Local students head to Cole Camp for Farm Life of Yesteryear

By Chris Howell
chrish@sedaliademocrat.com

COLE CAMP — Students from area schools are visiting Cole Camp on Thursday, Sept. 28 and Friday, Sept. 29 to experience the rural lifestyle of a bygone era. The Central Missouri Agriculture Club, MU Extension office, Pettis County 4-H, and Cole Camp Antique Tractor Association partnered with local schools to demonstrate the working history of agriculture in Pettis County. Cindy Jolly is the event organizer, and said it was beautiful weather on Thursday to host the hundreds of students bussed in each day for this glimpse of farm living. “This is Farm Life of Yesteryears,” Jolly said over the noise of the antique sawmill.

“I’ve been doing it since 2009. We run a saw-mill and talk about the demonstration after it’s over. They cook molasses, we make apple cider on site, we make homemade butter, we have Grandma’s Kitchen that shows antiques that go back into the middle 1800s.” Homeschooled kids and students from 12 schools in Benton, Camden, Cooper, and Pettis counties will attend over the two-day event with more than 850 youth and their chaperones expected. Keeping the high-tech students of today interested in the low-tech farm equipment means moving in small groups from station to station as experts give demonstrations of old equipment and techniques.

Sedalia artist creates ‘Avatar’ character

By Faith Bemiss-McKinney
faithb@sedaliademocrat.com

A Sedalia artist has taken her work one step further and delved into cosplay and the world of character makeup. Isabelle Ballard, 19, has become adept at making herself look like an authentic avatar from the science-fiction movie “Avatar.” She attended the Missouri State Fair Top 50 art reception in August as her avatar named “Bayral.” On Monday, Sept. 25, she met the Democrat at Liberty Park in full avatar costume. Ballard explained when her father, David Ballard, died in 2017, cosplay and makeup design helped her cope with his loss. From there, her love for the art has grown. On Monday, she worked for three hours perfecting her blue look, complete with fangs, pointed ears, a beaded belt, a hand-crafted bow and arrow, and a bead necklace, all representative of the blue beings on fictional Pandora. Not a novice in theatrical performances, Ballard has been in several Liberty Center Association for the Arts productions as a child. She said eventually, she hopes to go into costuming. “Since I was a little kid, I’ve been involved in theater,” she noted. “So, I’ve always done it. “I think my first theatrical show was “Willy Wonka,” she continued. “I was an Oompa Loompa. I needed a hobby because I lost my father. I needed something to do to distract my brain, so this is a way of me being able to express myself and get through that. It’s one of the best experiences I’ve had; I love doing it.” She added she loves to see the reaction on people’s faces as she walks into a room. As she talked, a woman pushing a baby stroller hollered over and told Ballard how “cool” she looked. “I don’t have my glasses on, but that looks pretty freakin’ cool,” the woman said. Besides attending the Top 50 art show in costume, she also participated at the Cosplacon convention in Jefferson City earlier this year. “It is also the last year that they are doing this convention,” she noted. “So, it’s my last time there, and I’ll have to find a new convention. “That’s the closest convention here in Missouri,” she continued. “And I think we in Sedalia have so much stuff going on, and so many people I know here that are into this (cosplay), and we have to travel hours just to go to a really good convention.” See AVATAR | A6

10th annual Burg Fest comes to Warrensburg

By Meliyah Venerable
meliyahv@warrensburgstarjournal.com

WARRENSBURG — Warrensburg Main Street is hosting its 10th annual Burg Fest on Friday, Oct. 6 and Saturday, Oct. 7 throughout downtown Warrensburg. Burg Fest was established in 2013. The two-day outdoor street fair will include live music, local entertainment, a carnival, a classic car show, a beer garden, a cornhole tournament, a petting zoo, a magician, aerial performers, and craft and information booths. For the first time, this year’s street fair will have carnival rides, something that Warrensburg Main Street has been looking to bring for multiple years. Main Street Assistant Director Jamie DeBacker said Main Street has tried to include a carnival in the past but always fell short, whether it was due to cost or layout. After a late cancellation, Main Street received a call on Labor Day saying the company would be able to come to Warrensburg. “We worked with the city, the county, downtown businesses, everyone to really just make it work,” DeBacker said. “So it was a true community come together to make that happen because that happened on Labor Day weekend when we got the call, about a month and a half out from Burg Fest. But we made it all happen.” This year also marks the 33rd annual Warrensburg Wheels Car Show, which starts at 8 a.m. Saturday on Gay Street and ends with awards at 3 p.m. This year’s car show brings a record number of participants.

Hot Wheel Races for kids will also return along with the classic car show. With all of the new additions along with the old traditions, DeBacker said she thinks this will be the “best year yet” for Burg Fest. “We have great bands... There’s just so much and for all ages, all types of community members,” DeBacker continued. “Young, small and we hope that they’ll come to downtown Warrensburg and spend the weekend celebrating all of the great 10 years of Burg Fest.” See FEST | A6

Senators nix casual clothing as resolution sets new dress code

By Mary Clare Jalonick

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — No shorts on the Senate floor. The Senate voted Wednesday evening to reverse an informal guidance issued by Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer last week that senators could wear what they want when voting or speaking in the chamber. The resolution, passed by voice vote with no objections, requires that “business attire be worn on the floor of the Senate, which for men shall include a coat, tie, and slacks or other long pants.” It did not specify what women should wear. The bipartisan resolution by Sens. Joe Manchin, D-W.Va., and Mitt Romney, R-Utah, comes after backlash to Schumer’s announcement that staff for the chamber’s Sergeant-at-Arms would no longer enforce a dress code on the Senate floor. The guidance came as Pennsylvania Sen. John Fetterman has been unapologetically wearing shorts and sweatshirts around the Senate, voting from doorways so he didn’t walk on the chamber floor and get in trouble for his casual dress. “Though we’ve never had an official dress code, the events over the past week have made us all feel as though formalizing one is the right path forward,” Schumer said Wednesday evening, as the resolution by Manchin and Romney passed. Schumer also thanked Fetterman for “working with me to come to an agreement that we all find acceptable.” The majority leader’s original guidance last week was met with immediate pushback in the more formal Senate, with many lawmakers in both parties arguing that the Senate floor should have some standards for dress. Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill., said he was “concerned” about it. Republican Leader Mitch McConnell said that senators “ought to dress up to go to work.” Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, jokingly declared she would wear a bikini to work the next day. Fetterman mocked the critics, telling reporters that senators should be focusing on more important things. But he also said that he may not even take advantage of the change. Shortly after the guidance was released, a shorts-wearing Fetterman voted from the doorway, telling reporters that it was “nice to have the option” but he didn’t plan on over-using it. Senators praised the bipartisan change after it was passed on Wednesday evening. “God bless COMMON SENSE,” Sen. Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, posted on X, formerly Twitter.

McCarthy rejects Senate bill while scrambling for plan to avert shutdown

By Kevin Freking and Stephen Groves
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A government shutdown appeared all but inevitable as House Speaker Kevin McCarthy dug in Thursday, vowing he will not take up Senate legislation designed to keep the federal government fully running despite House Republicans’ struggle to unite around an alternative.

Congress is at an impasse just days before a disruptive federal shutdown that would halt paychecks for many of the federal government’s roughly 2 million employees, as well as 2 million active-duty military troops and reservists, furlough many of those workers and curtail government services.

But the House and Senate are pursuing different paths to avert those consequences even though time is running out before government funding expires after midnight on Saturday.

The Senate is working toward passage of a bipartisan measure that would fund the government until Nov. 17 as longer-term negotiations continue, while also providing $6 billion for Ukraine and $6 billion for U.S. disaster relief.

The House, meanwhile, has teed up votes on four of the dozen annual spending bills that fund various agencies in hopes that would cajole enough Republicans to support a House-crafted continuing resolution that temporarily funds the government and boosts security at the U.S. border with Mexico. It’s a longshot, but McCarthy predicted a deal.

“Put your money on me; we’re going to get this done,” he said in a CNBC interview. “I think we can work through the weekend. I think we can figure this out.”

Lawmakers were already weary from days of late-night negotiating. The strain was evident at McCarthy’s closed-door meeting with Republicans Thursday morning, which was marked by a tense exchange between the speaker and Rep. Matt Gaetz, R-Fla., according to those in the room.

Gaetz, who has taunted McCarthy for weeks with threats to oust him from his post, confronted the speaker about conservative online influencers being paid to post negative things about him. McCarthy shot back that he wouldn’t waste his time on something like that, Gaetz told reporters as he exited the meeting.

McCarthy’s allies left the meeting fuming about Gaetz’s tactics.

