the game will include a halftime show featuring a major artist and the participating school bands that will be part of ABC's television broadcast. The artist will be revealed around Aug. 12, when tickets go on sale for the Dec. 2 game.

The Big 12 hasn't played its title game anywhere else since AT&T Stadium opened in 2009. After games in 2009 and 2010, the conference didn't have a championship game the next six seasons before resuming it in 2017.

HOUSTON'S BIG 12 QB

Houston enters the Big 12 with a quarterback with a lot of experience in the league.

Texas Tech transfer Donovan Smith, a dual-threat QB, played in 21 games for the Red Raiders over the past three seasons.

"I felt like it was important to bring a guy in with experience, with Big 12 experience. We did that at a number of other positions," Cougars coach Dana Holgorsen said. "Donovan has impressed me. I think his best days are ahead of him."

That doesn't necessarily mean Smith will be the successor to Clayton Tune, who threw for 11,994 yards and 104 touchdowns over 47 games for the Cougars the past five seasons.

Like Jabeur, Vondrousova has been to a major final before. Like Jabeur, she's never won one, having been the runner-up at the 2019 French Open as a teen.

"We're both hungry," Jabeur said.

So far, Jabeur is 0-2 in Slam finals. She lost to Elena Rybakina at the All England Club last July and to Iga Swiatek at the U.S. Open last September.

Jabeur's win over No. 2 Sabalenka, the Australian Open champion in January, followed victories against three other major title winners: No. 3 Rybakina, No. 9 Petra Kvitova and Bianca Andreescu.

"I want to make my path worth it," Jabeur said.

Thursday's triumph, which came by collecting 10 of the last 13 games, prevented Sabalenka from replacing Swiatek at No. 1 in the rankings.

"I had so many opportunities," said Sabalenka, a 25-year-old from Belarus who was not allowed to compete at Wimbledon last year because all players from her country and from Russia were banned over the war in Ukraine. "Overall, I didn't play my best tennis today. It was just, like, a combo of everything. A little bit of nerves, a little bit of luck for her at some points."

Jabeur trailed 4-2 in the second set when she began to turn things around. But not before Sabalenka came within a point from leading 5-3 after Jabeur put a forehand into the net and fell onto her back on the grass of Centre Court.

She dusted herself off and broke to take that game and begin the comeback. When she delivered a backhand return winner to force the match to a third set, Jabeur held her right index finger to her ear, then raised it and wagged it as she strutted to the changeover.

Sabalenka's shots missed the mark repeatedly. She finished with far more unforced errors than Jabeur: The margins were 14-5 in the last set and 45-15 for the match.

"I was little bit emo-

Houston also has returning backup Lucas Coley.

"They've been 50/50, and we knew they were going to be 50/50, and they're going to continue to be 50/50 until one just makes it clear," Holgorsen said.

IMPROVING KANSAS

Kansas has eight wins in its first two seasons under coach Lance Leipold. The Jayhawks won only nine games combined the six seasons before that.

They were 5-0 last year and had their first Top 25 ranking since 2009 before quarterback Jalon Daniels got hurt. They finished the regular season 6-6 and made their first bowl game since 2008, losing 55-53 in triple overtime to Arkansas in the Liberty Bowl.

Leipold said last year was a big step forward for the program and showed the resiliency of the team. He wants his players to embrace expectations while keeping their focus on now.

"I think this group gets it," he said. "But at the same time, for a program like Kansas, we need to embrace some of those things, expectations and the positivity that's surrounding our program."

REMEMBERING HIS DAD

Baylor coach Dave Aranda's father died this week from pancreatic cancer.

Aranda said he had a great relationship with his father, and knew his father loved him without him ever really openly saying it.

"I remember when he called me and told me that he had pancreatic cancer and it was Stage 4, I told him that I loved him and he didn't say it back. I don't know if he heard me," Aranda said. "So I wanted to go and say it to him face to face. I was able to do that. He gave me a big hug. ... He wouldn't let me go, and he kept really strong and he told me that he loved me."

tionally down, then she was up," said Sabalenka, who hit 10 aces but also double-faulted five times.

A break put Jabeur up 4-2 in the third, but there was still some work to be done. Sabalenka, as powerful a ball-striker as there is on tour, erased four match points before Jabeur converted her fifth with a 103 mph ace.

