Sedalia water towers now display logos and taglines

By Chris Howell
chrish@sedaliademocrat.com

Sedalia visitors can now see the city's logo and tagline, 'Let's Cross Paths,' emblazoned on the two city's water towers.

The community-driven project is intended to project the spirit of Sedalia thanks to the contribution of local donors.

"The Sedalia logo and tagline painted on our water towers represent more than just a design," Mayor Andrew Dawson said in a press release Wednesday, Sept. 11. "They embody the heart of our city. They tell our story, highlight our progress, and invite visitors to see what Sedalia is all about. This project displays our collective pride, as well as our commitment to growing and fostering our identity."

Carolyn Crooker, Executive Director for the Sedalia Convention and Visitors Bureau said her initial reaction on seeing the colorful logos was pride in having Sedalia promoted big and for all to see. She commended the individuals and organizations and businesses who donated to the project. "We're happy to have all that community partnership and get that 'Sedalia' up on the water towers for our visitors," Crooker told the Democrat on Thursday, Sept. 12. "That's what the Sedalia Convention and Visitors Bureau does; we like to promote to our visitors and have them come to Sedalia. Having the welcoming 'Sedalia' on the water towers is important. A big shout-out to the Kiwanis for supporting that and taking the ball and rolling that out. John Meehan led the charge for that."

With the tower West 16th Street and Water Tower Road complete, the logos on both sides can be seen from US 50 and Hwy 65.

Skilled painters with Viking Industrial Painting based in La Vista, Nebraska, have been in Sedalia for two weeks and Thursday were painting the last of the logos on the tower at Main Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

"It needs like a day and a half to do the rigging," foreman Chico Aguilar said. "Then to paint the logos, like a day maybe."

Billy Utz, renowned racer, laid to rest after final lap at beloved State Fair Speedway

By Chris Howell
chrish@sedaliademocrat.com

Billy Eugene Utz, 88, of Sedalia was laid to rest Tuesday, Sept. 10, after passing away Sept. 1 at his home.

Born on Sept. 8, 1935, in Garden City, Kansas, he was the son of Jay B. Utz and Minnie (McCaren) Utz, who preceded him in death.

On Oct. 7, 1962, he married Joyce Pearl Phillips, who preceded him in death on Dec. 11, 2017. Utz had two daughters, Dawn Renee Pinkelton (Barry) and Michelle Lynn Muths (Shane).

Utz was a farrier by trade with a long family history of Saddle Breed Horsemen. In the 1950s, he began his racing career. He drove for many car owners and was also an owner-driver.

Utz was inducted into many racing Halls Of Fame, including the National Sprint Car Hall of Fame, Knoxville Hall of Fame, CARB Hall of Fame, SMRA XX Hall of Fame, and Missouri Open Wheel Legends Hall of Fame. During his racing career, He collected over 300 feature wins and 20 championship titles, including three IMCA Titles over six decades of racing.

At 8 a.m. Tuesday, Utz took a final lap at the State Fair Speedway. Many friends, fellow racers and family members were there and several with race cars and custom cars as they followed Utz in his hearse.

knew Utz as a hard-driving racer.

"I watched him race, watched him win a lot of races," McCown said. "He had probably the most beautiful car at the racetrack, 'Old Yeller.'"

"A strong guy, a tough guy, he got into several scrapes in racing, and he held his own," McCown recalled. "He might be the most winningest driver at the fairgrounds or one of them, he's in the Knoxville Sprint car Hall of Fame, the Carb Hall of Fame in Kansas City. Bill was a good friend; we had our battles on the racetrack,

2024 GENERAL ELECTION

Missouri Supreme Court rules amendment legalizing abortion will remain on ballot

By Anna Sporre
Missouri Independent

Missourians will have the opportunity to vote to enshrine abortion in the state constitution this November, the Missouri Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

In a decision published less than three hours before the constitutional deadline to remove a question from the ballot, the Supreme Court reversed a lower court's ruling that recommended the measure be stripped from the Nov. 5 ballot.

Secretary of State Jay Ashcroft "shall certify to local election authorities that Amendment 3 be placed on the Nov. 5, 2024, general election ballot and shall take all steps necessary to ensure that it is on said ballot," the judgment read.

The court has not yet issued an opinion.

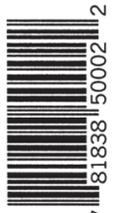

"This fight was not just about this amendment—it was about defending the integrity of the initiative

POLICE REPORTS

Sedalia Police Department Arrests

Sept. 10

10:36 a.m.: Josie Gibbs, 25, of the 2200 block of West Second Street was arrested after officers responded to South State Fair Boulevard and West Fourth Street regarding a motor vehicle crash. Gibbs was determined to be impaired at the time of the crash and was transported to the Sedalia police department, booked and released pending charges of DWI drug — prior offender, leaving the scene of an accident and inhaling — inducing others to inhale solvent fumes.

Sept. 11

8:34 p.m.: Jennifer Leann Richardson, 42, of the 3500 block of Grand Avenue was arrested after an officer responded to the 1700 block of South Grand Avenue regarding a report of the violation of an order of protection. Richardson violated the order after being served and violated it again after driving past the scene while the officer was there. She was stopped by another officer and transported to the Pettis County jail, booked and held for 24 hours pending charges of violating the ex parte order.

Incidents

Sept. 10

6:03 p.m.: Officers responded to Katy park, 2200 South Grand Ave. for a report of a subject recklessly driving through the park. The vehicle fled the area before officers arrived. A report was collected.

6:35 p.m.: A credit card found in the 400 block of West Pettis Street was turned in at the police station. The owner could not be contacted so the card was placed into evidence for safekeeping.

6:44 p.m.: Officers were dispatched to the 1100 block of East Third Street for a report of a theft not in progress. They gathered information from the victim and a report was completed.

10:05 p.m.: Officers were dispatched to the 2300 block of Lewis Circle for a hit and run accident. They gathered information from the victim, documented the damage and completed a report.

Pettis County Sheriff's Office

Arrests

Sept. 1

4:01 a.m.: Elizabeth Meador was arrested after deputies conducted a traffic stop near East 14th Street and South Marvin Avenue for a registration violation. She had no operator's status and gave consent to search the vehicle. Charges are being submitted for second-degree drug trafficking, possession of a controlled substance and no operator's license.

Sept. 10

9:27 p.m.: Jordan C. Filip of Springfield was arrested after deputies were patrolling the area of U.S. Route 65 and South of Third Street and a vehicle passed traveling approximately 100 miles north on US Route 65. Deputies pursued the vehicle until the driver pulled over just south of Rebar Road. Filip was arrested for careless and imprudent driving.

Sept. 11

10:09 p.m.: Brennen Asbridge of Raytown was arrested after a deputy running stationary radar in La Monte on US 50 west of Carroll Road clocked two motorcycles traveling at 87 miles per hour in a 65 miles per hour zone. One motorcyclist pulled over to the shoulder and the other rapidly accelerated eastbound to speeds of 120 miles per hour

The deputy attempted to stop the bike for approximately 2.5 miles before Asbridge stopped. He was taken into custody, transported to the Pettis County jail and placed on a 24-hour hold pending charges of resisting arrest by fleeing — creating substantial risk to the public, and exceeding the speed limit by greater than 26 miles per hour.

Incidents

Sept. 9

9 p.m.: Deputies were dispatched to the 25000 block of Smasal Road in Pettis County for a domestic assault in progress. A man was located on McCormick Road and arrested for DWI by MSHP troopers and transported to Sedalia PD for processing. Charges are being filed for third-degree domestic assault and first-degree property damage.

Missouri State Highway Patrol Arrests

Sept. 9

9:46 p.m.: Vitaliy I. Varvaryuk, 45, of Sedalia was arrested in Pettis County for driving while intoxicated and failure to drive on the right half of the road resulting in a crash. He was transported to the Pettis County jail and released.

Sept. 10

8:29 p.m.: Angela Douglas, 46, of Sedalia was arrested in Pettis County for driving while intoxicated and felony possession of a controlled substance — hydrocodone. She was transported to the Pettis County jail and released.

Final girder placed for new Lance Corporal Leon Deraps I-70 Missouri River Bridge

The last steel girder was placed Wednesday, Sept. 11, marking a major milestone in the construction of the new eastbound Lance Corporal Leon Deraps I-70 Missouri River (Rocheport) Bridge. With the final girder in place, crews will now be able to place cross frames and wind bracing on this final span, and then prepare for pouring the new bridge deck.

In July 2021, the Missouri Highway and Transportation Commission selected the Lunda

Team as the design-build contractor to replace the now-demolished 60-year-old steel truss bridge. The old, single bridge carried two lanes of traffic in each direction and is being replaced with two side-by-side bridges. The new westbound bridge was completed and opened to traffic in July 2023 with both east and westbound traffic shifted onto the new westbound bridge. The old steel truss was removed in September 2023, and construction on the eastbound bridge began immediately afterwards. Each of the new bridges will carry three lanes of traffic, matching up to the goals of the Improve I-70 project to expand Interstate 70 to three lanes, each direction, across the state of Missouri on this vital corridor for our state and our nation.

A ribbon cutting ceremony will be held at the end of the year once the new eastbound bridge is ready to open to traffic.

All work is weather-permitting, and schedules are subject to change.

For more information, visit the project's webpage at <https://www.modot.org/RocheportBridge>.

MoDOT asks all motorists to work with us by buckling up, putting your phone down, obeying all traffic signs, and slowing down and moving over in work zones. Motorists are advised to use extra caution through work zones, obey all traffic signs, and avoid any distractions.

Governor Parson highlights successes of 2024 State Fair

Governor Mike Parson and Missouri State Fair Director Jason Moore announced today that 345,643 visitors attended the annual State Fair in Sedalia, which was held August 8-18, 2024. The Missouri State Fair is the state's largest agriculture showcase, bringing people together each summer from across the state.

"The Missouri State Fair is consistently Summer's Best Story for many families, including ours," Governor Mike Parson said. "Teresa and I love sharing our State Fair stories from year to year, so this theme was fitting for our final fair season as Governor and First Lady. But rest assured, we'll be back next year for more State Fair fun."

In a survey of State Fair attendees, the family-friendly agriculture exhibits and shows, fair food, and the tradition of the Missouri State Fair ranked high on the list of why fairgoers came to the Fair in 2024. The mild temperatures experienced during the early days of the Fair were a bonus, with more than 50,000 individuals in attendance on the first Saturday.

"This year, we told our personal Fair stories and encouraged others to do the same, Missouri State Fair Director Jason Moore said. "We love hearing stories from farm families and fairgoers of how the State Fair is their favorite event of the summer. For many, the Fair is the culmination of a year's worth of hard work, a fun place to gather with friends, and an opportunity to showcase the best Missouri agriculture has to offer."

The carnival midway was a popular destination for Fair guests, with record revenues on the first Saturday and Sunday of the State Fair. Concerts were also an important part of the fairgoer experience this year, with Alabama, Warren Zeiders, and Ludacris coming in as most popular.

Missouri Director of Agriculture Chris Chinn announced that more than 29,000 livestock and competitive entries were exhibited at the 2024 State Fair. Notable increases included a 14 percent increase for 4-H and FFA market livestock entries and a 20 percent increase in boer goat entries.

"The Fair is always an opportunity for my team to celebrate traditions, enjoy the exhibits, and showcase the quality of Missouri agriculture," said Director Chinn. "The Fair wouldn't be what it is today without the support of Governor Parson, and it was bittersweet knowing this was his last Fair as Governor. The Parsons are true champions for Missouri agriculture and the State Fair, and their contributions continue to advance our industry forward."

The Missouri State Fair Commission held the groundbreaking ceremony for a new state-of-the-art indoor arena to be built on the Missouri State Fairgrounds. "I was speechless upon hearing the arena will be named the Governor Michael L. Parson Arena," Governor Parson continued. "Seeing the excitement of the Fair through our children and grandchildren's eyes is special to us, and knowing this arena will display our family name for years to come is truly an honor."

Governor Parson also had the opportunity to select the inaugural Missouri State Fair ice cream flavor, Kingdom Crunchdown, celebrating the Kansas City Chiefs. More than 600 Kingdom Crunchdown treats were sold at Gerken Dairy Center, hosted by

The Viking team hauls equipment and paint buckets up by rope and said the view is fantastic from the tower platform.