With his majority splintering, McCarthy is scrambling to come up with a plan for preventing a shutdown and win Republican support. The speaker told Republicans he would reveal a Republican stopgap plan, known as a continuing resolution or CR, on Friday, according to those in the room, while also trying to force Senate Democrats into giving some concessions.

But with time running out, many GOP lawmakers were either withholding support for a temporary measure until they had a chance to see it. Others are considering joining Democrats, without McCarthy’s support, to bring forward a bill that would prevent a shutdown.

With his ability to align his conference in doubt, McCarthy has little standing to negotiate with Senate Democrats. He has also attempted to draw President Joe Biden into negotiations, but

Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., said Congress and the White House had already worked out top-line spending levels for next year with an agreement this summer that allowed the government to continue borrowing to pay its bills. But McCarthy was deviating from that deal and courting a shutdown by catering to Republicans who say it didn’t do enough to cut spending, he said.

“By focusing on the views of the radical few instead of the many, Speaker McCarthy has made a shutdown far more likely,” Schumer said.

McCarthy reiterated to CNBC that the House will have its say. “Will I accept and surrender to what the Senate decides? The answer is no, we’re our own body.”

He acknowledged divisions within his own conference, saying members have made it difficult to pass appropriations bills. But he added that he still is working with the Republicans who won’t support short-term funding legislation.

“Well, if you won’t do any of that, it’s hard to govern,” McCarthy said, before adding, “I don’t give up on any single one of them, and I try to find a place that we can bring it all together.”

President Joe Biden also sought to apply more pressure on McCarthy, urging him to compromise with Democrats even though that could threaten his job.

“I think that the speaker is making a choice between his speakership and American interests,” Biden said.

The White House, as well as the Department of Homeland Security, notified staff on Thursday to prepare for a shutdown, according to emails obtained by The Associated Press. Employees who are furloughed would have four hours on Monday to prepare their offices for the shutdown.

The White House plans to keep on all commissioned officers. That includes chief of staff Jeff Zients, press secretary Karine Jean Pierre, national security adviser Jake Sullivan and other senior-level personnel, by declaring them “excepted” during a shutdown, according to the White House email.

Military troops and federal workers, including law enforcement officers, air traffic controllers and Transportation Security Administration officers, will also report to work because they are essential to protecting life and property. They would miss paychecks if the shutdown lasts beyond Oct. 13, the next scheduled payday, though they are slated to receive backpay once any shutdown ends.

Many Republicans have voiced fears they would be blamed for a shutdown — including in the Senate, where many GOP members are aligned with Democrats on a temporary bill.

Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell said he agrees with many of the goals of the House Republicans, but warned a shutdown will not achieve any of them.

“Instead of producing any meaningful policy outcomes, it would actually take the important progress being made on a number of key issues and drag it backward,” McConnell said.

But McCarthy’s House allies were hoping the threat of a shutdown could help conservatives with their push to limit federal spending and combat illegal immigration at the U.S.-Mexico border.

“Anytime you have a stopgap situation like this, you have an opportunity to leverage,” said Rep. Garret Graves, R-La. “This is another opportunity. America does not want an open Southern border. The polls are crystal clear. It’s having a profound impact on us.”

CVS responds quickly after frustrated pharmacists don’t show up

By Josh Funk
Associated Press

CVS found the right prescription on Wednesday to keep its stores open in the Kansas City area and avoid a repeat of a work stoppage last week by pharmacists: It promised to boost hiring to ease workloads that sometimes make it hard to take a bathroom break.

But it won’t be easy to resolve the problems that have been growing as pharmacists at CVS and other drug stores in the U.S. took on more duties in recent years and are gearing up to deliver this year’s latest flu and COVID-19 vaccines.

“It all relates to not enough dollars going in to hire the appropriate staff to be able to deliver the services,” said Ron Fitzwater, CEO of the Missouri Pharmacy Association.

Pharmacists in at least a dozen Kansas City-area CVS pharmacies did not show up for work last Thursday and Friday and planned to be out again this Wednesday until the company sent its chief pharmacy officer with promises to fill open positions and increase staffing levels.

It was one of the latest examples nationwide of workers fed up enough to take action. But unlike in the ongoing strikes at the automakers or in Hollywood, the pharmacists weren’t demanding raises or more vacation, but more workers to help them.

CVS spokeswoman Amy Thibault said the company is “focused on addressing the concerns raised by our pharmacists so we can continue to deliver the high-quality care our patients depend on.”

Chief Pharmacy Officer Prem Shah apologized for not addressing concerns sooner in a memo to Kansas City-area staff that was obtained by USA Today. He promised to remain in the city until the problems are addressed and come back regularly to check on the progress.

“We want you, our valued pharmacy teams, to be in a position to succeed. We are working hard to support you and are here to help and create sustainable solutions,” Shah said as he encouraged the pharmacists to continue to share their concerns even anonymously.

It’s unclear why workload concerns that are common industrywide led to a work stoppage in Kansas City. The pharmacists involved are not in a union and haven’t spoken publicly, so it’s not entirely clear how satisfied they are with the company’s response.

Jeff Jonas, a portfolio manager for Gabelli Funds, said there’s a nationwide shortage of pharmacy workers, prompting companies to push long work hours with few bathroom and lunch breaks. At the same time, the industry is “not really unionized, so I wouldn’t expect a big, coordinated action” to be inspired by the Kansas City demonstration, he said.

At stores with only one pharmacist on duty, the pharmacy has to shut down every time that person leaves the area because a pharmacist must be present to supervise technicians in their work.

The American Pharmacists Association said in a statement that it supports the stand the Kansas City pharmacists took.

“Pharmacists who find themselves in situations where the welfare of others is in question should always pause, evaluate the situation, and take the steps necessary to ensure safe, optimal patient care,” the group said.

CVS Health has about 300,000 employees and runs prescription drug plans through one of the nation’s largest pharmacy benefits managers. Its Aetna insurance arm covers more than 25 million people, and the company has nearly 10,000 drugstores.

The company said last month that operating income at its drugstores fell 17% as reimbursement rates from patient’s insurance providers for drugs remained tight. CVS eliminated about 5,000 jobs, but company officials said none of those involved dealing with customers.

Bled Tanoe, a hospital pharmacist in Oklahoma who previously worked for Walgreens, runs a social media campaign called “Pizza Is Not Working” aimed at raising awareness about the industry’s working conditions. Its name comes from the pizzas that are routinely given to overwhelmed medical workers to raise morale. Tanoe said she was “wowed” by the CVS demonstration.

“They pretty much risk their reputation, their livelihood to take a stand because serving the patients is so important to them,” Tanoe said.

Amanda Applegate with the Kansas Pharmacists Association said pharmacists have always had a lot on their plate.

“When we are not valued as health care professionals, it doesn’t allow the job that needs to be done to be done,” she said. “And that’s keeping you know, patients safe — right drug, right patient, right time, right dose.”

Here’s when shows will return now that writers strike is ending

By Andrew Dalton
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The writers strike is now over. So when will your favorite shows return?

If you’re a fan of comedy and late-night, expect to see your favorite hosts back on the air next week. Other shows may take a bit longer — there is still an active strike by 65,000 screen actors.

Screenwriters returned to work Wednesday for the first time since they walked out on May 2, which will restart the pipeline of work on shows like “Abbott Elementary.”

The actors strike will prevent many projects from returning to normal. Certain paused productions such as “Deadpool 3,” “Yellowjackets” and the next film from Quentin Tarantino will still have to wait on actors to reach a deal with studios.

WHEN IS ‘JIMMY KIMMEL LIVE’

COMING BACK?

Late-night talk shows were the first to be affected when the strike began, and they’ll be the first new shows back on air. NBC’s “The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon,” ABC’s “Jimmy Kimmel Live” and “The Late Show With Stephen Colbert” on CBS all said they’ll return on Monday.

They will return with a guest shortage, however. The actors strike limits the promotional appearances that are the lifeblood of late-night shows.

“Saturday Night Live” might be able to return for its 49th season — but there’s no word yet on when it will be back. Its writers could be at work soon on sketches, and its actors could perform because they work under a different contract not covered by the actors strike, though as union members, they may be reluctant to do so.

Shows that return while actors are still picketing could prove controversial, as happened with the planned resumptions of daytime shows including “The Drew Barrymore Show” and “The Talk.” Those plans were later abandoned.

The fastest show to make it back? That would be “Real Time with Bill Maher,” which announced it would return Friday.

The host was among those who plotted a return without writers but ended up postponing once last week’s negotiations were set.

WHAT ABOUT ‘STRANGER THINGS’ AND ‘SUPERMAN?’

Writers rooms for scripted shows that shut down at the strike’s onset, including Netflix’s “Stranger Things,” “Severance” on Apple TV+ and “Abbott Elementary” on ABC, are also likely to reactivate quickly. But with no performers to act out the scripts, long delays between page and screen will be inevitable.