In the first semifinal, the 43rd-ranked Vondrousova reeled off seven consecutive games in one stretch against the 76th-ranked Svitolina, who returned from maternity leave just three months ago. After surprisingly beating Swiatek in the quarterfinals, she was trying to become the first woman from Ukraine to make it to the title match at a major tennis tournament.

Svitolina received loud support from thousands in the crowd at the main stadium — Ukraine's ambassador to Britain was in the Royal Box — as applause and yells echoed off the closed roof.

Svitolina says she plays more calmly nowadays, something she attributed to the dual motivations of playing for her baby daughter, who was born in October, and of playing for her home country, where the ongoing war began in February 2022, when Russia invaded with help from Belarus.

"It's a lot of responsibility, a lot of tension. I try to balance it as much as I can. Sometimes it gets maybe too much," Svitolina said. "But I don't want to (make it) an excuse."

Vondrousova missed about six months last season because of two operations on her left wrist. She visited England last year with a cast on that arm to enjoy London as a tourist and to watch her best friend and doubles partner, Miriam Kolodziejova, try to qualify for Wimbledon.

"It's not always easy to come back. You don't know if you can play at this level and if you can be back at the top and back at these tournaments," Vondrousova said. "I just feel like I'm just grateful to be on a court again, to play without pain."

Stewart retired from his full-time NASCAR career in 2016 but remains deeply involved in racing. He still drives from time to time and owns a part of Stewart-Haas Racing in the Cup Series, the All-Star Circuit of Champions sprint car series, sprint car and drag race teams, and several facilities, including the famed Eldora Speedway near Rossburg, Ohio.

Stewart won the initial SRX title two years ago — IndyCar driver Marco Andretti is the defending champion — and will be back as a full-time driver this year along NASCAR star Brad Keselowski, IndyCar driver Ryan Hunter-Reay and many others.

The series opened at Stafford Motor Speedway in Connecticut, where tickets sold out weeks ago for Thursday night's race. That kicks off six consecutive weeks of racing with stops at Thunder Road Speedbowl in Vermont, Motor Mile Speedway in Virginia, Berlin Raceway in Michigan, Eldora and Lucas Oil Speedway in Missouri.

"Racing with these unique drivers, that's the best part of it," Stewart said, "but the other thing I'm super excited about is being back on ESPN on Thursday nights. That's how I got recognized by car owners back in the day."

The shift from Saturday night also provided a chance to compete for several drivers who would have been unavailable.

"The amount of interest in drivers wanting to join the series was astronomical this year," said Stewart, adding that his wish list for the future includes two drivers that remain unavailable: Gordon and Dale Earnhardt Jr.

"That's two guys that are superstars and that's what this series is about: superstars," Stewart said. "Those are two guys that belong in this series and have earned their right to drive in this series."

Other drivers expected to compete this season include reigning Indy 500 winner Josef Newgarden, four-time Indy 500 champion Helio Castroneves, three-time Daytona 500 winner Denny Hamlin and two-time NASCAR Cup Series champ Kyle Busch.

"It's been an incredible journey for us. I think when you take a step back, you said three years ago you'd be going to sold-out race tracks, would you take that? You'd be very happy with that," Pyne said. "I think Stafford has been sold out for more than a month. The quality of the drivers is off the charts, but the racing has been fantastic — the lead changes, the finishes we've had."

"Like any new business we have challenges. When you start something from scratch you have to pivot. But on balance, I would say we're very pleased with the results in all the categories," Pyne added. "The whole thing just feels really good."

Jump straight into an otherworldly mystery with the pulpy new sci-fi caper "They Cloned Tyrone," premiering Friday, July 21, on Netflix, after having its release rescheduled from December. When Fontaine (John Boyega, "Star Wars: Episode VII – The Force Awakens," 2015), a neighborhood drug dealer, is shot dead by a rival (J. Alphonse Nicholson, "P-Valley"), he is understandably shocked when he wakes up in his bed the next morning, completely unharmed. Determined to figure out exactly how he survived and miraculously recovered, Fontaine, Slick Charles (Jamie Foxx, "Day Shift," 2022) and Yo-Yo (Teyonah Parris, "Survivor's Remorse"), go hunting for answers and stumble upon a vast government conspiracy. "They Cloned Tyrone" comes from director Juel Taylor ("Creed II," 2018), who penned the film's screenplay with Tony Rettenmaier ("Space Jam: A New Legacy," 2021). Starring alongside Boyega, Foxx and Parris in the film are Kiefer Sutherland ("Designated Survivor") and David Alan Grier ("Joe Pickett").