"It's pretty nice when the sun comes out," Aguilar said. "And when the sun goes in, beautiful."

The painters have worked all over the country, and don't paint in the winter months as the paint won't dry correctly.

Painter Fidencio 'Chico' Aguilar took a short break to take a breathtaking photo from the east tower to share his bird's-eye view as the workers finished.

The logo project was funded entirely by private donations and no public dollars from the City of Sedalia were used.

"By securing private funding, the city can focus its resources on other critical areas ensuring that our community continues to thrive," the press release continued. "These actions exemplify not only the pride these individuals have in their community, but also their generosity. Their shared attitude of 'What can I do to help?' truly embodies the spirit of community."

The project project was supported by the Sedalia Lions Club, State Fair Lions Club, Sunrise Optimist Club, Noonday Optimist Club, Kiwanis Club, Sedalia Convention & Visitors Bureau, Sedalia Chamber of Commerce, ProEnergy, Presidio, Yeagers Cycle, Callis

"The City of Seda-

Logos and the Sedalia tagline 'Let's Cross Paths' can be seen on both sides of the west tower at 16th Street and Water Tower Road Thursday. Community partners funded the project saving taxpayers from footing the bill.

lia extends its deepest gratitude to those who spearheaded the fund-raising effort and all who contributed; this was truly a community effort," the city press release continued. "Your generosity and commitment have transformed this vision into a reality, and we are proud to share this symbol of unity with everyone who calls Sedalia home."

CONTRIBUTING COLUMN

Old-fashioned fall festivals aren't just a thing of the past

I remember going to a lot of parades as a kid in rural Illinois. In truth, it was probably only one or two a year, but in my memories it seems like they were happening all the time.

For the Calhoun County Fair parade each September, we arrived on the route early and spread an old blanket near the curb for my sister and me. My mother equipped us with a plastic grocery bag.

Then, we waited. There was agonizing, interminable waiting as we squinted down the street, hoping to catch a glimpse of the parade beginning to move.

But we always heard it first. The fire and ambulance sirens wailed to signal the beginning of the parade line, and all the little children up and down the street wailed back and stuffed their fingers in their ears.

After the emergency vehicles passed there were the veterans of the American Legion, slightly round under their crisp white shirts, but still in step after all those years of peace and still incredibly solemn. As the honor guard marched by with the flag, everyone held their hands to their hearts. Men removed their caps.

Then the real fun began. Floats draped in tinsel or papier-mâché, with costumed riders acting out scenes from the theme of that year's fair.

Shiny convertibles carrying glamorous Queen or Princess contestants in sparkling dresses. Snorting horses with real cowboys astride. Vintage tractors chugging along slowly. Shriners in ridiculous little cars. Marching bands with booming drums.

But the best part of all was the candy.

Nearly every vehicle that passed by showered us kids with handfuls of candy. Anyone one who did not was considered a selfish snob or a poor schmuck who did not understand how parades work.

The candy was cheap, in a class of its own that we called generally, "parade candy," but we treasured the suckers and taffies and pieces of bubble gum as if we were getting full-size candy bars. By the end of the parade, our plastic bags stretched under the weight.

Ornery boys had to be threatened not to run into the middle of the road and scoop up the broken remainders of strawberry hard candies and Bits-o-Honey. Everyone's parents told a story of an unfortunate youth who had dashed out in front of a parade car and been run over, but no one ever seemed to be able to confirm that the sordid tale had actually taken place.

Liz Schleicher
Contributing Columnist

Then, as suddenly as it began, the parade was over. We sat in the backseat of the car and ran our fingers through our piles of sweets as if they were gold, preparing to barter with siblings and friends.

By the time I had moved to Missouri and had my own children, I had filed my parade memories away as a unique experience of the 90s that was not coming back, like Crystal Pepsi or feathered bangs.

I had tried the State Fair parade, but it was not the same. Too big, too distant from the crowd, not enough small-town joy. So imagine my shock when I moved to Green Ridge and found the fall festival I'd been pining for since the last time I unwrapped an ice cream taffy in 1999.

The Green Ridge Fall Festival has everything I cherish about a small-town celebration.

Affordable games that my children can play for hours without draining their pocket money. Delicious food. Pie. Auctions. A Prince and Princess contest. Booths to shop for handmade crafts and snacks. And best of all, a parade. A good, old-fashioned parade with shiny cars and horses, a marching band and candy.

I'm too old now to run around and catch packets of Skittles, but I am glad to be able to carry on the tradition of spreading a blanket on the grass for my children, giving them a couple of worn-out Walmart bags and warning them sternly about that kid who once got run over while dashing for a peppermint in the middle of the street. Some things never change. And that's a good thing.

I encourage all of you to come out to Green Ridge and visit a classic Missouri fall festival. It's Saturday, Sept. 14, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The parade starts at 10.

Anxiety first, excitement next

As I sit at my computer, my mind is cascading, but my fingers are frozen. Okay, not frozen. After all, words are appearing on the page, and they didn't get there by mental telepathy.

I feel like a five-year-old who knows that next week, she will be in Disney World. Sleep? Fleeting. Thoughts? Cascading. I know I already said that, but they are. So much is going on, but it's really only one thing. This is the last column I will write before heading across the pond for a couple of weeks.

When next you read my words, you will be hearing about something in Barcelona or Bordeaux. Most likely, that "something" will be food or wine.

Surprisingly, nothing has gone wrong. I'm not sick. Our passports are in the new purse I bought specifically to hold our passports in safety. We got the newest Covid booster.

I've laid out several pieces of clothing, maximizing the number of outfits while minimizing the number of pieces. I bought a new pair of Dr. Scholl's lace-up walking shoes, although I admit I look like a senior citizen tourist when I'm shuffling along in them. At least I don't have a fanny pack. Emily would be horribly embarrassed.

The house is generally clean. Hue the Cat will have a new babysitter, as her favorite, Lisa, has decided to retire, making that decision without consulting Hue, and I'm just hoping it works out. I picked up my jeans from Natalia, who hemmed them because I'm short.

We're cleaning out the refrigerator so we don't find science projects upon our return. The cat food dispenser is full. I've packed all my senior citizen medications for every day we will be gone and a few extra, just in case our flight is, horror of horrors, canceled! I'm making a list of everything I pack so I bring it all home.

Is it any wonder I'm stressed?

Regardless, at the back of my mind lurks, along with anxiety, the idea that this is going to be exciting, an experience of a lifetime. Wish us luck.

I cannot let this week pass without paying tribute to one of the nicest men I have ever met. John Lange died after a summer of heart issues that just would not go away. John and I met through mutual friends, and when it was time to build our backyard pergola, I just knew that John was the one to do it.

I asked him, and he demurred. But I wouldn't give up. I had seen some of his work, and I had seen his integrity and honesty. I begged. Finally, he agreed. But he was going to do the work in his shop, and not in our back yard. I wasn't sure about this, but because John said it would work, I trusted that it would.

A bricklayer created the pillars of the pergola; our "yard guy" genius, Dennis Alkire, put the floor down by doing something that looks like brick or stone but is really concrete and John worked on the criss-cross roof in the garage.

We had scheduled an engagement party for a Saturday in June, and because 100 people were coming, the party had to be outdoors, so the pergola had to be finished.

The day before the party, John called and said the roof was ready. An easy drizzle cooled the air when he pulled up with his truck full of pieces of redwood that had been cut like a puzzle to be put together. When finished, the whole thing would look like a really big tic-tac-toe game.

To complicate things, Max and I were supposed to be at the Broadway Presbyterian choir end-of-year party in Green Ridge by 6 p.m. that day. Max didn't get there, though. He was John's "sous chef," doing whatever was needed to help John assemble the pergola roof.

But the pergola was put together, and the pieces fit like a glove.

The next day, 100 people congregated in our back yard and many commented on the pergola's beauty. I smiled. I knew it would be beautiful.

John had said so.

Rest in peace, honorable, wonderful friend.

My dreams then and now

This morning when I woke up, I vaguely remembered a dream about my childhood that I had during the night, and it made me think about how different my dreams are now when compared to the ones I had when I was a kid.

I do still dream about girls the way I did in my younger days, but now they are mostly grandmother types, which seems right given my age. Some of the dreams I had as a boy were scary as I recall, and my mother always said it was my conscience working in my dreams because of something bad I did that day, like tease my sister.

I still have scary dreams, but since I no longer have the capacity to do anything that would warrant bad dreams they are not as intense as my childhood ones.

Jack Miller
Guest Columnist

For some reason, my bad dreams now are usually about me being lost or being desperate to get somewhere in a hurry, and I never seem to know where I am going.

I have heard people say they never have bad dreams, and I am skeptical about those claims, how could anyone be that good? I personally do not mind dreaming if it is a good one, because sometimes old friends and family members who have passed on will show up in the dream and I feel like I have had a visit with them when I wake up.

I wish my dreams could be like those I see in movies or a soap opera; those dreams look just like the person is awake, and they usually make sense.

My dreams are a jumble of scenes that can have me doing unreal things like flying or running, both would be impossible for me now.

The worst dreams I have are the ones where I am running around naked trying to find my clothes. I also have one that people who served in the armed forces can relate to. In the dream I am late for muster, and I am running around frantically trying to find my hat or some other part of my uniform.

I wonder what those people who interpret dreams would make of those dreams? I can sometimes wake myself up if I am having a bad dream but when I am having a good one that gets interrupted at a good part, I try to go back to sleep right away in the hope that the dream will continue, it never works.

If dreams indeed have meaning I would love to know what some of mine mean, like the one that has me in the middle of a junk yard with no clothes on, or the dream I had just last night that had my wife and I in the navy together mixed up with us wrapping Christmas gifts, that last part may be my wife fault; she starts to worry about Christmas in July.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Offering a rebuttal to responses

Dear Editor:

Deborah Mitchell's column and Virginia Kehoe's letter to the editor in the Sept. 6 issue of the Sedalia Democrat addressed only abortions that are done for medical reasons or in hard cases.

They left out the overwhelming reason why abortions are done.

The Guttmacher Institute, the world's leading pro-abortion research group, looked into why women get abortions. It found that only 1% to 3% were for medical reasons. Well over 90 percent were done because the pregnancy was inconvenient.

Federal officials say there's no sign bird flu is spreading among humans, despite Missouri case

By Jennifer Shutt

States Newsroom

WASHINGTON — Public health officials are still trying to determine how a Missouri resident contracted bird flu without having any contact with infected animals, but said Thursday there is no evidence of human-to-human transmission taking place in small enclaves or in a more widespread manner.

The Missouri case marked the 14th person to contract highly pathogenic avian influenza, or H5N1, this year amid ongoing outbreaks among poultry and dairy cattle, though it marks the first time someone without contact to those animals was diagnosed with the virus.

Nirav Shah, principal deputy director at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, said on a call with reporters the “evidence points to this being a one-off case, and those do happen with novel influenza.”

“Thus far, we have not seen any evidence of unusual levels of influenza activity in the area where this individual resides,” Shah said during the hour-long briefing. “There have been no increases in the volume of visits to emergency departments for influenza and no increase in laboratory detections of influenza cases in Missouri more broadly.”

The state's public health laboratory, he said, is subtyping all positive cases of Influenza A, following the CDC recommending ongoing detailed surveillance this spring.

The practice is how doctors and public health officials confirmed this case and would likely be how they diagnose any uptick in cases in the future in the “overwhelming” number states that are taking the extra step of subtyping, he said.

There are several types of influenza virus that are classified by the letters A, B, C and D. The viruses within the influenza A category are further categorized or subtyped based on the proteins hemagglutinin (H) and neuraminidase (N). There are at least 130 combinations of subtypes within Influenza A, according to the CDC.

“So here's the bottom line, our influenza surveillance system is designed to find needles in haystacks,” Shah said. “And as this case and others show, it is working. And here, in this case, we found such a needle, but we don't know how it got there.”

The Missouri patient, who has significant underlying medical conditions, was admitted to a hospital on Aug. 22 after presenting to health care providers with “acute symptoms of chest pain, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and weakness,” according to the CDC. The patient is not being identified out of privacy concerns.

The Missouri Department of Health and Senior Services announced the diagnosis on Sept. 4, as did the CDC in a separate statement.