Film writers will also get back to work on their slower timeline, though those working on scripts or late revisions for already scheduled movies — including “Deadpool 3” and “Superman: Legacy” — will certainly be hustling to avoid further release-date delays.

Director Quentin Tarantino’s 10th film, “The Movie Critic,” is among the already written scripts whose makers are awaiting actors’ return to sets.

WHEN ARE DREW BARRYMORE AND OTHER DAYTIME SHOWS COMING BACK?

Barrymore’s planned return to her daytime television show became a rallying point for picketers earlier this month, prompting her to cancel her plans. “The Talk” and “The Jennifer Hudson Show,” which also employ some screenwriters, also called off plans to return.

Barrymore and the other shows have not announced their return dates.

ARE THERE ANY NEW SERIES OR MOVIES COMING OUT THIS FALL?

Absolutely. Networks had to get creative with fall programming by tapping into international shows, game shows and more sports. But there are still several new series and movies coming out this year.

Some standout newcomers include a “Walking Dead” show focused on fan favorite Daryl Dixon and a “John Wick” prequel series that are airing now. Still to premiere are a new Jesse L. Martin NBC series, “Irrational,” and a “Frasier” sequel.

The PBS lineup is largely unaffected. It includes a Ken Burns documentary series, “The American Buffalo,” and a drama show about the lives of people fighting World War II. The network also has nonfiction shows that examine Elon Musk’s Twitter takeover, Russia’s invasion of Ukraine and the Houston Astros cheating scandal, as well as how animals are adapting to human-caused habitat changes.

Menendez tells Senate he won't resign, remains defiant amid charges

By Mary Clare Jalonick

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — New Jersey Sen. Robert Menendez remained defiant in the face of federal bribery charges on Thursday, telling a room full of his Senate Democratic colleagues that he has no plans to resign.

Speaking behind closed doors at the Capitol, Menendez echoed his previous public statements in response to last week's indictment, according to a person who attended the private luncheon and requested anonymity to discuss it. Menendez has repeatedly denied wrongdoing and pledged that he will beat the charges that he worked to secretly advance Egyptian interests and pressured prosecutors to help his friends.

More than half of Democratic senators have said Menendez should step down. But none of them asked questions after he spoke and vowed to remain in office, according to several senators leaving the meeting.

But Menendez's remarks also appeared to win him no new allies, further isolating the New Jersey senator as his colleagues and Democratic leaders have wrestled over how to respond to the indictment alleging that he traded off his Senate position to enrich himself with cash, gold bars and a luxury car.

"My mind is not changed," said Sen. Michael Bennet, D-Colo., who has called on Menendez to step down. He declined to give any additional details about the meeting.

"I don't think there's anything happy about his situation," said Rhode Island Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse. "He was pretty clear" that he's not resigning, said Maryland Sen. Ben Cardin, who is taking over for Menendez as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Menendez was forced to step down after he was indicted due to caucus rules.

Menendez, who pleaded not guilty to the charges on Wednesday, did not tell his colleagues whether he will run for re-election next year. At least one Democrat, New Jersey Rep. Andy Kim, has already jumped into the primary, and the head of Senate Democrats' campaign arm, Michigan Sen. Gary Peters, has called on Menendez to resign — signaling that he may not receive campaign assistance traditionally available to incumbents.

Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., hinted at the uncertainty of Menendez's political future when he announced on Wednesday that Menendez would speak at Thursday's meeting. "We'll see what happens after that," Schumer said.

But Schumer, who has not called on Menendez to resign, would not comment as he left the meeting.

Menendez also declined to elaborate. "They heard my message," he said of his colleagues. He reiterated he will not step aside.

The New Jersey senator is accused along with his wife, Nadine, in an indictment released Friday of using his position to aid the authoritarian government of Egypt and to pressure federal prosecutors to drop a case against a friend, among other allegations of corruption. The three-count indictment says they were paid gold bars, a luxury car and cash by three New Jersey businessmen as bribes in exchange for multiple corrupt acts.

Menendez, who was released on a $100,000 bond Wednesday, has said the cash found in his home was drawn from his personal savings accounts over the years and that he kept it on hand for emergencies. One of the envelopes full of cash found at his home, however, bore the DNA of one of the businessmen who are charged as his co-conspirators, the indictment said. It was also marked with the real estate developer's return address, according to prosecutors.

The indictment alleges repeated actions by Menendez to benefit Egypt, despite U.S. government misgivings over the country's human rights record that in recent years have prompted Congress to attach restrictions on aid.

Prosecutors, who detailed meetings and dinners between Menendez and Egyptian officials, say Menendez gave sensitive U.S. government information to Egyptian officials and ghostwrote a letter to fellow senators encouraging them to lift a hold on $300 million in aid to Egypt, one of the top recipients of U.S. military support.

It's the second corruption case in a decade against Menendez, whose last trial involving different allegations ended with jurors failing to reach a verdict in 2017.

Menendez was similarly defiant as he fought those charges. But that time most of his colleagues stood by him — including fellow New Jersey Democratic Sen. Cory Booker, who was a character witness in his trial. On Tuesday, Booker called for his longtime colleague to step down, saying the new indictment includes "shocking allegations of corruption and specific, disturbing details of wrongdoing."

"We have some animals on site," Jolly said. "Some burros and llamas, we have corn shelling and then we have wheat thrashing and a stationary bailer. The ones I spoke to were quite impressed. One school was all kindergarteners, so they really enjoyed that. We show them the demonstrations, they get to ask questions out in the nice cool breeze. We give them a little sample of molasses, we give them a little sample of cider, we give them a sample of homemade butter. I love to do it every year."

One demonstration that really drew in kids was the crushing of sugar cane and boiling the juice into molasses. Verona Goetz grew up working the labor-intensive process with her family and remembers it well.

"We buy the cane from the Mennonites in Windsor; they will strip it all and cut it off and put it on the wagon," Goetz said. "My family did this for years, I remember doing this as a little girl in the field. It got so labor intensive we haven't got enough people to go out and do it."

An antique tractor with an old universal joint turns a 100-year-old masher as Robert Weinberg feeds the cane in and collects the greenish liquid to be boiled down for hours.

"For three and a half to four hours," Goetz said. "We start with about 50 to 60 gallons of juice and wind up with about 7 or 8."

All that work for a sweet, sticky goo.

the morning admiring the well-restored farm equipment.

"Just viewing all these nice antiques and learning about what they did in the past," Viebrock said. "They just did what they were told by their parents and really get to work."

Viebrock watched the cane refining process and marveled at the way forefathers put their back into it. "Lot of hard work," Viebrock said. "Just taking the sugar cane and just crumbling it up, putting down trees and cutting that for firewood. They just got their own products, and they were good homemade."

Viebrock was one student willing to try the freshly refined syrup and bravely sampled a spoonful.

"It's either they like it, or they don't like it," Goetz said. "They're going, 'Oh this tastes like honey, this tastes like pumpkin!' You know, everybody's taste is different."

Perhaps it was seeing how the molasses was made that helped Viebrock be one who enjoyed the flavor. "It was sweet and tasted really good," Viebrock noted. "I wish I could have some more right now." Chris Howell can be reached at 660-530-0146.

New California law raises minimum wage for fast food workers to $20

By Adam Beam

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — A new law in California will raise the minimum wage for fast food workers to $20 per hour next year, an acknowledgment from the state's Democratic leaders that most of the often overlooked workforce are the primary earners for their low-income households.

When it takes effect on April 1, fast food workers in California will have the highest guaranteed base salary in the industry. The state's minimum wage for all other workers — $15.50 per hour — is already among the highest in the United States.

Democratic Gov. Gavin Newsom signed the law Thursday amid a throng of cheering workers and labor leaders at an event in Los Angeles. Newsom dismissed the popular view that fast food jobs are meant for teenagers to have their first experience in the workforce.

"That's a romanticized version of a world that doesn't exist," Newsom said. "We have the opportunity to reward that contribution, reward that sacrifice and stabilize an industry."

Newsom's signature reflects the power and influence of labor unions in the nation's most populous state, which have worked to organize fast food workers in an attempt to improve their wages and working conditions.

It also settles — for now, at least — a fight between labor and business groups over how to regulate the industry. In exchange for higher pay, labor unions have dropped their attempt to make fast food corporations liable for the misdeeds of their independent franchise operators in California, an action that could have upended the business model on which the industry is based. The industry, meanwhile, has agreed to pull a referendum related to worker wages off the 2024 ballot.

"That was a tectonic plate that had to be moved," Newsom said, referring to what he said were the more than 100 hours of negotiations it took to reach an agreement on the bills in the final weeks of the state legislative session.