From Emmy Award-winning director Salima Koroma ("Bad Rap," 2016), the all-new CNN documentary "Glitch: The Rise and Fall of HQ Trivia," chronicling the dramatic rise and fall of the revolutionary "game show on your phone" — "HQ Trivia" — will be available to stream Thursday, July 20, on Max. The app, which was released in 2017, became an instant hit with smartphone users, as it entertained by dropping rapid-fire trivia questions ranging in topic from science to popular culture. The spark of attention, however, caused a fire of technical problems and infighting and ultimately led to the app's demise, as the platform couldn't keep up with the millions of users trying to access it at once. In a news release, CNN noted: "The global live-play game sensation drew millions of daily users to its frenetically fun trivia challenges and cash prizes, attracting celebrity fans including Dwayne 'The Rock' Johnson, Neil Patrick Harris, Jimmy Kimmel and Kelly Clarkson. But its success was undone by corporate clashes, cast changes and a tragic death." Created to revolutionize television and modernize the way we play, "HQ Trivia" was created with the intention of spreading fun through phones. In the wake of its implosion, however, Koroma asks: what happens when the people who are running it — 'the smartest guys in the room' — don't actually know what they're doing?"

WHAT'S NEW ON STARZ

"Minx" — Season 2

It's time for more pantsuits, disco and raunchy photoshoots, as Season 2 of "Minx" premieres Friday, July 21, on Starz. The fate of the show was left up in the air after being canceled by Max, but after an outcry from devoted fans, the '70s-based comedy was picked up by Starz, which continues the series where Max left off, with feminist entrepreneur Joyce (Ophelia Lovibond, "Elementary") and her accomplice, Doug (Jake Johnson, "New Girl"), trying to keep their newly minted erotic magazine, "Minx," afloat despite outcries from the public — protests and a brewing lawsuit included. As of yet, not many details of the new season have been released, but a first look for the series sees the pair arriving at a party together, promising, at the very least, more colorful '70s fashion. The season will see the return of some familiar faces, including Michael Angarano ("I'm Dying Up Here") as Glenn; Jessica Lowe ("Wrecked") as Bambi; Oscar Montoya ("Bless the Harts") as Richie; Lennon Parham ("Playing House") as Shelly; and Idara Victor ("Alita: Battle Angel," 2019) as Tina.

WHAT'S NEW ON PEACOCK

"Love Island USA" - Season 5

According to Deadline, this new season features "new challenges and bigger twists and turns than ever," as a fresh batch of singles search for romance in paradise, building relationships that are tested as more "bombshells" enter the villa through the season, tempting the budding couples as they begin of chaos and drama as new episodes will be available to stream six days a week following the Season 5 premiere.

WHAT'S NEW ON APPLE TV+

"Stephen Curry: Underrated" (2023)

Telling the remarkable story of one of the most influential basketball players of our time, "Stephen Curry: Underrated" premieres Friday, July 21, on Apple TV+. From Apple Original Films, A24 and Emmy Award-winning director Peter Nicks ("The Waiting Room," 2012), this feature-length documentary "[blends] intimate cinéma vérité, archival footage and on-camera interviews" (per Apple TV+), capturing the coming-of-age and rise to fame of a small-town, Division I college player-turned-four-time NBA champion. Curry — currently point guard for the Golden State Warriors — is credited with "building one of the most dominant sports dynasties in the world" (Apple TV+), starting with his career at Davidson College, where Curry set a single-season scoring record during his freshman year. The star shooter then went on to join the Warriors, who he has since led to the NBA final six times, landing four wins for the team. With unprecedented access to Curry, previously unseen footage and all-new interviews from industry professionals, "Stephen Curry: Underrated" promises to be an inspiring story of perseverance and talent.