Missouri DHSS noted the patient had recovered and been sent home from the hospital, while the CDC pointed out that the state has reported cases of H5N1 in commercial and backyard poultry flocks this year.

The patient hadn't been in contact with any livestock or poultry and didn't indicate in a detailed questionnaire that they had consumed any food products, like raw milk, that could have potentially transmitted the virus.

Shah said on the call that public health officials are technically classifying this as a case of H5 and not H5N1 as they work to sequence the virus more fully, though that might not be possible.

The CDC has begun classifying the virus' genetic sequence, but since the patient's viral RNA levels were “extremely low” the agency may not be “able to generate a full flu genome, including the neuraminidase or the N part of the virus,” he said.

“We're throwing everything we've got at this, but ultimately a full sequence may not be technically feasible because of the low concentration of viral RNA,” Shah said. “The data that we do have and that have been generated thus far show an H5 virus that is closely related to the (H5N1) virus circulating among dairy cows.”

The CDC, he said, is “continuing to look for evidence of genetic changes that would suggest, for example, an increased potential for spread.” None have yet been found.

Demetre Daskalakis, director of the National Center for Immunization and Respiratory Diseases at CDC, said the risk to the general public from bird flu remains low.

“We assess risk continuously with every case and with every sort of change, and we continue to look at it as low,” Daskalakis said. “If there are changes, we would reassess that risk in real time.”

While the CDC investigation is ongoing, Shah said the further out from the case public health officials get without seeing any new diagnosis, the less likely they become.

“We are beyond the typical 10-day window for transmission,” Shah said. “And so with each passing day, the likelihood of this being something that's happening deep underwater goes down.”

petition process and ensuring that Missourians can shape their future directly,” Rachel Sweet, campaign manager for Missourians for Constitutional Freedom, the campaign behind the amendment, said in a statement.

In a lawsuit filed late last month, a number of anti-abortion lawmakers and activists sued Missouri Secretary of State Jay Ashcroft for certifying Amendment 3 for the ballot.

The suit was brought forward by state Sen. Mary Elizabeth Coleman, state Rep. Hannah Kelly, anti-abortion activist Kathy Forck and shelter operator Marguerite Forrest who in a statement Tuesday said the Supreme Court “turned a blind eye” in its ruling.

“The fight continues against the vile forces who have no regard for innocent life,” they wrote.

On the eve of the Supreme Court hearing, Ashcroft announced he was decertifying the measure, a potentially unprecedented attempt to rescind his previous decision in an attempt to block the measure from the ballot.

The Supreme Court judges said Ashcroft missed his statutory deadline to change his mind.

“Respondent Ashcroft certified the petition as sufficient prior to that deadline, and any action taken to change that decision weeks after the statutory deadline expired is a nullity and of no effect,” the judges wrote.

Amendment 3 — which had been stripped from the Secretary of State's website on Monday — was again listed under 2024 ballot measures as of 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

In order to get a citizen-led Amendment on the ballot, the campaign behind the measure must first collect enough signatures from six of Missouri's eight congressional districts. When asked for signatures, state law requires that the amendment be attached in full.

The initiative petition circulated by Missourians for Constitutional Freedom did not include any current law that would be repealed, the issue at the crux of the lower court's ruling.

There is also a section of state law that requires initiative petitions “include all sections of existing law or of the constitution which would be repealed by the measure.”

Attorneys for Missourians for Constitutional Freedom have said the amendment would not repeal the state's current abortion law or take it off the books. Instead, they said, it would create a new law that would supersede much of the existing one because not every element of the current law would be rendered moot, including laws protecting women who get abortions from prosecution.

And, they added, anything that falls under the scope of the amendment would be left to the judicial system to interpret.

Cole County Circuit Judge Christopher Limbaugh did not agree. On Friday he ruled that the campaign did not meet the sufficiency requirement through a “failure to include any statute or provision that will be repealed, especially when many of these statutes are apparent.”

While Limbaugh recommended the amendment be taken off the ballot, he ultimately left the decision up to a higher court.

Four days later, the Supreme Court ultimately ruled in favor of Missourians for Constitutional Freedom.

“What this decision really says today is that we deserve to be on the ballot,” said Tori Schafer, an attorney with the ACLU of Missouri, which is part of the coalition behind the amendment. “That people deserve to make this decision for themselves.”

If passed on Nov. 5, the amendment would go into effect 30 days later. At that point, Schafer said there will likely be a series of legal challenges to clarify what the amendment means.

“But it's very clear that when the amendment goes into effect, our state's total abortion ban is over,” Schafer said.

The amendment reads in part: “The government shall not deny or infringe upon a person's fundamental right to reproductive freedom, which is the right to make and carry out decisions about all matters relating to reproductive health care.”

Abortion is illegal in Missouri with limited exceptions for medical emergencies. If the amendment passes by a simple majority, it would legalize abortion up until the point of fetal viability and protect other reproductive rights, including birth control.

Mary Catherine Martin, an attorney with the Thomas More Society who argued the case on behalf of the plaintiffs, called the Supreme Court's decision a “failure to protect voters.”

“We implore Missourians to research and study the text and effects of Amendment 3 before going to the voting booth,” she said in a statement.

Forck, one of the plaintiffs, was among a handful of anti-abortion activists who remained outside the Supreme Court building once a decision came down.

“We are resolved firmly to let the people of Missouri know exactly how insidious this Amendment 3 is,” she said, later adding: “This is a very slippery slope.”

The Missouri Republican Party called the ruling “devastating.”

“This ruling marks the most dangerous threat to Missouri's pro-life laws in our state's history,” the party said in a statement Tuesday.

“Make no mistake—this amendment, bankrolled by radical out-of-state interest groups, is a direct assault on Missouri families and the values we hold dear.”

So far, Missourians for Constitutional Freedom has raised more than $15 million for the campaign, including seven-figure donations from national groups whose funders are not listed, including the Fairness Project.

With the general election only eight weeks away, Democratic candidates drew on news of the Supreme Court decision to call on supporters.

“Voters will overturn Missouri's cruel ban that has zero exceptions for rape and incest,” Crystal Quade, the Democratic nominee for governor, said in a statement. “And they deserve a governor who will protect the will of voters and the rights of every Missourian.”

Lucas Kuncie, the Democrat running against incumbent U.S. Sen. Josh Hawley, took an opportunity to call out Hawley's opposition to Amendment 3.

“The lies and lawfare,” Kuncie said, “used by Josh Hawley and his allies to try to block a citizen-led effort to end their total abortion ban have failed.”

Some of those businesses and organizations included Pit Stop Café, Quality Body Shop, State Fair Towing, Real Estate property, State Fair Amoco, Shel-Rae Dairy Cup (Ice-Crème and Sandwich Shoppe), 65 Speedway, and Central MO Speedway.

Pall bearer Raymond 'Heavy' McNish traveled to many races across the country with Utz.

"Just a very, very good man, he had a certain way that he did things," McNish said. "He had a very successful operation, won a lot of races and got into some hall of fames. I got along very good with him, he said, 'No matter whether we win or lose when we're out traveling we'll eat steak, but I will not leave to go to a race with a dirty car or one that we have to work on. ... He was a family man too. Very rarely did we ever go out and hit the bars or whatever."

Utz also told McNish to never answer the door if someone knocked at night.

"We was there to race," McNish said. "He didn't want everybody in the room trying to party and everything."

Utz's greatest success was not his professional achievements, but his role as a devoted husband, father, grandfather, and great-grandfather. He was a good friend and a hero to many.

Leo Dick was waiting for Utz's hearse to arrive Tuesday while sharing stories of his friend.

"I knew him when he first got married," Dick said. "He's a great guy, a lot of fun. He'd tell you the way it was. His wife was the same. I'd pull down on this track and when she pointed at you, you better get where you're supposed to be in line."

Robert Smith knew Utz as a 'fantastic guy' and traveled with him on the racing circuit for four years.

"He had the Pit Stop Café," Smith recalled. "He had the heart of a racer; you didn't hardly find anybody around Sedalia that didn't know Bill. Last night's visitation went on for hours. He was just a great racer, you know? He traveled the country."

Robert Smith's brother, David, also had warm memories of the race car driver and businessman.

"Bill put Sedalia on the map as far as racing," David Smith said, "If you were going to Sedalia you were going to have to contend with Bill Utz. He won every race out here in '73 during the fair, he won every one of them, and he beat the big boys several times.

That's back when the Andretti's and everyone were on the dirt in their champ cars. He had more laps here than anybody. I'm proud to know the guy, I'm more proud that he knew me."

Ernie Walker said Utz could be ornery at times.

"But a lot of fun and a hard charger," Walker said. "A good racer, put it that way."

City councilman Bob Hiller said he, Utz's wife Joy and Bob Baker came up with the D.A.R.E.

program back in 1990 and Utz was very supportive of the drug resistance effort.

"He was a racer's racer," Hiller said, "and the biggest thing is there was nobody he didn't know. If you needed help, he'd help you, whether it was physically helping you or giving you some advice."

Utz's daughter, Michelle Muths, was caught by surprise by the dozens of racers and friends waiting at the Speedway for Utz's final lap around the track he loved.

"I don't even have words, the outpouring of love that we have received is just unimaginable," Muths said. "We thought we were bringing dad for his final lap, didn't know any of this was taking place. My heart is full."

With all the racers on hand to pay homage to Utz, his daughter reminded them he was so much more than just a great racer.

"That was his life, but he was so much more than just a racer," Muths said through tears. "The dad, the husband, the grandpa, the great grandpa. His great grandkids are his absolute world, it's just unreal, I'm out of words."

In addition to his daughters, Bill is also survived by five grandsons, William Tyler Utz (Allison), Justin Blake Pripusich, Zachary Taylor Pinkelton, Trevor Joseph "TJ" Muths, and James Pinkelton; three granddaughters, Chelsey Lynn Rowland (Zac), Heather Pinkelton, Lindsey Beukema(Thomas); four great-grandchildren, Brooklynn-Renee' Utz, William Utz, Hunter Daniels, Avery Muths, Cooper Muths, Arizona Rowland, Haddie Rowland, Emmie Rowland; and several nieces and nephews.

Utz was buried at Bethlehem Baptist Cemetery in Sedalia.

Lincoln volleyball hosts first match in new gym

By Jack Denebeim
jackd@sedaliademocrat.com

LINCOLN — As she took the court Monday, Sept. 9, Lincoln junior Rebekah Helland knew it would be a moment to remember.

“We’re a part of history,” Helland said. “It’s crazy. I never would have thought it would happen in small-town, Missouri.”

Helland and the Lady Cardinals hosted the first-ever event in the school’s new gym Monday.

“It’s special. It’s really cool,” head coach Gabbi Spunaugle said. “We are very fortunate that we are the first ones to be able to do that... What more could you ask for? We love it here. It’s awesome.”

The new gym was part of a project that broke ground in March of 2023 and was totally completed Aug. 1, 2024.

The gym itself was completed in June and seats approximately 820 people.

The project also brought a new weight room, new locker rooms, a computer lab, an art room and preschool to the school district.

In total, the project cost $7.5 million, with $6.3 million being generated through a no tax increase bond issue voters rolled over in the fall of 2022, according to superintendent Kevin Smith.

“This is my hometown,” Smith said. “I graduated here in 1993 and so just to see something that’s going to continue to give back to the kids for many years to come is very satisfying and rewarding to all of us.”

Spunaugle said she and the Lady Cardinals have been reaping the benefits of the new gym all summer and to start the fall.

“In practice, we can run two nets, which last year we could not,” Spunaugle said. “The ceiling is a lot higher. We love that. The girls love that especially. It’s so cool for our community, not just for volleyball or any of the other sports, to be able to have this as a resource for us. It’s going to be huge in the next coming years.”

The Lady Cardinals definitely wanted to show out in the first match on the new court, but came up short against Chilhowee (3-1), losing in four sets 23-25, 25-20, 19-25 and 23-25.

Spunaugle said the effort was there, but when the pressure turned up, the Lady Cardinals were just thinking too much.

“They played hard,” Spunaugle said. “I think when the pressure got up to make sure we finalized a set, they got in their heads a little bit, and that kind of determines if you’re going to push and win or if you’re going to let somebody else get in your head. I’m very proud of the way they played though.”