Mary Kay Henry, president of the Service Employees International Union International, said the law capped 10 years of work — including 450 strikes across the state in the past two years.

The moment was almost too much for Anneisha Williams, who held back tears as she spoke during a news conference just before Newsom signed the bill. Williams, a mother of six — seven if you count her beloved dog — works at a Jack in the Box restaurant in Inglewood.

"They've been with me on the picket line, and they've been marching with me as well," Williams said of her children. "This is for them."

Newsom signing the law could win back some favor with organized labor, who sharply criticized him last week for vetoing a separate bill aimed at protecting the jobs of truck drivers amid the rise of self-driving technology. Unions have played a big part in Newsom's political rise in California, offering a reliable source of campaign cash.

Newsom's appearance in Los Angeles comes a day after Republican presidential candidates — but not Donald Trump — appeared at the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library in Simi Valley for their second televised debate. Newsom, while denying any interest in a White House run, has positioned himself as a foil to GOP contenders and has traveled the country to criticize conservative positions on abortion and gun rights. His actions on hundreds of bills before him may be viewed through the lens of his future political ambitions.

The new minimum wage for fast food workers will apply to restaurants with at least 60 locations nationwide, with an exception for restaurants that make and sell their own bread, like Panera Bread.

Right now, California's fast food workers earn an average of $16.60 per hour, or just over $34,000 per year, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. That's below the California Poverty Measure for a family of four, a statistic calculated by the Public Policy Institute of California and the Stanford Center on Poverty and Equality that accounts for housing costs and publicly-funded benefits.

The new $20 minimum wage is just a starting point. The law creates a Fast Food Council that has the power to increase that wage each year through 2029 by 3.5% or the change in averages for the U.S. Consumer Price Index for urban wage earners and clerical workers, whichever is lower.

Now, the focus will shift to another group of low-wage California workers waiting for their own minimum wage increase. Lawmakers passed a separate bill earlier this month that would gradually raise the minimum wage for health care workers to $25 per hour over the next decade. That raise wouldn't apply to doctors and nurses, but to most everyone else who works at hospitals, dialysis clinics or other health care facilities.

But unlike the fast food wage increase — which Newsom helped negotiate — the governor has not said if he would sign the raise for health care workers. The issue is complicated by the state's Medicaid program, which is the main source of revenue for many hospitals. The Newsom administration has estimated the wage increase would cost the state billions of dollars in increased payments to health care providers.

Labor unions that support the wage increase point to a study from the University of California-Berkeley Labor Center that said the state's costs would be offset by a reduction in the number of people relying on publicly funded assistance programs.

Ballard, a State Fair Community College student, added the people at the Jefferson City convention became like a family, and it was “heartbreaking” to see it close. She hopes Sedalia will eventually offer a costume or cosplay-related event.

“Even just a day event,” she noted. “Just like a little convention. I’ve been wanting to find people to help with it. It would bring so much tourism — it would be great for the community.”

Ballard explained how she got into costume. She has a makeup kit along with Spirit Gum to attach her pointed ears, a long black braided wig, and Scare-Crow custom fangs (fangs that pop up conveniently). Ballard added Spirit Gum is the cosplayer’s No. 1 product. She also uses, occasionally, Got 2 B glue hair gel and uses a non-toxic makeup, Paradise Mehron, to create her blue look.

“I use a paintbrush and just dunk it in water,” she said. “I have to do two layers with it, though, because it is water-based. It’s easy to remove, and it doesn’t stain your face. It’s really high quality — it’s expensive.”

When she wants to remove the makeup, she gets it in the shower and rinses it away.

“It does stain my ears because it’s hard to clean them,” she said with a smile. “So, I will have blue ears for a little bit.”

And she sometimes has blue lips, but Ballard said she doesn’t mind it. She loves the art of cosplay.

Ballard plans to attend the First Thursdays event

Isabelle Ballard strikes an “Avatar” pose, from the movie of the same name, on Monday at Liberty Park. She said it took three hours to do her makeup and costume. Over several weeks, she also created her beaded belt, bow and arrow, and necklace.

hosted by Sedalia Main Streets on Oct. 5 in downtown Sedalia, which has a Halloween theme.

“I think it would be a good opportunity,” she added. “I could talk to people about hopefully starting some kind of convention.”

Besides her avatar character, she likes to dress up as extremely extravagant video game characters. However, she did note she chose the avatar character because she wanted to create characters no one has done before.

“I like to do things that are basically art,” she noted. “Out of all the conventions I’ve gone to, I’ve never seen anyone do ‘Avatar.’”

Ballard is open to dressing in character for birthday parties and other events. For more information, call Ballard at 660-619-8930.

Holding one of her makeup kits, Isabelle Ballard said she uses non-toxic makeup that is easily washed off with water.

No. 21 UCM adds individual honors ahead of Northwest

By Joe Andrews
joea@warrensburgstarjournal.com

WARRENSBURG — Zach Zebrowski continues to impress.

Five weeks into the season, the redshirt junior quarterback still leads NCAA Division II in passing yards, passing touchdowns and total offense.

He has also assisted as a small part in Central Missouri's climb to a No. 21 ranking in latest American Football Coaches Association Division II rankings.

"He's a point guard," Central Missouri head coach Josh Lamberson said. "He's a very good football player. He distributes the ball extremely well. He processes information very quickly. He's a very accurate passer. He's very able with his feet. He's a good athlete."

Zebrowski made his latest impact in a 58-28 win against Washburn on Saturday, Sept. 23, in Topeka, Kan.

He completed 40-of-48 passes for 369 yards, five touchdowns and one interception.

For the performance, Zebrowski was named as the MIAA Offensive Player of the Week.

The game marked the third time Zebrowski has logged five touchdowns this season. He is averaging 368.8 yards per pass and 10.89 yards per play on a 70% completion rate.

"It's one of those things that is fun to watch," Lamberson said. "I'm glad that I get to be a part of it and get a front row seat."

Zebrowski was one of two Mules to garner player of the week honors from the MIAA, joined by Special Teams Player of the Week David Olajiga.

Olajiga logged two blocked field goal attempts against Washburn. The first arrived in the first quarter, halting a 52-yard field goal attempt from Ichabods junior Trenton Brehm.

Olajiga's other block arrived on a 37-yard attempt from Brehm in the fourth quarter.

The two accolades come ahead of a home game against Northwest Missouri State (2-2, 1-2 MIAA) on Saturday, Sept. 30.

The start is the Bearcats' worst since 2003. They are not in the AFCA rankings for the second-consecutive week.

Prior to dropping out, Northwest had been ranked 242 straight weeks dating back to November 2003.

That '03 Bearcats team had two current Mules connections. Lamberson was a redshirt sophomore quarterback and offensive line coach Joe Holtaclaw was a true freshman lineman.

"Obviously a historic opponent in Northwest Missouri with what they've been able to accomplish throughout the years," Lamberson said. "Another great MIAA foe we have the opportunity to play."

Northwest heads into the matchup following a 59-0 beatdown of winless Lincoln.

S-C SECOND AT CMAC CHAMPIONSHIP

Smith Cotton's Gracie Vannatta and Charlotte Fischer both had top-10 finishes to help the Lady Tigers take second at Wednesday's CMAC Conference Championship at Jefferson City Country Club.

By Democrat staff

Smith-Cotton girls golf came only second to Helias at Wednesday's CMAC Conference Championship held at Jefferson City Country Club.

The Crusaders as a team carded a 361, and individually were led by senior Sophie Hinds' 85 (+13), who tied with Cap City's Jaycie Lowery although Hinds prevailed for first place due to a handicap tiebreak.

The Lady Tigers finished with a total score of 398. They were led by Gracie Vannatta and Charlotte Fischer, who respectively scored a 94 and 95. Those were good for individual finishes of ninth and 10th place. Rounding out the scores for S-C were Audrey Lewis with a 104 and Hannah Lowman, a stroke behind at 105.

Rock Bridge came in behind S-C with a 399 for third place, followed by Cap City's 407.

Hickman (411) ended in fifth, then Jeff City (417), whose sophomore Mia McGraw placed third individually with an 88. Battle ended with a score of 547.

The Lady Tigers have just the Battle Tournament left on Oct. 3 before the team's Class 4 District 3 Tournament two days later.

No. 23 Mizzou finally leaves state to open SEC slate at Vanderbilt

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Missouri coach Eli Drinkwitz hasn't spent much time thinking about getting the Tigers back into the AP Top 25 for the first time since 2019.

"Rankings only matter what you do this week, so our goal was not to be ranked in Week Four," Drinkwitz said. "Our goal is to figure out where we're at by the end of the season. ... We're more focused on what we can control this week, which is playing at Vandy."

He can take a big lesson from 2019 as he takes his 23rd-ranked Tigers (4-0, 1-0) out of Missouri for the first time this season for their Southeastern Conference opener at Vanderbilt on Saturday. In 2019, then-No. 22 Missouri visited Vanderbilt and lost, starting a five-game skid that led to Barry Odom's firing.

"Obviously opening up SEC play on the road is going to be a big challenge for us," Drinkwitz said of a team whose longest trip this season was to St. Louis last week where the Tigers beat Memphis, 34-27.

The Commodores (2-3, 0-1) are trying to snap a three-game skid by taking better care of the ball.

They rank 102nd nationally in turnover margin having lost 13 turnovers — eight of those interceptions — that opponents have turned into 37 points. That has been a big focus after a pair of pick-6s in last week's 45-28 loss to Kentucky.

Cabrera's 511th HR lifts Tigers over Royals

By Dave Hogg
Associated Press

DETROIT — Miguel Cabrera hit his 511th home run and scored twice, and the Detroit Tigers beat the Kansas City Royals 8-0 Thursday in the completion of a suspended game.

Cabrera, who is retiring after the season, tied Mel Ott for 25th on the career home run list. The 40-year-old has 373 homers for Detroit, tying Norm Cash for second behind Al Kaline's 399.

Play was suspended because of rain after four innings and an 80-minute wait on Wednesday night.

Miguel Díaz (1-0) pitched two innings for the win. Kansas City was held to four hits for the 25th time this season.

Detroit has pitched 14 shutouts. At 54-104, the Royals have their most losses since 2018.

Cabrera homered leading off the second against Jonathan Bownan (0-1), a 26-year-old right-hander who allowed one run and three hits over two innings in his major league debut.

"I was a lot more comfortable out there than I expected — it felt like home," Bownan said. "I was just zoned in and pitching like I have all my life."

Cabrera's homer, his fourth this season, would have hit the out-of-town scoreboard before this season's renovations lowered the fence in right-centerfield.

"It's meaningful, because he wants to win games," Tigers manager A.J. Hinch said. "Is it his last homer? I don't know, but that was vintage Miggy. That's how he hits."

Cabrera singled in the fourth for his 3,170th hit, took second on Andy Ibanez's double, and scored on pinch-hitter Tyler Nevin's three-run homer.

Analysis: Likely to take all 162 games to decide MLB’s postseason races

By David Brandt
AP Baseball Writer

PHOENIX — It might take all 162 games of the long Major League Baseball season to decide the playoff races in both the National League and American League. The epicenter of the wild-card chase is in Arizona this weekend. Thanks to some fortuitous interleague scheduling, the AL’s Houston Astros travel to face the NL’s Arizona Diamondbacks in a three-game set crucial to the races in both leagues. The Astros are fighting for their postseason lives after a September swoon sent them tumbling back to the pack. They’re the defending postseason champs. The Diamondbacks are trying to make the postseason for the first time since 2017. Other big series this weekend include Rangers-Mariners, Rays-Blue Jays and Cubs-Brewers.

PHOENIX — It might take all 162 games to decide the playoff races in both the National League and American League.

The epicenter of the wild-card chase this weekend is in Arizona at Chase Field. Thanks to some fortuitous interleague scheduling, the AL’s Houston Astros face the NL’s Arizona Diamondbacks in a three-game set crucial to races in both leagues.

Defending champion Houston is fighting for a berth after a September swoon. The Diamondbacks — who have played better lately after their own second-half slide — are trying to make the postseason for the first time since 2017.

“We know it’s right in front of us,” Arizona manager Torey Lovullo said after his team beat the White Sox on Wednesday. “We control our own destiny in this particular situation.”

Here’s a look at some of the other series this weekend that will decide the postseason field:

Rangers at Mariners: This is a big four-game set that actually began Thursday night, with both teams fighting for position in the AL West and the AL wild card race. The Rangers have played well over the past 1 1/2 weeks, opening a 2 1/2-game division lead. Texas probably is fine with a win or two in the series while Seattle might need to sweep.

Rays at Blue Jays: The Rays have already secured their berth, though they could still catch the Orioles for the AL East title. The Blue Jays are fighting for an AL wild card spot and winning at least two of three against Tampa Bay would go a long way toward securing that goal.

Cubs at Brewers: The Cubs just finished a tough series against Atlanta and have lost nine times in September in games in which they led. The NL Central-leading Brewers are locked into their playoff spot.

Marlins at Pirates: The Marlins have been playing roughly .500 ball for the better part of a month. They’ll need a big weekend against the Pirates — possibly a sweep — to have a chance at making the postseason.

Reds at Cardinals: The surprising Reds have been sliding some in recent weeks. They’ll likely need a sweep over the Cardinals to have much of a shot at sneaking into the postseason.

AWARDS RACES

The most intrigue still surrounds the NL Cy Young Award race, which has a handful of solid candidates in San Diego’s Blake Snell, Chicago’s Justin Steele, Arizona’s Zac Gallen and Atlanta’s Spencer Strider.

Strider’s got a shot in his final start to become the majors only 20-game winner. Steele and Gallen will have one more chance to impress in the middle of the NL wild card race.

Ronald Acuña Jr. recently created the 40-homer, 70-stolen base club after the Braves star became the first player to reach both those marks in the same season. With apologies to teammate Matt Olson and Dodgers standouts Mookie Betts and Freddie Freeman, he’s still the favorite for the National League MVP.

Yankees star Gerrit Cole pitched a two-hit shutout against Toronto, clinching the AL ERA title and strengthening his Cy Young case.

MIGGY FAREWELL

Miguel Cabrera hit his 511th homer on Wednesday.

The 40-year-old is putting the finishing touches on a stellar career that includes two MVP awards, A Triple Crown, four batting titles, 12 All-Star appearances and a 2003 World Series title. There was a 13-year stretch from 2004-6 when he was one of the most feared hitters in baseball.

FRANCONA’S FINALE?

All signs point to this being Cleveland manager Terry Francona’s final season in the dugout.

The 64-year-old has been slowed by major health issues in recent years, but if this is it, there’s little doubt the personable, popular Francona has left a lasting imprint as a manager and one of the game’s most beloved figures.

He won World Series titles with the Boston in 2004 and 2007 before guiding the Guardians over the past 11 years, which have included nine winning seasons.

EYES ON THE BALL

MLB has enjoyed a big boost in attendance this season, averaging roughly 29,000 fans per game going into the final weekend.

That’s much better than 26,843 fans per game from 2022 and 18,901 in 2021 — which were both affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. No fans were allowed in parks during the 2020 regular season.

But that doesn’t explain all of this year’s jump. The sport is poised to draw its most fans since 2017, when the average was just shy of 30,000. One popular hypothesis: The newly-introduced pitch clock has made the sport much more watchable, shaving more than 20 minutes off of games.

HOROSCOPES

By Georgia Nicols

Moon Alert: There are no restrictions to shopping or important decisions today. The Full Moon in Aries peaks at 5:58 a.m. EDT today (2:58 a.m. PDT).

Happy Birthday for Friday, Sept. 29, 2023: You march to the beat of your own drum. You are independent, unconventional and want the freedom to do your own thing. This is the last year of a nine-year cycle for you, which means it's appropriate to let go of anything or anyone who is holding you back.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★ This is the classic day for squabbles with partners or tension about a romantic interest. Possibly, some couples will be at odds because of differing approaches to raising kids. Yet again, others might dispute how to handle a social occasion. It's a tricky day! Stay calm. Tonight: Stay steady.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ Today's Full Moon could trigger problems at work with co-workers or clients. Meanwhile, something unexpected at home or within your family could occur. Perhaps a redecorating project is interrupted. A party or social occasion might be canceled. Possibly, a small appliance will break down. Tonight: Solitude.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★ Today is full of surprises, especially if you're socializing or working in the arts or the entertainment world. Sudden cancellations and changes are likely. Pay attention to what you say and do, because this is an accident-prone day, especially during short trips, or while walking or jogging. Tonight: Easy does it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★ Today you might feel pulled between the demands of home and family versus the demands of your career or your public reputation. Meanwhile, something to do with your possessions, your earnings or your wealth is unpredictable. You might suddenly receive something — or lose it. Tonight: Be strong.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★ Today's Full Moon energy could trigger a slight accident-prone influence for you, which is why you must pay attention to everything you say and do. Do things slowly and carefully. Think before you speak. A relationship with a boss, parent or someone in authority might hold a few surprises. Show respect. Tonight: Explore!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ Today's Full Moon might bring financial matters to a head. Perhaps it's a dispute about how to share property or wealth, or how to share responsibilities. For some, a hidden love affair might suddenly be revealed. (This is not a boring day.) Tonight: Check your finances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★ The Full Moon today takes place opposite your sign, which could trigger tension with you and those closest to you, like a friend, spouse or partner. This could relate to an unexpected event with a member of a group or another friend. Or perhaps someone from the past appears. Tonight: Listen.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★ A surprise compliment from a boss or someone in authority, or a promotion or some good news might land in your lap today. Someone might approve of you in a way that boosts your morale and gives you a lift. It might even be the beginning of a new romance. Tonight: Work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★ Unexpected opportunities to travel might come to you today. Or perhaps it's good news about future travel. Possibly, you're pleased with something related to higher education, publishing, medicine or the law. Tension with kids or between romantic partners will subside after today's Full Moon. Tonight: Relax.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★ Tension with parents or authority figures might be in the air today. Fortunately, this will likely dissolve quickly as the energy of the Full Moon lessens today. Meanwhile, a financial surprise or some practical assistance might please you. Romance also might catch you off guard. Tonight: Cocoon.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★ Be mindful of what you say and do today, because this is an accident-prone day for you. Therefore, think carefully before you speak. Guard against knee-jerk reactions. Don't be hasty. Meanwhile, someone close to you might have a pleasant surprise. Tonight: Learn something.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★ Disputes about shared property, inheritances or shared responsibilities will get resolved today. Things will be defined and boundaries will be established. Meanwhile, a pleasant surprise connected to your work, your health or even your pet might catch you off guard in a pleasing way. Tonight: Get organized.