It looked like the Lady Cardinals were going to force a winner-takes-all fifth set, as they led late in the fourth set 23-18.

However, Chilhowee rattled off seven straight points to take the set and, ultimately, the match.

“I think our momentum just dropped,” Helland said. “I mean, we were going up and up, and then we just fell off a cliff. Not much you can do after that.”

The Lady Cardinals built a 17-12 lead in the fourth set thanks to aces from senior Alyssa Mellen, kills by senior Braylin Paxton and junior Cadence Harvey, and a block by Helland.

LADY TIGERS SWEEP CALIFORNIA TO ESTABLISH RHYTHM

By Jack Denebeim
jackd@sedaliademocrat.com

The Smith-Cotton volleyball team feels it has found its rhythm.

The Lady Tigers earned their second win of the season Tuesday, Sept. 10, in a sweep of California 25-18, 25-22 and 26-24.

“We’re doing a lot better,” senior Addison Lyles said. “It took us a minute, but we got there.”

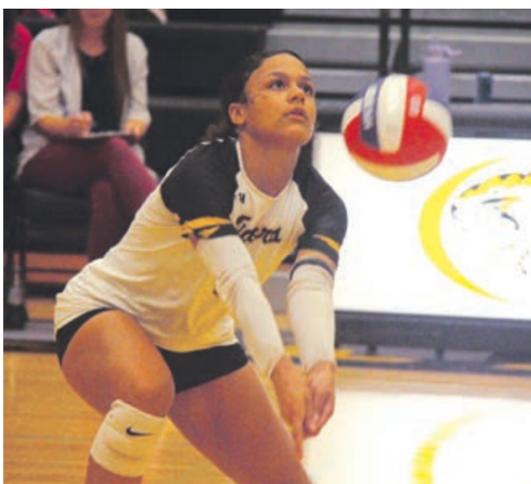

Even though they won in straight sets, every set was a battle for the Lady Tigers.

Head coach Emily Ruckman said the team was able to overcome that adversity by minimizing mistakes.

“The runs that we got with mistakes, we only let two or three happen, and then we turned it right back around to our side,” Ruckman said. “I’m extremely proud of them.”

The Lady Tigers’ most exciting win came in the final set.

Smith-Cotton got off to a slow start in the set, allowing California to take a 20-17 lead.

Then, the Lady Tigers put together three straight points, highlighted by a nice dig by junior Alle Case and kill by Lyles, to tie the set up at 20.

The Lady Pintos took a 24-23 lead, though, which forced Ruckman to call a timeout.

“Just relax, take big, deep breaths,” Ruckman said on what she told the team during the timeout. “Just keep your composure. We had a lot of really quick back and forth [points], so I just wanted to give them a second so they could really give it their all for those last three points.”

SNYDER HITS WALK-OFF HOMER TO COMPLETE COMEBACK

By Jack Denebeim
jackd@sedaliademocrat.com

Junior Addison Snyder was the hero of the night for the Smith-Cotton softball team Wednesday, Sept. 11.

With the game tied 6-6 in the bottom of the seventh, Snyder blasted a three-run home run to center field to lift the Lady Tigers over Boonville.

The walk-off winner completed a late-game comeback for S-C, as the Lady Tigers found themselves down 5-1 after four innings.

The team sparked a three-run fifth inning to cut the deficit to 5-4 thanks to back-to-back doubles by seniors Miley Rathmann and Jennifer Bowman.

Terry Noland Football Office Complex rededicated at Central Missouri

Facility modernized with alumni support

By Joe Andrews

joea@warrensburgstarjournal.com

WARRENSBURG — Former Mules football head coach Terry Noland's commitment to the program was celebrated during a rededication ceremony unveiling the renovated Terry Noland Football Office Complex on Saturday, Sept. 7.

The complex's completion ends a project that spanned more than 15 years. Fundraising efforts first began in 2009, while the complex was dedicated in Noland's name in 2012. The years following were composed of a fundraising project to bring a modernized space for coach offices along with meeting spaces.

Central Missouri Vice President for Advancement and External Engagement/Executive Director for the UCM Alumni Foundation Courtney Goddard noted the facility was the first project she oversaw when she joined the university in 2018.

"It took a lot of people, a lot of dedication and a lot of time," Goddard said of the project.

"There was a very special group that organized this called Mules Football Brothers for Life. I'll never forget a conversation I had with Paul Kaiser right around two years ago. We thought this project was dead ... It could not have happened without the more than 80 donors, the president of the university Roger Best and that entire group coming together."

Noland coached football at UCM from 1983-1996, leading the team to four MIAA titles, including the program's first since 1926 in 1986.

He coached 15 All-Americans, holds the program record for tenure as a coach and sent nine players to the professional ranks.

"It's really overwhelming to have something named in your honor," Noland said. "It would be tremendous if it was solely my grave ... When I first got started, the boosters, the people that had restaurants, car dealerships and banks, you name it, they bought in and helped us establish something that we had not had. They continue to do that until this day. The coaches that we had, the coaches we had were dynamic."

Noland said the football offices were originally a storage unit for kitchen tables, chairs and dishwashers.

The building eventually became a place for the team to meet on a regular basis.

"It was nice to have this facility, new locker room facilities for the team," Noland said. "Due to the boosters that we had, we couldn't have got it done on the field without the amazing players that we had throughout our careers. Some of them have come back and continue to give. They gave us their time and effort, they've gave more than that at this time."

The Terry Noland football offices are much more than Noland's name. Inside the lobby, there is a plaque that bares the name of each person that contributed to the project.

Meeting spaces within the facility also hold the name of supporters to the project.

The list includes the Neuen-schwander Family Lobby, named after 1994-97 linebacker David Neuen-schwander; the Mule Ball Brother For Life Lounge in honor of 1989-92 linebacker Joe Grubb; the Glaunert Family Defensive Coordinator and Linebacker Office, named after 1986-1989 linebacker Paul Glaunert; the Scott and Christine Taylor Office in honor of 1985-88 kicker

Scott Taylor; the Hewitt Family Defensive Back Office in honor of 1984-1987 defensive back and 1988-95 assistant coach Mark Hewitt; the Rick Moyer Offensive and Running Back meeting room, in honor of 1998-2001 running back Rick Moyer; and The Scott and Kerri Loveland, in honor of 1981-1984 quarterback Scott Loveland.

"It's not very often that humans get complexes named after them," Central Missouri head coach Josh Lamberson said. "One of my first experiences meeting Coach Noland, I got to see first hand how his players reacted to his presence. They were so grateful for the tough love, I think that's a good word; the compassion, the guidance and the leadership Coach Noland displayed in their early formative years of life ... The way they would approach Coach Noland, the way they would hug Coach Noland, their admiration and love that they had in their eyes when they embraced, is something I admire. I want my players to come and have that same relationship those young men have with Coach Noland."

Central Missouri Vice President for Intercollegiate Athletics Matt Howdeshell said the updated facility will serve as an advantage to the football student athletes.

"This renovation project is our way of putting opportunity in action," Howdeshell said.

"The completed overhaul of this space incorporates the addition of coaches offices, position meeting rooms, a reception area and much more creating an impactful first impression for recruits, and a home for our current Mules football student athletes. These much needed upgrades provide the resources and space to impact and empower our student athletes to perform at their best both on and off the field."

The renovation project was first approved by the University of Central Missouri Board of Governors in August 2023.

Construction began following the completion of the 2023 season. Coaches spent the spring and summer working in the Walton Stadium press box while the renovation project was completed.

It was completed by Infinity Group LLC out of Oak Grove.

"I am so proud and thankful this recognition has been provided," Noland said. "The Noland name will go on established with Central Missouri. My proudest coaching moment was to be here with the coaches, the young men and the many boosters that we have. I want it to go and move forward. I leave this knowing we're going to have success here."

Noland closed the ceremony with a Muleball echo cheer.

"Muleball," Noland said before awaiting a response from the crowd. "Muleball. Muleball. Victory."

Senior Sophia Carney said the late timeout was huge in closing out the set.

"I think our coach really helps ground us when we are tense," Carney said. "She really helps us stay grounded."

Out of the timeout, Case earned a point with a massive kill to force a win-by-two.

Then, Case got another kill to give the Lady Tigers a 25-24 lead before she put down the final point to secure the win.

Lyles had no doubt her teammate would be able to finish it off.

"I wasn't scared when she went up to hit that last one," Lyles said. "Like, usually when it's that close, you're scared to watch them hit it."

Case led the team with 13 kills and 30 digs on the night.

Lyles tacked on eight kills, 14 digs and an ace, while Carney had five kills and contributed to the team's nine blocks.

Junior Piper Cantrell led the team from the serving line with six aces.

The second set was similar to the third set in that the Lady Tigers started the game slow, but ended up coming back to get the win.

The Lady Tigers began the set down 4-0, but climbed back to take a 12-11 lead, forcing California to call a timeout.

Carney came out of the timeout accounting for three of the next four points to give S-C a 16-12 lead.

Then, Lyles got an ace and senior Lennon Adams recorded a kill to help the Lady Tigers claim the set.

However, Lyles said establishing momentum in the first set was key to getting the next two.

"It was very important," Lyles said. "We have to play fast and we picked it up a lot at the end."

The Lady Tigers started the night with an 11-3 lead in the first set thanks to points from Adams, Cantrell, senior Shaylin Wooster and junior Taylor Pinkel.

The Lady Pintos made a push late in the set with five straight points to make it 19-14, but a kill by Case and back-to-back aces from Cantrell helped put away the set and get things going for the Lady Tigers on the night.

With the win, the Lady Tigers improve to 2-2 on the season after starting 0-2. The team defeated Father Tolton Regional Catholic in four sets — 25-18, 25-16, 19-25 and 26-24 — to pick up its first win of the season in the home opener Monday, Sept. 9.

Carney said the two straight wins shows the Lady Tigers have found a groove, and she believes they can keep it going.

"I think we'll be able to carry it through the season, too," Carney said. "Hopefully, we'll get some more wins on the board and this is just the start."

The Lady Tigers traveled to Clinton Thursday, Sept. 12, after press deadline.

The team will compete in the Husker Spikefest in Higginsville Saturday, Sept. 14.

Smith-Cotton's next home match is against Rock Bridge Thursday, Sept. 19.

Boonville tacked on a run in the top of the sixth inning to take a 6-4 lead, but senior Eleanor Holiway answered in the bottom half of the inning with an RBI-double.

Sophomore pitcher Mia Ross prevented Boonville from scoring in the top of the seventh with a one-two-three inning.

Then, Bowman led off the bottom of the seventh with a single and stole second base to bring up sophomore Lily Routon, who reached on an error that allowed Bowman to score and tie the game.

After freshman Bella Blackaby reached on a single, Snyder stepped up to the plate and cleared the bases with her walk-off home run to earn the Lady Tigers the 9-6 victory.

Snyder's home run was her only hit, but she drove in four runs on the night.

The win is the Lady Tigers' fourth straight and improves them to 6-2 on the season.

The team played Marshall Thursday, Sept. 12, after the Democrat's press deadline.

Smith-Cotton's next home game is at 5 p.m. Monday, Sept. 16, against Helias Catholic.

S-C earns wins at Sedalia Duals

The Smith-Cotton boys swim and dive team picked up five wins in its first home meet of the season Wednesday, Sept. 11.

The Tigers got wins over Capital City (98.50-52.50), Warrensburg (95-70), Jefferson City (104-17), Marshall (96-81) and Columbia Independent (105-10).

The team only lost to Missouri Military Academy 145-91.

"Our first home meet of the season couldn't have gone much better," head coach Sam Yewell said in a statement. "Everyone had stellar races, and the new PRs and state consideration times were icing on the cake."

The 200-meter medley relay team of Clayton Tankersley, Aiden Scholl, Adam Rowe and Talon Newell took first place in their race with an improved state consideration time of 1:54.07.

The group also placed second in the 200m freestyle race with a state consideration time of 1:41.61.

Individually, Tankersley took first in the 100m backstroke with a personal-best time of 1:06.15. He also took second in the 200m individual medley with a PR time of 2:26.85.

Scholl won the 50m freestyle race and 100m breaststroke with state consideration times of 23.59 and 1:06.63, respectively.

Rowe won the 100m freestyle race with a mark of 54.54, a personal-best.