US skipper Zach Johnson believes this Ryder Cup will be different

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

GUIDONIA MONTECELIO, Italy — Big winners two years ago in Wisconsin, the Americans know a Ryder Cup victory away from home has been out of reach for the last 30 years.

Among the challenges is a pro-European crowd ready to cheer and jeer every miss.

So it was no surprise Thursday on the eve of the Ryder Cup to hear U.S. captain Zach Johnson do all he could to curry favor with the host nation in the opening ceremony. He offered endless praise of Italy and immigrants who have added so much to American culture and character.

“And this week, in a small way, we hope America can give something back to Italy,” he said.

European captain Luke Donald thought of one thing America could offer.

“Yeah, a little gold trophy would be nice on Sunday evening,” he said.

The battle for the 17-inch Ryder Cup, in U.S. possession since that 19-9 beating at Whistling Straits in 2021, gets started Friday morning at Marco Simone. It's a golf course built for big excitement at an event that really doesn't need much help.

It's not so much the reachable par 5s and short par 4s. Viktor Hovland charged up the crowd Thursday with his “mulligan albatross.” After an errant tee shot, he dropped a ball on the tee at the 302-yard fifth and knocked it in with a 3-wood.

This is as much about the hills and layout that allow for good views and lots of noise. Playing before a hostile crowd is never easy, and perhaps one reason Team USA has not left European soil with the Ryder Cup since 1993.

Johnson believes this year will be different, just like captains of the previous six visiting U.S. teams before him. He felt good enough to sit out Jordan Spieth and Justin Thomas from the opening session of foursomes Friday morning, along with Brooks Koepka, a five-time major champion he said was built for big stages like this.

“Really at peace with where things are,” Johnson said. “Extremely confident in our 12 guys.”

Johnson is sending out world No. 1 Scottie Scheffler and his close friend, Sam Burns, to face Masters champion Jon Rahm and Tyrrell Hatton in the first of four matches in the opening session.

Four matches of fourballs follow in the afternoon, with the same schedule on Saturday and then 12 singles matches on Sunday to decide the cup. The Americans are defending champions and only need 14 out of the 28 points available to retain the Ryder Cup.

In other opening matches, Hovland and Swedish rookie Ludvig Aberg will face the Ryder Cup rookie duo of Max Homa and British Open champion Brian Harman; Collin Morikawa and Rickie Fowler face Sepp Straka and Shane Lowry; and the anchor match feels like heavyweight material — Patrick Cantlay and Xander Schauffele against Rory McIlroy and Tommy Fleetwood.

McIlroy is the most experienced Ryder Cup player and No. 2 in the world.

Fleetwood went 4-0 in his partnership with Francesco Molinari in his memorable debut before a home European crowd outside Paris in 2018.

“It's a really strong American team, and they have a lot of really tough partnerships. We're going up against one of them tomorrow in Xander and Patrick. They've got an incredible record,” McIlroy said. “I just hope I can live up to Francesco, is really all I'm trying to do here. If I can live up to Francesco, I think we'll be OK.”

The four days of buildup to the opening session felt as long as the two years since the last Ryder Cup. Teams played 9-hole practice rounds in-between team photos, interviews, gala dinners and motivational moments within their respective team rooms.

Once the ball is in the air before an enormous arena around the first tee, the action becomes relentless all the way through to the end.

The captains and their assistants have analyzed the statistical data of their players and potential partnerships. They have watched them practice.

“There comes a point when you've just got to let your thoroughbreds run,” Johnson said. “And I think we're at that point. But I'm confident in the approach we've had up to this point.”

The only surprise was sitting Spieth — in his fifth Ryder Cup — and Thomas for the opening session, though they likely will be playing fourballs in the afternoon. It's the first time Spieth has not played in the opening session.

Johnson said it was a matter of numbers — four matches means he had to sit four players (U.S. Open champion Wyndham Clark also is sitting). And it's unlikely most players will go all five matches given the heat and terrain outside Rome.

“The eight guys I have down on paper are the ones that we feel best put us in the position to get off to a great start,” Johnson said. “I have the utmost confidence in these eight and the utmost confidence in Jordan and Justin. I know we're talking about a great tandem, but it's a situation where it's not about their form. They're playing great. So it's really just a matter of trying to dissect all five sessions.”

No one keeps score outside the ropes, but it felt as though Donald went 1-up in the opening ceremony by speaking beautifully in Italian to welcome the crowd, and then including the 12 caddies as making them every bit of the team.

But it's decided by keeping the ball in short grass, holing points, earning points.

“I have a lot of faith in my team, but at the same time, I certainly don't underestimate the U.S. side. There's some strong players,” Donald said. “There's a lot of players that played two years ago in Whistling Straits. They have some pairings that have astronomical win percentages, that have had a lot of success.”

“I'm very happy with the progress of my team,” he said. “The preparation the last few days has been fantastic. They've given a lot over the last three days. They're very engaged, and they are ready to compete.”

Analysis: Year 1 coach Adrian Griffin is the winner of the Lillard trade

By Tim Reynolds
AP Basketball Writer

The Milwaukee Bucks were winners of the Damian Lillard trade sweepstakes, obviously, because they got him. Damian Lillard was a winner of the sweepstakes, also obviously, because now he gets a chance to really contend for an NBA title, even if he didn't get sent to Miami like he preferred.

Lillard and the Bucks were not the biggest winners, however.

That title goes to Adrian Griffin, who is about to officially start Year 1 as a head coach.

Picture this: You're a first-time NBA head coach, already hired to take over a team won the championship two years ago and had the best regular-season record in the league last year. You were given the keys to a team led by Giannis Antetokounmpo, a two-time MVP still very much in his prime and someone who on any given night could be the best player walking the planet. You inherited a team with great leadership in Khris Middleton and Brook Lopez, ownership willing to spend and a sharp general manager in Jon Horst. And now, a few days before your first training camp, you get Damian Lillard as well.

An incredible opportunity for Griffin has now become a super-duper-incredible opportunity for Griffin. Sure, there will be pressure. Tons of it. The Bucks are supposed to win the 2024 NBA title now, and there's no arguing otherwise. With Antetokounmpo and Lillard, there's no way Milwaukee will want anything less, and that's the way it should be.

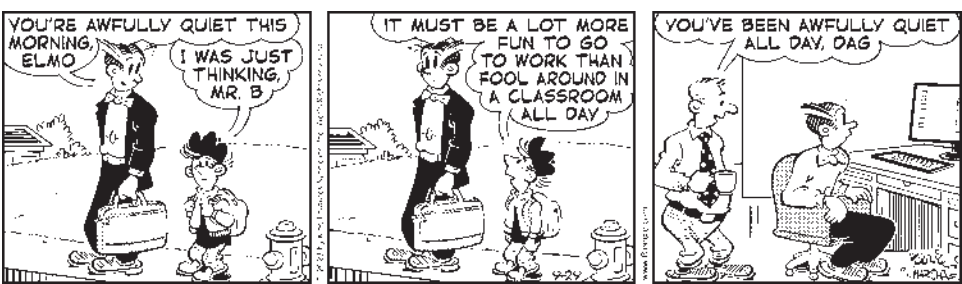

But recent history says Griffin should be able to handle it, because others in his position have with flying colors.

Darvin Ham finally got his long-awaited shot to be a head coach last season with the Los Angeles Lakers. The regular season was rocky and injury-filled, but Ham navigated the circus of attention that came with LeBron James closing in on the NBA's scoring record and then wound up leading the team to the Western Conference finals. It's hard to look at Year 1 of the Ham era and say it wasn't a total success.

The Bearcats hold the No. 1 defense in the MIAA, while the Mules hold the No. 1 offense.

It marks the second time UCM has gone up against a league-leading defense this season. It previously went up against the now No. 3 Pittsburg State defense on Sept. 16, losing 38-37.

The Mules are averaging 547.5 offensive yards per game while Northwest is limiting its opponents to 286.8.

“It’s a testament to Coach [Justin] Bane and the offense he has designed and putting the people in place, especially Zach Zebrowski and what we’ve got going,” Lamberson said.

Northwest’s falter this season has belonged to its offense, which has been navigating the field without starting quarterback Mike Hohensee since week two.

The Bearcats have played without starting quarterback Mike Hohensee since a 33-13 loss to Emporia State on Sept. 7. Hohensee’s status for the game is still unknown, though he is not listed in Northwest’s game notes.

The depth chart indicates sophomore Chris Runke as QB1. He made his first career start against Lincoln, nailing 12-of-16 passes for 170 yards and three touchdowns.

Sophomore running back Jay Harris leads the MIAA on the ground, averaging 115 yards per game. Northwest is averaging 411.5 yards per game compared to the 372 allowed by the UCM defense.

Central Missouri and Northwest are slated to kick off at 1 p.m. Saturday at Walton Stadium.

The game is a blackout and marks the first of two consecutive contests in Warrensburg.

“It will be a chance to play back at home,” Lamberson said. “Our guys love playing in front of our home crowd. I think it’s a blackout game, so I think the energy will be up. Our guys really feed off of that.”

Joe Andrews can be reached at 660-747-8123.

Tigers

Detroit added two runs in the fifth on Cabrera’s bases-loaded walk and Ibañez’s RBI forceout.

Jake Rogers hit a two-run homer in the eighth off Jackson Kowar.

Parker Meadows made a leaping catch at the center-field wall for the final out, denying Nelson Velazquez .

Detroit right-hander Sawyer Gipson-Long (1-0, 2.40) was to start the scheduled game against left-hander Cole Ragans (7-4, 3.11).

MOTHER NATURE

Most of the completion was played in light showers, but rain grew heavier during the fourth inning. Crew chief Marvin Hudson called for the tarp after a lengthy attempt to get the field playable to start the fifth.

UP NEXT

Royals: Kansas City returns home for a series opener against the New York Yankees, who start LHP Carlos Rodón (3-7, 5.74).

Tigers: LHP Joey Wentz (3-12, 6.45) starts Friday night’s series opener at Cleveland and RHP Cal Quantrill (3-7, 5.13).

Roundup

“We are very pleased with our second-place finish,” S-C head coach Craig Harvey said. “It is a difficult golf course and a course that all but one of our ladies have never played before. We are hoping to continue our success heading into next week’s district play in Springfield against very strong district competition.”

Lady Tigers fall on senior night

S-C volleyball held senior night on Wednesday, spoiled by a 3-0 sweep from the visiting Tigers from Versailles, who took the sets by scores of 25-21, 25-18 and 25-17.

Alle Case and Lennon Adams provided the finishing touch with seven kills each, while Case ended with a team-high 30 digs. Piper Cantrell and Addison Lyles provided 23 and 13 digs, respectively, while Shay Wooster had eight assists.

Hickman got the better of Smith-Cotton at home the night prior, 3-0 (25-14, 25-16, 25-17). Adams and Case combined for five blocks and Cantrell paced S-C with 19 digs in that defeat.

The Lady Tigers (8-12-1) have a few days off before beginning a stretch of three away from home beginning with Battle on Monday.

Roadrunners fall on road

State Fair Community College men’s soccer dropped a 5-1 result Wednesday at East Central College.

Jacob Wipke and Tyler Finder were on the mark for the hosts in the first 15 minutes, but State Fair responded behind Dario Catalan in the 29th minute to get back in the game. On the other side of the break, though, James Harrison found the netting, and goals by Michael Holliday and Teddy Pinjisi put the game out of reach. Jesus Martinez was shown a second yellow yard and sent off several minutes before the whistle to leave SFCC finishing with 10 men.

The Roadrunners (1-5-1) ended with 13 shots, while goalkeeper Adrian Fernandez saved three. SFCC plays next at St. Louis Community College on Oct. 4.

Mizzou

“It becomes about our ability to protect the ball and our ability to play to our identity and our ability to play four quarters in a manner that makes us proud,” coach Clark Lea said. “If we can do that, we feel like we have the ability to be in a tight game, and then it’s about trying to find a way to win.”

INJURY ISSUES

The Tigers’ top two players, quarterback Brady Cook and wide receiver Luther Burden III, are deemed “questionable” by Drinkwitz, but both are expected to play. The Tigers will be without wide receiver Mekhi Miller, who played the past two games with a sliced hand but has already been ruled out for Vanderbilt.

Missouri should get back offensive lineman Marcellus Johnson, who missed last week’s win over Memphis with an ankle injury. Standout defensive back Ennis Rakestraw also could be back Saturday.

QB DECISION

AJ Swann ranks second in the SEC with 11 touchdown passes and 1,290 yards, and the sophomore also has thrown for three or more TDs in four of his first 12 starts. But he was pulled late in Vanderbilt’s loss to Kentucky for Ken Seals, whose last start was in 2021.

Lea said Swann’s health will decide who starts. No matter who starts, Vanderbilt needs better quarterback play.

“We want to be mindful of the fact that AJ’s been battling through this elbow, and we want to see that he’s ready to continue,” he said. “And if not, we want to give the offense a chance to run through a healthy player so we can perform better offensively.”

SITUATIONAL DEFENSE

Missouri is ranked 42nd nationally in total defense this week, but the numbers take a dive in the most important parts of the game. The Tigers are 70th on third-down defense, 113th on fourth down and 120th in red-zone defense.

TOP TARGETS

Missouri ranks 30th averaging 281.8 yards passing a game, and Vanderbilt is 35th with 277.2 yards a game. Credit goes to some talented receivers. Burden is coming off a career performance with 10 catches for 177 yards and has three straight games with 100 yards or more receiving for Missouri.

Will Sheppard has six TD catches for Vanderbilt this season, tied for the FBS lead. Freshman London Humphreys leads the SEC averaging 24.9 yards per catch.

CONSTRUCTION ZONE

Vanderbilt is renovating its stadium just past each end zone, and visiting teams use a temporary locker room across a street. Cranes help hold up a portable videoboard for replays and the scoreboard.

Coach

Joe Mazzulla got thrust into the role of first-year head coach in Boston around this time last fall, just a few days before training camp after Ime Udoka’s personal conduct led to the Celtics suspending him for the year and ultimately letting him go. Like Ham, Mazzulla quickly answered any questions about his readiness by coaching in the All-Star Game and getting the Celtics to the Eastern Conference finals. Again, Year 1 for Mazzulla went down as a success.

Ham and Mazzulla are just the latest examples that prove there doesn’t have to be a learning curve for new coaches, especially Black coaches, many of whom until recent years quite simply had to wait too long to get an opportunity at having the head job. Griffin is surely aware of this. The game is the game, and he’s been a coach for a long time — 15 years as an assistant in the league more than prepped him for this. His paycheck is bigger now, he’ll be the one facing questions after losses, he’ll be scrutinized more than ever before. But having Lillard and Antetokounmpo in the same huddle is a wonderful opportunity for any head coach, especially a first-year one.

“Let’s be real,” Griffin said in June when the Bucks introduced him. “What first-time head coach gets to coach the Milwaukee Bucks, with all the special talent on this team? I’m extremely humbled.”

And that was before they got Lillard.

It’s not uncommon for first-year coaches to win and win big. Udoka went to the finals with Boston in 2022 in his first chance. He lost to Steve Kerr, who won the first of his four titles with Golden State in his first season with the Warriors. Tyronn Lue coached Cleveland to its NBA title in 2016 in Year 1 of his career. Pat Riley won his first title with the Los Angeles Lakers in the opening season of his Hall of Fame career.