For the dive team, Xadrian McGruder placed first with 170.95 points, while Matthew McCoy placed second with 113.85 points.

The teams also competed at the Lee's Summit Duals Tuesday, Sept. 10.

The biggest highlights from this meet were Tankersley, Scholl, Rowe and Newell taking first place in the 200m freestyle relay with a time of 1:45.94.

Scholl also took first place in the 100m backstroke with a time of 1:01.90.

McCoy set a PR with 135 points in his second six-dive meet of the season, which earned him third place. McGruder scored 165 points and took second.

It's a busy week for the Tigers, as the teams travel to Belton for the Belton Invitational Friday, Sept. 13, and Saturday, Sept. 14.

S-C tennis matches last season's win total

The Smith-Cotton girls tennis team has earned two wins this week against Jefferson City and Clinton to bring their record to 4-3 on the season.

Against Jefferson City Tuesday, Sept. 10, five Lady Tigers won their singles matches, while Natalie and Gretchen Beard, and Mia Marin and Emily Chernish picked up wins in the doubles to help Smith-Cotton take the meet 7-2.

Then, on Wednesday, Sept. 11, the Lady Tigers swept Clinton 9-0 in dominant fashion.

Gretchen Beard, Anna Carney, Citlalli Nava and Chernish each swept their singles matches 8-0, while Natalie Beard won her match 8-1 and Marin won her's 8-2.

In the doubles, the Beard sisters and Carney and Nava took their matches 8-1, while Marin and Chernish won their match 8-2.

The team took on Osage after the Democrat's Thursday press deadline.

The Lady Tigers play at Rock Bridge Tuesday, Sept. 17, before coming home (Liberty Park) to play Hickman Wednesday, Sept. 18.

Smith-Cotton boys soccer loses to Warrensburg

Smith-Cotton boys soccer lost to Warrensburg 3-2 on Tuesday, Sept. 10, at the Warrensburg Activities Complex.

The loss ended S-C's 16-game winning streak in the matchup dating back to 2013.

S-C (2-3) initially led 2-0. It scored less than 30 seconds into the match through a goal from senior Nolan Hendrix. Hendrix added another goal 10 minutes later through a header.

Smith-Cotton proceeded to give up three unanswered goals, arriving through a goal from Warrensburg junior Hunter Wallace off an assist from senior Carlos Escobar in the 22nd minute, a penalty kick from Escobar in the 27th minute and a goal from Escobar in the 39th minute.

The Tigers played Blue Springs South after deadline Thursday, Sept. 12.

Sacred Heart volleyball drops home opener

The Sacred Heart volleyball team lost to Concordia in its home opener Monday, Sept. 9, 21-25, 18-25 and 21-25.

Freshman Addison Figge led the team with 11 kills and 10 digs, while senior Avery Eppele had 16 assists on the night.

The Lady Gremlins played Sweet Springs Wednesday, Sept. 11, but a final score was not recorded before deadline. The team played Tipton at home Thursday, Sept. 12, after deadline as well.

Sacred Heart will be on the road for the coming weeks with their next home match being Oct. 2 against Santa Fe.

Lady Bulldogs take first at Russellville Quad

The Stover girls golf team placed first at the Russellville nine-hole Quad Monday, Sept. 9, with a score of 181.

Junior Mia Rowland led the Lady Bulldogs by finishing first, shooting a personal-best score of 39.

Senior Brooklyn Black took second with PR of 41, while junior Ava Hodges shot a 50 to place fourth.

Senior Madison Finkbine finished in fifth with a 51.

Other Results

Smithton boys soccer defeated Knob Noster 2-1 to start the Smithton Soccer Classic with a win.

La Monte boys soccer is also competing in the Smithton Soccer Classic and earned an 8-0 win over Iberia thanks to four goals from Carter Breshears.

The Tigers and Vikings faced off Thursday after press deadline.

The State Fair Community College archery team competed in its first-ever Thursday.

Helland tacked on a kill, while sophomore Emarie Eckhoff had a block to get the lead to 23-18, but then Chilhowee went on its run to close out the match.

“We always talk about not playing to lose, we want to play to win,” Spunaugle said. “I think in this instance we kind of stepped back and played safe.”

With the excitement of playing in the new gym, though, Lincoln got off to a good start in the first set, taking a 6-1 lead and forcing Chilhowee to call an early timeout.

Helland had an ace, while Mellen and junior Camryn Smallwood had kills to get the team going.

The Lady Indians hung around, however, as they scored five straight points late in the set to take it 25-23.

Despite losing the first set, Smallwood said it was important to come out strong.

“Our momentum is everything,” Smallwood said. “We play good when it’s high.”

The team’s energy carried over to the second set where Smallwood made some critical plays to get the set victory.

Smallwood had back-to-back kills to break a 16-16 tie and then served two straight aces to close out the set.

“I wanted to try and serve it to the left side because I saw it was more open,” Smallwood said about her aces. “It paid out. It felt good.”

Chilhowee regained control of the match in the third set, as the Lady Indians never trailed in the set.

Then, the Lady Indians staged their fourth set comeback to earn the win.

Nevertheless, the Lady Cardinals picked up their first win in the new gym and of the season Wednesday, Sept. 11, against Lakeland in straight sets 25-10, 25-16 and 25-23.

Lincoln plays in its new home once again at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 16, against St. Paul Lutheran (Concordia).

STORIES ABOUT LIFE

Tailoring your wardrobe for fall temps

It's sweater weather! Sweater weather is a phrase to describe weather that is slightly chilly, but not cold enough for a coat or jacket. When the thermometer hovers around 70, it's time to put away the tank tops and sandals and get out the sweaters and hoodies. Fall is here, so let's talk about your fall wardrobe.

Sherry Broyles
Contributing Columnist

If I had to choose only one sweater to wear all season – it would be a black turtleneck, also known as a polo neck. Developed in the late 19th century for polo players, the turtleneck was largely worn by sportsmen, laborers, sailors and soldiers. By the 1950's the tight turtleneck was the "preppy" style, worn with cardigans and Mary Jane shoes. For years turtlenecks were lurking in the back of people's closets, but in the 90's they became popular once again, paired with our mom jeans. Today, turtlenecks are a timeless classic that never goes out of style.

My new go-to outfit this fall is the jumpsuit. No need to worry about mixing and matching tops and bottoms. You can look put together in one easy step. They're comfortable and flattering. You can dress it up with heels and jewelry or make it more casual with tennis shoes and a ball cap. Jumpsuits are available in many different colors and denim. Choose your favorite color but stay away from orange – you'll look like you escaped from the pokey.

Jumpsuits were invented in 1919 for parachutists – hence the name "jump" suit. During World War II the garment was offered to women working in arms factories. You may remember the poster of Rosie the Riveter in her blue jumpsuit and red bandana, flexing her muscles, encouraging other women to join the war efforts. These were housewives turned war heroes. Women emerged from the kitchen and built the machinery necessary to fight and win the war. Rosie, looking tough and a bit intimidating, was the symbol of women's strength and independence. Maybe that's why I feel a bit empowered wearing a jumpsuit. Jumpsuits were worn by gas station attendants, aviators and astronauts, race car drivers, and of course Elvis. The Bee Gees wore white jumpsuits that are forever burned into my memory. You're in good company wearing a jumpsuit.

Happily, this year, the suit vest for women is back. You can find them at boutiques and department stores, but when you see one, you better get it, they go fast. You can also check out the vintage clothing shops and thrift shops in the area. A men's suit vest works great. Wear your vests as stand-alone tops or layer them over a tank, t-shirt or a button up shirt. A fitted vest looks great over wide leg pants that are also popular this year.

I do like to know what is popular and what is coming to the stores, but I only wear what I like. I certainly wouldn't wear something, just because it's "trending." Leopard is popular this year, but I'm not a fan. However, I do feel you have to step outside your comfort zone and try something new, no matter what your age or size.

Some years ago, I had picked out a dress to wear to a wedding. I am usually confident about my fashion choices, but for some reason, I was having some doubts. I asked a friend for her thoughts and opinion on my outfit. My honest friend said, "That dress makes you look frumpy." Frumpy, are you kidding? Well, that will get you looking for your receipts and headed back to the store. My friend was right. The dress was lace, it was shapeless, it didn't fit properly, and the color was drab. I looked like I was wearing a gunny sack. What was I thinking?

As I headed back to the store, I thought about why I had made such an unfortunate choice. Honestly, I think at the time I chose that dress, I was feeling frumpy. My attitude affected by choices that day. Style is a reflection of your attitude and mood.

Here's some shopping tips. Shop when you're in a good mood and feeling confident. Try on one thing that is a bit out of your comfort zone. Keep your receipts and leave the tags on, just in case you made an error in judgement. And lastly, avoid at all costs, the fashion police wherever they may be lurking.

"The only rule is don't be boring and dress cute wherever you go. Life is too short to blend in," by Paris Hilton.

Sedalia quilters spend hours visiting, sewing and sharing their lives

By Chris Howell
chrish@sedaliademocrat.com

Every Wednesday afternoon, quilters gather in the back room of the St Vincent de Paul Business Center, 240 S. Moniteau Ave., to sew hand-stitched quilts for the annual bazaar.

Pauline Mattingly, Sherry Allain and Georgia Stevens were on hand Wednesday, Sept. 10, to sew, visit and keep their hands busy making the quilts together.

"My husband died in '99 and I started in February of 2000," Mattingly said. "I go to Saint Patrick's and we used to do this over there, but when they finished the house here, they moved us in here, that way we got better lighting and you need good lighting to quilt."

At 90 years old, Mattingly stitches while chatting with the friends she has known for years. Quilting is an artform she grew up with, and she isn't about to stop.

"I've always loved to do it, my family did it, my mother did it all the time," Mattingly said. "My family always did it, I'll just love the pastime."

They say many hands make light work, and with quilting that is certainly true.

Sherry Allain and Georgia Stevens hand-stitch each quilt for three to four months. The women say the time spent together is a gentle therapy as they share problems and everyday joys as well.

"It takes a lot of time if you're doing one by yourself," Mattingly said. "But three of us doing it, well, we did three in one year."

The three of four months it takes to make one quilt may seem like a long time, but with good friends helping, the hours fly by.

"Visit while you quilt," Mattingly said. "My mom did it, and then I have a sister that's quilted over 100, she's not able to do it anymore but over the years she made them. This is a cheater's quilt, the material's already put together, but she made hers from scratch."

Around the end of September or the beginning of October, the quilts are auctioned to raise money for the parish. Unfortunately, there are fewer quilters every year.

"We used to have about 12 people," Mattingly said. "But we don't have them no more, it's becoming a lost art, people just don't do it anymore."

Allain is happiest when the group starts each new quilt but seems happy enough whenever she is working with her friends.

"We just put this one in about three weeks ago," Allain said. "This is my 11th year. My grandmother, Mildred Parker was a quilter, she was from Hermitage. I quilted some with her but my father was in the military and so we traveled my entire life and so whenever we came to visit in Missouri I quilted with her."

Allain was an art teacher and loves working with the beautiful textiles.

"I taught art for years and there's something about doing fibers and using my hands and being creative that I like about quilting," Allain said. "We belong to Sacred Heart church and when I retired from teaching, we started back to Sacred Heart and they had it in the bulletin that they had quilting on Wednesday, so I showed up. I believe we had about eight quilters, all elderly women who eventually, as time went on, passed away or went to nursing homes and then passed away."

The group still remembers the times they spent with quilters like Clarice Dove before her passing.

"Pauline Mattingly is the one that was here when I was here," Allain said. "Then Georgia joined us later and Clarice Dove, she passed away a year or two ago."

The group is always looking for new people to join the sewing circle and promise to teach anyone willing to hold a needle.

"Absolutely, I will teach them how to hand quilt," Allain said. "We start at 12:30 on Wednesdays here at the Newman house, just knock on the door and say 'quilts.'"

The ladies have three completed quilts in their closet, but it's not just about the number of quilts or how quickly they're made. It's mostly about the time spent working on the projects together.

See QUILTERS, Page B9

Pauline Mattingly has been quilting for St Patricks since 2000 and before that with her family. Mattingly's sister has completed over 100 quilts, she said.

Fall’s the time to renovate your lawn

By Jessica Damiano
Associated Press

If you’re growing cool-season grasses, like Kentucky or Canada bluegrass, ryegrass, or tall or fine fescues, and your lawn has been thinning, patchy or discolored, now is the time to do something about it.

Those hardy turfgrasses, commonly used in Canada and the northern two-thirds of the continental United States, typically enter dormancy and turn brown at the height of summer. They germinate, grow and develop roots best in the cooling temperatures of late summer into early fall. (Warm-season grasses, like Zoysia, St. Augustine, centipede, Bahia and Bermuda, are best renovated in spring).

Turf grasses in general are resource hogs, requiring a constant supply of water, fertilizers and, often, chemical herbicides to retain their emerald-carpet appearance. I recommend shrinking the lawn and replacing at least part of it with native plants to reduce your garden’s reliance on such amendments and to support beneficial insects and the ecosystem.

But I also understand that retaining a small lawn has a certain appeal: It can keep things looking tidy, define flower beds and keep the neighbors (or your HOA) happy.

Starting from the ground up

A healthy lawn, regardless of its size, will require less maintenance than one that is struggling. And the best way to achieve optimal lawn health is to build it properly, um, from the ground up.

Testing your soil’s pH is an important first step in the process. Grass requires a reading of between 6.0 and 7.5 to thrive. Sure, it will grow outside that range, but it will also become malnourished and more susceptible to weeds and diseases. That could lead to unhappiness, avoidable expenses and the use of chemicals.

If you’re going to go through the trouble of renovating your lawn, don’t skip the important first step of optimizing its pH. Doing so will lay a solid foundation for success, and your lawn will require less care later.

If the soil’s pH is 6.0 or lower, apply lime to raise it. If the pH is higher than 7.5, use ammonium sulfate or ammonium nitrate to lower it. Apply these amendments only at the rates recommended on the package labels and incorporate them 4-6 inches deep.

While we’re on the subject, it’s important to note that lime is often applied willy-nilly as a matter of routine – both by homeowners and landscapers. That should never be done without first conducting a pH test to ensure it’s indicated. Applying lime to a lawn that doesn’t need it risks raising the pH to levels that would inhibit its ability to absorb nutrients, including fertilizers.

Adding oxygen and compost

Next up is core aeration, a mechanical process that opens avenues in the soil through which oxygen (and water) can enter. Oxygen improves soil health, which in turn benefits roots, and healthy roots are necessary to support that lush lawn you’re after.

Core aerators are easy to use and widely available for rent at garden centers. The machines use hollow, 3/4-inch-diameter tines to pull 3-inch-long plugs out of the soil (just leave the plugs to decompose on the grass; they’ll break down quickly). If you’re not up for the task, you can hire a landscaper to do it. It’s not an expensive service.

Next, enrich the soil by spreading one-half inch of compost over the entire area (no worries if some falls into the aeration holes).

Select the right seed for your site

Tall fescue is the most heat- and drought-tolerant of any of the cool-season grasses, so it’s ideal for dry sites in full sun. Fine fescue is preferred for dry shade, but doesn’t hold up well in high-traffic areas. Kentucky bluegrass does well in humid areas. Combining two or more types is often a good strategy, but check with your local cooperative extension for recommendations tailored to your specific growing conditions.

Using a spreader, apply seeds in two directions to ensure complete coverage.

Watering and mowing
Give the area a good, deep soaking just this once, then sprinkle lightly twice a day until new growth reaches 2 inches high. Don’t allow the seed to dry out even once, or you may have to reseed (this is not the time to take a vacation, not even for a weekend).

Begin mowing when grass is 4 inches high, and leave clippings on the lawn as a free source of nitrogen.

Next spring, start mowing when newly emerged grass reaches 4 inches tall, never removing more than one-third of its height in a single session. Continue to leave clippings on the lawn and, if you do fertilize, opt for a slow-release product.

Beyond apple pie: Creative ways to use your apple haul this year

By Gina Matsoukas

The abundance of sweet and juicy apples in autumn is a tempting sight at grocery stores and markets. While an apple pie is a delicious way to use apples, this fall is a great time to get creative and try some exciting new apple recipes.

Embracing fall with in-season apples

Biting into a crisp apple as temperatures begin to cool in September is one of the first signs that fall is on its way. Most apples start to ripen near the end of August and are at their peak for picking from September to November. During these months, apples are generally larger and strike that perfect sweetness.

According to the U.S. Apple Association, all 50 states grow apples with more than 7,000 different varieties available. They are also the most consumed fruit in the U.S. This means that your grocery store, local farmers' market, roadside stands, pick-your-own orchards and even backyard trees can supply a bounty of apples.

An apple pie is as quintessential for fall as the apples themselves, but the options only start there. Whether you are baking, snacking, making dinner, drinking or even preserving apples, you have nearly endless options for using apples this year.

Apple desserts beyond pie

Striking a balance between sweet and tart that complements the warm, spicy flavors of fall, apples are ideal for baking. Heat them and the texture turns soft, making them a nice addition to pie crusts, breads, muffins and cake.

If you are craving the cinnamon and flakiness of a pie, an apple crumble or apple crisp uses a similar apple filling with a streusel top. Try a microwave apple crisp for a quick and easy, single-serve alternative.

Apple cake or apple quick bread makes for a delectable breakfast or tea-time treat. The water content in apples also helps contribute to a moist crumb in your baked goods. Apple fritters, a type of donut with diced apple pieces, are a fun fall dessert. If you have applesauce or apple cider, these can also lend a more delicate sweetness and apple flavor to donuts.

When baking with apples, choosing the best variety will elevate your recipe. The right apple will offer the exact amount of tartness and moisture, and will stay firm while baking rather than turning mushy with the heat.

Apple dishes for your daily menu

A bushel of fall apples can work well in savory dishes. For breakfast, dinner and snacks, apples can bring a new depth of flavor, some crunch and healthy vitamins and fiber.

Incorporating apples into breakfast

In addition to baked goods for breakfast, apples work well in apple cinnamon oatmeal. They are also ideal in smoothies, particularly in green smoothies where they will mitigate the bitterness of kale or spinach.

Dinner and lunch ideas with apples

The sweet flavor of apples can contrast well with the savory flavors of many dishes. This fall, try adding slices of apples to salads. A spinach or kale salad holds up well to apples. A Waldorf salad traditionally mixes apples with celery, grapes, nuts and a mayonnaise-based dressing.

An apple slaw with grated apple and red cabbage can be an addition to sandwiches or a bright side to other dishes. You can also add apple slices to a grilled cheese for a gourmet sandwich with a bit of crunch. Apples go particularly well with a high-quality cheddar or brie.

Pork is traditionally served with applesauce or stewed apples, but apples also go well with chicken. Try sauteed apples or apple stuffing alongside chicken for an autumnal dish.

Many fall soups can use up extra apples, particularly those that will be blended. Adding an apple to butternut squash soup or potato soup can bring an interesting flavor and texture.

Apples for a sweet and healthy snack

A sliced apple is the perfect snack at any time of the day, but there are plenty of ways to get creative as well. Sprinkle a little cinnamon on apple slices or dip slices in peanut butter or yogurt for a little extra protein. Dipping apples in caramel is also an easy sweet treat.

Apple chips are a crispy snack. Thinly slice apples, lay them flat on a baking sheet, sprinkle them with cinnamon and bake in the oven until crispy. You'll have a healthier snack and baking apples will fill your home with the aromas of fall.

Preserving your fall apple haul

If you still have an excess of apples after cooking and baking or want to have apples in winter and spring, there are several ways to preserve them. These methods will allow your apples to last for several weeks in the fridge or even several months on the shelf if you can them.

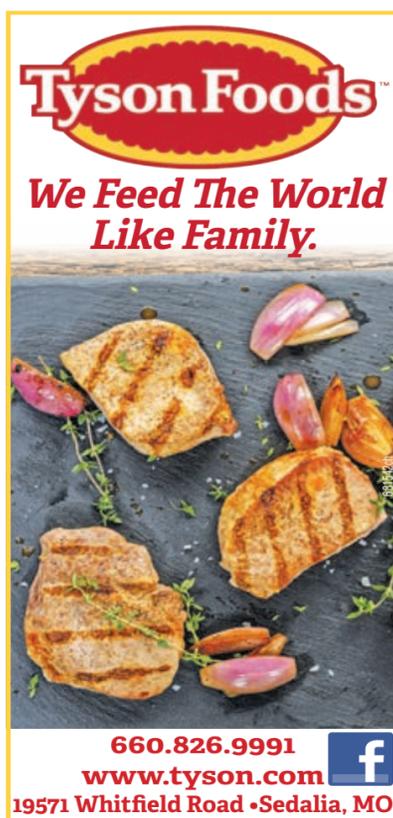

You can core and dice apples before placing them in a slow cooker or on the stove top with sugar, cinnamon and other spices. For homemade applesauce, cook the apples until soft and mash them to the desired consistency. Alternatively, try a longer cooking time over low heat to reduce the apples to a spreadable apple jam. Use an immersion blender to create a smooth apple butter.

You can also slice your apples and dry them. A food dehydrator works particularly well, but you can also dry apples in the oven. Dried apples will last about six months, giving you a healthy snack throughout the year.

Get ready for apple season this autumn

Baking an apple pie or two is one of the best ways to celebrate fall. But this year, don't limit yourself to only pie. Head to your local store or orchard, and stock up on apples for savory dishes and creative baking recipes. Bake apple recipes with your favorite flavors and discover new favorites to welcome this fall.

PASTOR'S PULPIT

A Harvest of righteousness

By Rev. Anne Meredith Kyle

Christ-Trinity Lutheran and Calvary Episcopal Churches

All over the countryside there are fields of cornstalks and soybeans that are turning from vibrant green to golden yellow to brown.

The brown, dry corn and beans are ready to be gathered into the granary. These fruits of the farmers' labor will provide food for people, feed for livestock, and other commodities. Just a few days from now the harvest moon will rise over those fields and is so named because its appearance in the sky marks the time of harvest, year in and year out.

Images of planting, sewing, and reaping are plentiful in scripture.

Today I am reading about a different kind of harvest, found in the book of James. James 3:17-18 says "...the wisdom from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, willing to yield, full of mercy and good fruits, without a trace of partiality or hypocrisy. And a harvest of righteousness is sown in peace for those who make peace."

So, what about the "harvest of righteousness"? The Greek word which is translated as righteousness is "Dikaioisune" and speaks to the character of relationships.

We understand a righteous person to be honorable and virtuous. At the heart of the righteousness that James speaks of is being in right relationship with God, with other people, and with creation.

The righteous person strives to live justly, honestly, faithfully, and in peace with others, according to God's instruction. Righteousness is not a destination or a goal; it is a journey and a relationship.

Just like the farmer has fields to tend, we have spiritual lives to nurture. We plant and tend, seeking a harvest of righteousness. We care for our spiritual garden with prayer, study of the Scriptures, fellowship, and worship. Through faith, and with the grace of God, we will realize a harvest like the one James described. A harvest that is pure, peaceable, gentle, willing to yield, and full of mercy.

McDonald's extends $5 deal through December

By Dee-Ann Durbin

Associated Press

McDonald's is extending its $5 value meal until December at most U.S. stores, a move that rivals are likely to follow.

McDonald's introduced the deal in June after a disappointing first quarter that saw fewer U.S. visits and lower spending per order, particularly from customers earning less than $45,000 per year. The $5 Meal Deal includes a McDouble burger or McChicken sandwich, small fries, a four-piece Chicken McNuggets and a small drink.

"Together with our franchisees, we're committed to keeping our prices as affordable as possible," McDonald's U.S. President Joe Erlinger said Thursday.

As grocery price inflation has slowed, more people are choosing to eat at home. U.S. restaurant sales were up slightly in July, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. But that was largely because of higher menu prices. Adjusted for inflation, restaurant sales fell 0.7% from July 2023, according to the National Restaurant Association.

Rivals like Burger King quickly followed McDonald's with their own $5 meal deals. Burger King recently extended its deal through October.

Wendy's, which already offered a $5 meal deal, started throwing in a free Frosty in June. Now, it's offering a $5 meal deal targeted at college football fans, with no delivery fees every Saturday this fall.