And let’s not forget that Griffin has literally seen the playbook on how to do this. He was an assistant under Nick Nurse in Toronto and was there when Nurse — again, in Year 1 — helped the Raptors win their first title. Nurse was a Toronto assistant beforehand, inherited a really good team when he got the top job, and then expectations and potential went through the roof when the Raptors stunned the league by landing Kawhi Leonard in the summer leading into Nurse’s first season. Griffin basically is now on the same parallel path: get the job, take over really good team, then have a superstar added to his mix right away (and as an added bonus, Lillard’s former coach in Portland, Terry Stotts, just happens to be on Griffin’s staff).

Everyone knew Griffin had been given a big chance when the Bucks hired him. His chances got a whole lot better Wednesday when the Lillard deal got done. It’ll be months before the ultimate answer will come on who the biggest winner of the trade was, but for now, it’s clearly Griffin.

As debate over the value of running backs rages, the Steelers provide an interesting case study

By Will Graves

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The differences between Najee Harris and Jaylen Warren are stark.

Height. Weight. Draft profile. College pedigree. Temperament. Approach to their job.

It’s a dichotomy the Steelers believe they can exploit in hopes of getting the best out of both. It’s also a compelling case study in the ongoing debate on the value of running backs, a debate with no right answer and maybe no wrong one either.

The 6-foot-1, 232-pound Harris is a 2021 first-round pick who starred at Alabama and arrived in Pittsburgh expecting to be the “bell cow” for years to come, a euphemism coach Mike Tomlin has used on more than one occasion.

The 25-year-old has the prototypical size and approach of a franchise back , eager to stiff-arm a defender to the ground when he can, more eager — and perhaps more suited — to run through opponents than run by them.

Warren is five inches shorter and 17 pounds lighter. His college journey began at Snow College in central Utah before stops at Utah State and Oklahoma State. He arrived at Saint Vincent College for training camp in the summer of 2022 as an undrafted rookie free agent well aware he didn’t fit the profile no matter how quickly he seemed to burst through a hole or have his legs churn through the arms of would-be tacklers.

He was always too something. Too short. Too small. Too unknown.

And, it turns out, too relentless to turn away.

Warren made the team as Harris’ backup in 2022 thanks in large part to the way he fearlessly throws his body in front of oncoming pass rushers, a skillset he showcased last Sunday against the Raiders when he took on Las Vegas star defensive end Maxx Crosby — all 6-5 and 255 pounds of him — in the first quarter to buy quarterback Kenny Pickett enough time to hit Calvin Austin for a 72-yard touchdown.

“Crosby came looping. I couldn’t just let him go past,” Warren said. “I feel like with the bigger guys, you’ve got to hit them harder than the people that’s not that size because you are going to get run over if you don’t.”

It was the kind of play a guy who knows he can never give a coaching staff a reason to say “no” needs to make. It’s also the kind of play the inner masochist in Warren enjoys.

“They say there’s going to be something you hate about your job, I don’t see that as that,” Warren said. “I actually like blitz pickup. I just like the physicality of it.”

While everyone from Tomlin to offensive coordinator Matt Canada emphasizes that Harris is “our guy” as Canada put it

Thursday, reality offers a slightly different view.

Heading into Sunday’s visit to Houston (1-2), their playing time and production have been nearly equal.

Harris has 38 touches for 141 yards while playing 53% of the snaps. Warren has 29 touches for 156 yards while playing 43% of the snaps.

Then there’s the money. Harris counts $3.5 million against the salary cap. Warren just $874,000, though his take-home pay will take a bit of a hit if he can’t get the $48,000 fine he earned for a helmet-to-helmet hit against Cleveland on Sept. 18 overturned on appeal, an amount that’s the rough equivalent of two game checks (after taxes).

“Playing for the love of the game the next two weeks,” Warren said with a laugh.

Why not? It’s what got him here. It’s also why he’ll begrudgingly pay the fine if it comes to that and why he shrugged when asked if he plans to do anything differently in the future.

“I’ll play the same way,” Warren said. “I wouldn’t have made the team if I didn’t play the way I play do. Damned if I do. Damned if I don’t.”

There is no rivalry here. Not yet anyway. The Steelers made an intentional decision to take a little bit off Harris’ plate after he had an NFL-high 381 touches as a rookie. That number dropped to 313 last season and is on pace to dip a little further in 2023, though it is still really early and Harris’ limited touches through three weeks are as much a byproduct of the offense’s inability to sustain drives as anything else.

“I think we want to be balanced to a point, but obviously Najee’s our guy and he’s going to have the workload and majority of carries in a lot of instances,” Canada said. “But we think Jaylen is a great talent, does a lot of things and when he spells Najee, good things happen too.”

The Steelers had five scoring drives against the Raiders. On four of them, Harris and Warren had at least one carry each.

“As long as we’re trending upwards, that’s all that matters,” Harris said. “The run game is starting to help open up a lot of stuff, play-action started to help to create those big plays. We’re getting there.”

Focus on “we.” While Harris wasn’t shy during the offseason about urging the NFL to find a way to pay running backs what they believe they’re worth, it hasn’t affected his relationship with Warren, who at the moment is providing a similar service for a fraction of the price.

“We are constantly helping each other out, letting each other know what’s going on throughout the game,” Warren said. “Just kind of picking each other’s brain. Competition is what pushes us to be better. But we’re going to be there for each other.”

WHAT'S NEW ON MAX

"Our Flag Means Death" - Season 2

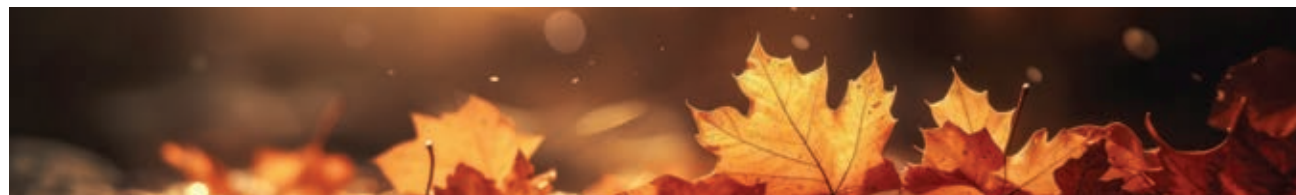

After captivating audiences with its first season last year, the Max original series "Our Flag Means Death" heads back out to the open ocean for its second season Thursday, Oct. 5, with a three-episode premiere. Very loosely based on the adventures of 18th-century would-be pirate Stede Bonnet (Rhys Darby, "Flight of the Conchords"), the series follows along as he leaves his seemingly charmed, gentlemanly life behind to pursue swashbuckling adventure on the high seas. After meeting and teaming up with the infamous pirate captain Blackbeard (Taika Waititi, "What We Do in the Shadows," 2014), Bonnet and Blackbeard encountered more than just adventure and friendship on the high seas; they stumbled into unexpected love. Now, with ghosts from their past dogging their steps, the couple and their crew have to survive everything their love brings with it. From creator and showrunner David Jenkins ("People of Earth") and executive producers Waititi and Garrett Basch ("Reservation Dogs"), Season 2 also stars returning cast members Samson Kayo ("Truth Seekers"), Vico Ortiz ("The Sex Lives of College Girls"), Ewen Bremner ("Trainspotting," 1996), Joel Fry ("Game of Thrones"), Matthew Maher ("Hello Tomorrow!"), Kristian Nairn ("Game of Thrones"), Con O'Neill ("Happy Valley"), David Fane ("800 Words"), Samba Schutte ("Sunnyside"), Nat Faxon ("Disenchantment") and Leslie Jones ("Saturday Night Live").

WHAT'S NEW ON PARAMOUNT+

"Pet Sematary: Bloodlines"

Another haunting adventure creeps in for the season on Paramount+ when the new horror film, "Pet Sematary: Bloodlines," makes its debut Friday, Oct. 6. The original Stephen King novel, "Pet Sematary," tells the story of the Creed family, a family of four from Chicago who relocate to small-town Maine with their beloved cat, Church. As they settle into their new life outside city limits, Church is tragically hit by a vehicle on the highway outside their home, causing Louis (played in the original film by Dale Midkiff, "Time Trax"), the father, to take measures to try to prevent his children from experiencing the grief of losing a pet. Following a discussion with a mysterious local named Jud Crandall (Fred Gwynne, "The Munsters"), Louis opts to keep Church's death a secret and bury the cat in the local pet cemetery. But when Church reappears to the family the following day, albeit looking a little worse for wear, it becomes clear the Creed family's life is about to change forever. Now, this 1969-set prequel follows a young Jud Crandall (Jackson White, "Mrs. Fletcher"), who has dreams of leaving his hometown of Ludlow, Maine, behind. But he soon discovers sinister secrets buried within and is forced to confront a dark family history that will forever keep him connected to Ludlow. Banding together, Jud and his childhood friends must fight an ancient evil that has gripped Ludlow since its founding. Directed and written by Lindsay Anderson Beer ("The