The deals are lifting store traffic. Placer.ai, which uses cell phone data to monitor retail traffic, said U.S. visits to McDonald's rose 2.4% in June after the $5 meal deal was introduced and have remained elevated ever since.

Placer.ai said Taco Bell saw a 12.3% increase in visits the week of July 29 when it offered free drinks to celebrate the 20th anniversary of its Baja Blast.

Fast-food restaurants aren't the only ones offering deals to get customers in the door. Olive Garden recently announced that its Never-Ending Pasta Bowl special — which includes soup or salad, breadsticks and pasta for $13.99 — will run through Nov. 17.

McDonald's said it will also offer other deals this fall, including free medium fries every Friday with a $1 minimum purchase and $1 10-piece Chicken McNuggets between Nov. 4 and Dec. 2.

The power of a library card

By Jamie Sparks
Sedalia Public Library Director

September is Library Card Sign Up Month. This campaign, launched in 1987 by former Secretary of Education, William Bennett, started with the goal of getting a library card into the hands of every child. Since then, the campaign has grown and become one of our favorite times of the year to celebrate libraries. Have you ever thought about how much money a library card saves you each year? So far this year, I've read 30 books. If I were to purchase those books instead of using the library, I estimate I would've spent between $500-$700 so far. Wow! With two of my three kids in college at the moment, that money I saved using the library is going towards tuition. If you have a child in college, you know. If you don't have a library card yet, please stop by and we can get you set up. Everyone in our community is welcome to get a library card, even if you live outside of the city limits. Please bring your ID and/or proof of residency. Anyone who lives or owns property inside of the city limits can get a library card for free. If you live outside of the city limits, but in Pettis County, you can get a card for your entire household for just $20 per year. If you live outside of Pettis County, you can get a card for your entire household for only $25 per year. This is an affordable deal, considering all you can do with your library card.

We are promoting the power of a library card all month long. Happy Reading!
Upcoming Special events at The Sedalia Public Library

- Teachers and Home School Educators can get a library card for free — provide proof of current teaching status and educators in Pettis County can get a card to check out classroom materials. Stop by to sign up.
- Saturday, Sept. 21, 10am-noon: (programs & materials are free): Chess Club; Adult craft: Make your own tote bag; Children's Department: Code robots with the kids from Team; Scream or build one with legos
- Monday, Sept. 23, 5:30pm: Family Bingo night with prizes. Come early and show your library card to get a special discount at Arnold's Food Truck.

- Raffle to win a Movie Night Basket (includes four ticket to the movie theater): Just come in and use your library card for a chance to enter through the month of September.

- Library Love-Purchase your own library tote bag or T-shirt this month only.

James Earl Jones' Darth Vader voice lives on through AI, voice actors see promise and perils

By Sarah Parvini
AP Technology Writer

LOS ANGELES — Over the course of an acting career that spanned more than six decades, James Earl Jones' voice became an indelible piece of his work as a performer. On screen, Jones, who died Monday at 93, brought to life a reclusive writer coaxed back into the spotlight in "Field of Dreams" and a haughty king of a fictional land in "Coming To America." On stage, he won two Tony Awards for "The Great White Hope" and "Fences." His work as a voice actor — the regal dignity of his portrayal of Mufasa in "The Lion King" and the menacing and deep timbre he lent to Darth Vader in "Star Wars" — helped cement his place as a legendary actor among generations of fans.

But in the wake of his death, an aspect of Jones' career has come to the fore: consenting to the use of artificial intelligence to replicate his performance as Darth Vader after he stepped away from the role. Skywalker Sound and the Ukrainian company Respeecher used AI to recreate Jones' villain for the 2022 show "Obi-Wan Kenobi" on Disney+. Mark Hamill's voice was also "de-aged" using Respeecher for his appearance as Luke Skywalker in "The Mandalorian."

Voice actors say they fear AI could reduce or eliminate job opportunities because the technology could be used to replicate one performance into a number of other movements without their consent — a concern that led video game performers with the Screen Actors Guild-American Federation of Television and Radio Artists to go on strike in late July.

To some, Jones' decision to allow AI to replicate his voice raises questions about voice acting as an art, but also potentially helps lay the ground work for transparent AI agreements that fairly compensate an actor for their performance with consent. Zeke Alton, a voice actor and member of SAG-AFTRA's interactive media agreement negotiating committee, said it's "amazing" that Jones was involved in the process of replicating his voice.

"If the game companies, the movie companies, gave the consent, compensation transparency to every actor that they gave James Earl Jones, we wouldn't be on strike," Alton said. "It proves that they can do it. They just don't want to for people that they feel don't have the leverage to bargain for themselves."

Hollywood's video game performers announced a work stoppage — their second in a decade — after more than 18 months of negotiations over a new interactive media agreement with game industry giants broke down over artificial intelligence protections. Members of the union have said they are not anti-AI. The performers are worried, however, the technology could provide studios with a means to displace them.

Concerns about how movie studios will use AI helped fuel last year's film and television strikes by the union, which lasted four months.

Jones, who overcame a childhood stutter, said in previous interviews that he was "happy to be able to talk at all, because there was time when I couldn't." His goal, he said, was for his voice to be clear. Speaking with The Associated Press in 1994, he said that he tried to make Darth Vader "more human and more interesting." But George Lucas, the filmmaker who created "Star Wars," advised him to "go back to a very narrow band of expression" because the mechanical parts of the villain's body would make it difficult for him to sound more human.

Neither Skywalker Sound nor Respeecher responded to a request for comment. But a sound editor with Skywalker Sound told Vanity Fair that Jones signed off on the use of archival recordings to keep Darth Vader alive and that he guided Darth Vader's performance for the Disney+ show as "a benevolent godfather."

Voice actor Brock Powell said that the ability to use an actor like Jones' voice in perpetuity could eliminate the need for actors who specialize in matching voices. That type of work provides steady jobs for many performers, they said, who can recreate a famous voice for video games, animated series and other types of media.

"To quote 'Jurassic Park,' the scientists were so preoccupied with whether or not they would, they didn't stop to ask if we should," Powell said.

That type of AI use could also reduce "ingenuity" in acting, they said, because new actors might not have the chance to come in and reinvigorate a role.

Crispin Freeman, an actor who has done voice matching work replicating Orlando Bloom's voice in "Pirates of the Caribbean," said that the technology may take away voice matching roles, but doesn't harm "the ability of future artists to blaze their own trails" in new roles.

"We always need to keep reinventing new stories as we're going forward, and not simply relying on the old stuff," he said. "Rather than worrying, 'Oh, will someone else be able to be Darth Vader,' why don't we make a new 'Star Wars' character that's as compelling as Darth Vader?"

Jones' contract could set an example of properly bargaining with an actor over their likeness, said Sarah Elmaleh, chair of SAG-AFTRA's interactive negotiating committee. Elmaleh, a voice actor, said there is a chance for these tools to be used in "meaningful, smart artistic decisions."

"I worry about a world where we conflate the superficial qualities of a person's voice with their performance," she said. "I can't help getting away from the metaphor that's baked into this character itself, which is, when you conflate the man with the machine, you become a tool for other forces, other powers that be."

Alton, the voice actor, said he wonders about what the use of Jones' voice as Darth Vader would mean if it were used for another 100 years and people didn't remember "all of the different things that built him into the iconic character that he was."

"It's just a disembodied voice at that point. It's part of the neutering of art that generative AI has the potential to do, and it's sort of a heady subject, but it's very important for us as a world to consider what we want our entertainment and our art to be in the future," he said. "Do we want it to be human, or do we want it to be bland?"

TAILGATING FOOD IS THE REAL MVP OF GAME DAY

By Heidi Bruaw

While football is the main event, food is the true star of tailgating culture. Tailgating recipes have become integral to the football season experience, creating traditions that bring people together. Some fans are so devoted that they roll in the night before, setting up camp in trailers or motorhomes, just to fire up the grill at dawn and get the feast started.

The cultural significance of tailgating food

Tailgating food reflects local culture and traditions, from regional specialties to family recipes passed down through generations. In the South, tailgates often include barbecue due to its deep roots in the region. Sometimes you will even see large pit barbecues on trailers. Making barbecue takes time so cooking may start in the middle of the night depending on game time.

In the Midwest, you will often see barbecue, brats and cheese as well as several different flavors of wings. Michelle Goth of the food blog, Blackberry Babe, says “In Kansas City, we take tailgating — and our football team — seriously that when you pull into the parking lot, you will smell barbecue in the air! Our most popular tailgating foods are smoked brisket and burnt ends, and you’ll almost always find a heaping bowl of buffalo chicken dip. Meat is smoked the night before and warmed on portable grills at the stadium. If you’re visiting Kansas City, walk up to any tailgate and you’ll be welcomed in and offered samples.”

The Italian sub is a staple of tailgates in the Northeast. It has several different names including hero, grinder, wedge, po’ boy, hoagie and sub. No matter what it’s called, it’s filled with Italian meats and cheeses and can be served as a large party sub or as small sliders.

Kristin King of Dizzy Busy and Hungry says, “In Philly, in addition to the obvious cheesesteaks, roast pork sandwiches are a tailgating staple. People go all out, slow-cooking the pork for hours until it’s tender and flavorful. Folks even lug their own slow cookers or portable roasters to the stadium parking lot, cook the marinated pork right there, and then load up Amoroso rolls with the pork topped with sharp provolone and garlicky broccoli rabe. Philly sports fans take great pride in their roast pork sandwiches.” You will find chili, hot dogs and burgers no matter where you go. The type of chili and the toppings on hot dogs vary based on the region.

Another way tailgating food reflects local culture and tradition is by using family recipes like grape jelly and chili sauce meatballs. Tailgating recipes are often passed down through generations and can be a source of pride like a mom’s potato salad or a dad’s secret chili recipe. Those recipes offer a taste of the past, connecting fans to those that came before them.

Classic tailgating recipes: A culinary tradition

When tailgating began in the 19th century, tailgaters would bring picnic baskets filled with portable food like sandwiches and fruit. As games became longer and more intense, fans needed more hearty meals to sustain them.

The invention of the grill revolutionized tailgating as it allowed people to cook in stadium parking lots. Hamburgers and hot dogs have been a staple at tailgates for several decades with people often transporting grills in the back of their pickup trucks.

Chips and dips, like hot chipped beef dip, are portable and often enjoyed at tailgates. Chili, stew and hearty soups are also common tailgate staples as they help keep people warm in the chilly fall and winter weather. These dishes are often prepared in large batches and shared with other tailgaters. Chili often has optional toppings that fans can add so a folding table is set up with all the choices, allowing each person to customize their own. Finger foods like chicken wings, meatballs and pickle wraps are made in large batches and served on platters, making them easy to share.

The role of food in building tailgating communities

Sharing food at tailgates fosters a sense of camaraderie among fans and helps break down social barriers and create lasting connections. Food is a universal language and it provides common ground for people to connect despite their age, background or team affiliation. The relaxed atmosphere of a tailgate can lower social inhibitions and make it easier for people to start conversations and form new friendships.

Potluck-style tailgates are a popular tradition that brings people together and helps foster a sense of community and belonging. According to a survey conducted by Hormel Foods, 84% of respondents believed that every attendee should contribute at least one item to the tailgate. Potlucks also make tailgating more affordable as each person or family only has to contribute one dish and gets to enjoy a wide variety of foods. Sharing food is a natural icebreaker and it creates a way for people to connect with one another.

The economic impact of tailgating on local food businesses

Tailgating offers a unique opportunity for food vendors and small businesses to showcase their products and generate revenue. With such a large crowd, vendors can expose their brand to a wide audience and generate immediate revenue. Some tailgaters prefer to purchase food in the parking lot due to traveling a long distance or looking forward to certain vendors.

According to the National Consumer Panel, “tailgating contributes $35 billion in food and beverage sales.” Since most food is purchased ahead of time, local grocery stores and delis benefit from these sales. Some stores have special tailgating promotions for popular foods like hamburgers, hot dogs and sausages. Deli meat and pre-made dips are common options. Restaurants that are close to stadiums cash in by offering food and drink specials before the game, encouraging people to eat at their establishment instead of preparing their own food in the parking lot.

The enduring legacy of tailgating food

Classic tailgating recipes are more than just food, they are a symbol of community, tradition and the shared experience of football season. Food will continue to be a central part of tailgating culture, bringing people together for years to come.

USPS’ long-awaited new mail truck makes its debut to rave reviews from carriers

By David Sharp and Ron Harris

Associated Press

ATHENS, Ga. — The Postal Service’s new delivery vehicles aren’t going to win a beauty contest. They’re tall and ungainly. The windshields are vast. Their hoods resemble a duck bill. Their bumpers are enormous.

“You can tell that (the designers) didn’t have appearance in mind,” postal worker Avis Stonum said.

Odd appearance aside, the first handful of Next Generation Delivery Vehicles that rolled onto postal routes in August in Athens, Georgia, are getting rave reviews from letter carriers accustomed to cantankerous older vehicles that lack modern safety features and are prone to breaking down — and even catching fire.

Within a few years, the fleet will have expanded to 60,000, most of them electric models, serving as the Postal Service’s primary delivery truck from Maine to Hawaii.

Once fully deployed, they’ll represent one of the most visible signs of the agency’s 10-year, $40 billion transformation led by Postmaster General

Louis DeJoy, who’s also renovating aging facilities, overhauling the processing and transportation network, and instituting other changes.

The current postal vehicles — the Grumman Long Life Vehicle, dating to 1987 — have made good on their name, outlasting their projected 25-year lifespan. But they’re well overdue for replacement.

Noisy and fuel-inefficient (9 mpg), the Grummans are costly to maintain. They’re scalding hot in the summer, with only an old-school electric fan to circulate air. They have mirrors mounted on them that — when perfectly aligned — allow the driver to see around the vehicle, but the mirrors constantly get knocked out of alignment. Alarming, nearly 100 of the vehicles caught fire last year, imperiling carriers and mail alike.

The new trucks are being built with comfort, safety and utility in mind by Oshkosh Defense in South Carolina.

Even tall postal carriers can stand up without bonking their heads and walk from front to back to retrieve packages. For safety, the vehicles have airbags, 360-degree cameras, blind-spot monitoring, collision sensors and anti-lock brakes — all of which are missing on the Grummans.

The new trucks also feature something common in most cars for more than six decades: air conditioning. And that’s key for drivers in the Deep South, the desert Southwest and other areas with scorching summers.

"I promise you, it felt like heaven blowing in my face," Stonum said of her first experience working in an air-conditioned truck.

Richard Burton, another driver, said he appreciates the larger payload area, which can accommodate bigger packages, and the fact that he doesn't have to crouch, helping him avoid back pain. The old trucks also had a habit of breaking down in traffic, he added.

Brian Renfro, president of the National Letter Carriers Association, said union members are enthusiastic about the new vehicles, just as they were when the Grumman marked a leap forward from the previous old-school Jeeps. He credited DeJoy with bringing a sense of urgency to get them into production.

"We're excited now to be at the point where they're starting to hit the streets," Renfro said.

The process got off to a rocky start.

Environmentalists were outraged when DeJoy announced that 90% of the next-gen vehicles in the first order would be gas-powered. Lawsuits were filed demanding that the Postal Service further electrify its fleet of more than 200,000 vehicles to reduce tailpipe emissions.

"Everybody went nuts," DeJoy said.

The problem, DeJoy said, wasn't that he didn't want electric vehicles. Rather, the expense of the vehicles, compounded by the costs of installing thousands of charging stations and upgrading electrical service, made them unaffordable at a time when the agency was reporting big operating deficits every quarter.

He found a way to further boost the number of electric vehicles when he met with President Joe Biden's top environmental adviser, John Podesta. That led to a deal in which the government provided $3 billion to the Postal Service, with part of it earmarked for electric charging stations.

In December 2022, DeJoy announced that the Postal Service was buying 106,000 vehicles through 2028. That included 60,000 next-gen vehicles, 45,000 of them electric models, along with 21,000 other electric vehicles. He pledged to go all-electric for new purchases starting in 2026.

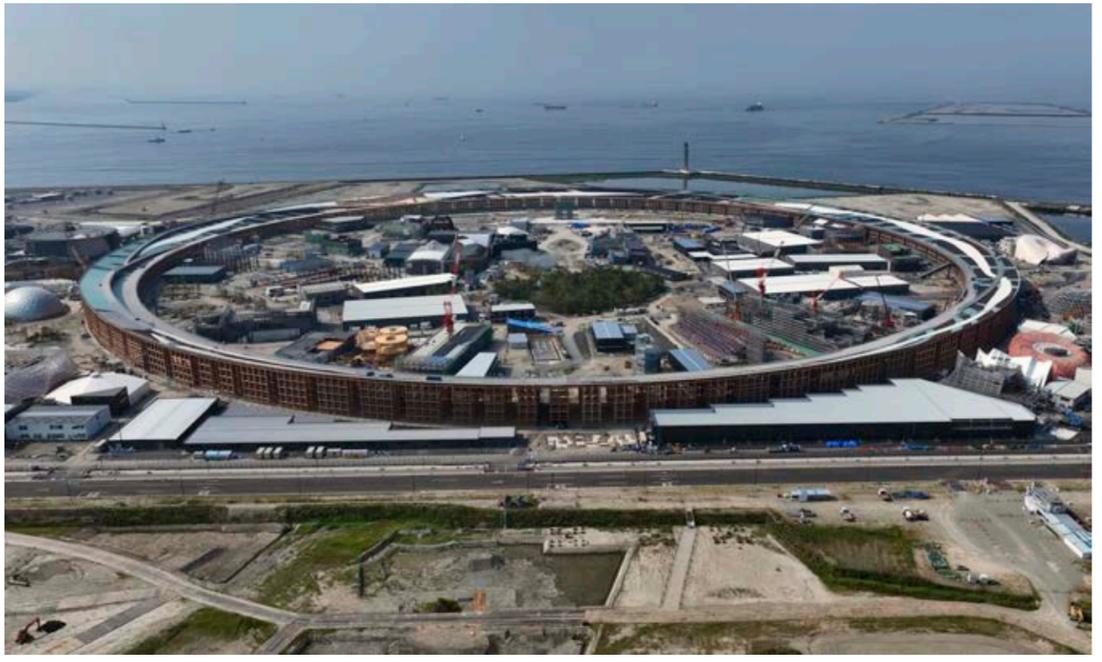

"With the climate crisis at our doorsteps, electrifying the U.S. government's largest fleet will deliver the progress we've been waiting for," said Katherine Garcia of the Sierra Club, which sued the Postal Service before its decision to boost the volume of electric vehicle purchases.

Between the electric vehicles, reduced tailpipe emissions from optimized mail routes and other changes, the agency anticipates cutting carbon emissions by 40% by 2030, DeJoy said. The route revisions will also save money.

This summer the Postal Service's environmental battles came full circle as the White House honored it with a Presidential Federal Sustainability Award, marking the end of "an interesting journey," DeJoy said.

The honor signifies the agency's ability to work through complex problems — be they operational, financial, technical, political or of a public policy nature, he said.

"It comes from forging forward," he said. "Keep moving."

Osaka gears up for 2025 World Expo with memories fo hosting half-century ago

By Katherine Roth
Associated Press

OSAKA, Japan — Visitors to Tokyo and Kyoto might not realize it, but Osaka — one of Japan's biggest and oldest cities, known more as a business hub than a tourist destination — is gearing up to host next year's World Exposition.

The city has been plastered with the Expo's red-and-blue "Myaku-Myaku" mascot for months and is abuzz with preparations. For many here, the excitement is mixed with nostalgia for the last World Expo hosted by Japan, back in 1970.

There are doubters, especially outside Osaka. Construction costs are turning out to be exponentially higher than expected. Preparations have been marred by political and business infighting. And many Japanese, jaded after Tokyo's difficult experience hosting the Olympics during the COVID pandemic, question whether the idea of a World Expo is still relevant.

But in Osaka, many older residents say such events are more necessary than ever.

Many retain vivid memories of the 1970 Expo. They remember schoolchildren attending multiple times, particularly those from the Osaka area. There were long lines to see the moon rocks on view at the U.S. pavilion; prototypes of electric cars; displays featuring the first ethernet cables (LAN); and the introduction of Western foods like yogurt and baguettes.

It was a time when traveling abroad was still a dream for most, and Expo '70 was a rare chance for ordinary Japanese to hear live performances by bands from around the world, and visit a huge array of pavilions representing various nations and interests.

Mostly, though, the enduring impact was the chance for personal interactions with international pavilions and visitors.

"My experience as an interpreter at World Expo '70 was transformative," says Takahiro Shinyo, who went on to join the Japanese foreign service, serve as a Japanese ambassador to Germany, and is now a visiting professor at Kansai Gakuin University, just outside Osaka.

"It opened my eyes to the power of international cooperation and the potential of human ingenuity," he says.

And while a lot has changed since 1970, he says World Expos remain just as relevant today.

"The value of direct interpersonal contact that World Expos facilitate cannot be replicated online," he says. "The face-to-face interactions, the exchange of ideas, and the shared experiences that take place at these events contribute to a deeper understanding and appreciation of our global community."

As in 1970, this World Expo is being staged in Osaka just a few years after the Olympics were held in Tokyo. But while the 1964 Olympics were an enormously successful and popular event at the time, the 2021 Tokyo Olympics, held during the pandemic, were considered a disappointment to many Japanese.

World Expos happen every five years, and last up to six months. The most recent, in 2020, was in Dubai.

The upcoming Expo in Osaka is scheduled for April 13-Oct. 13, 2025, with the theme "Designing the Future of Our Lives." Organizers anticipate 28.2 million visitors, over 3 million of them from other countries. Nearly 5 million tickets have already been sold.

The Expo will be held on an island built off the coast of western Osaka using the same technology as at nearby Kansai International Airport, which floats in Osaka Bay. The fair promises multiple prototypes of flying cars, and spokeswoman Sachiko Yoshimura said organizers hope visitors could even take a flying car from the airport to the Expo.

That said, organizers say their emphasis is not on cutting-edge technology as much as international cooperation.

"This Expo is not just a showcase of industry. It's about having all the nations come together and unite as one," said Yoshimura, in a glassed-in office near the top of a skyscraper overlooking the site of the upcoming event.

Although the grounds of World Expo 2025 have begun to open up for limited tours of the construction site, the general public can get a sense of the impact of a World Exposition in Osaka by visiting ExpoCity, the site of the 1970 World Expo. It features an immersive Expo '70 Pavilion, including the still-intact Steel Pavilion, and galleries of Expo '70 memorabilia like uniforms worn by World Expo "hostesses."

Visitors to ExpoCity can climb inside the nearby "Taiyo no To" (Tower of the Sun) sculpture, a symbol of Expo '70 and designed by Japanese artist Taro Okamoto. There is also a playground, a lake with paddle boats and, nearby, "Expo Restaurant," which sells what are billed as the same style meals served at that fair.

National Book Award long list for young people's literature has poetic touch

By Hillel Italie
AP National Writer

NEW YORK — This year's long list of National Book Awards for young people's literature has a poetic touch.

Five of the 10 nominees announced Tuesday by the National Book Foundation are novels written in verse, including Olivia A. Coles' "Ariel Crashing a Train" and Shifa Saltagi Safadi's "Kareem Between," a young Muslim's coming-of-age story. The other novels in verse are Margarita Engle's "Wild Dreamers," Alicia D. Williams' "Mid-Air" and Angela Shanté's "The Unboxing of a Black Girl."

Judges also selected two debut novels, Josh Galarza's "The Great Cool Ranch Dorito in the Sky" and Ali Terese's "Free Period," along with Violet Duncan's "Buffalo Dreamer," Randy Ribay's "Everything We Never Had" and Erin Entrada Kelly's "The First State of Being."

Throughout the week, the foundation will be unveiling long lists in five competitive categories, including poetry, nonfiction and fiction. The lists will be narrowed to five on Oct. 1, and winners will be announced during a Nov. 20 dinner ceremony.

Ten nominees for books in translation also were announced Tuesday, their settings ranging from Scandinavia to the Middle East to Taiwan. Three books originated in Arabic: Nasser Abu Srouf's "The Tale of a Wall," translated by Luke Leafgren; Bothayna Al-Essa's "The Book Censor's Library," translated by Ranya Abdelrahman and Sawad Hussain; and Samar Yazbek's "Where the Wind Calls Home," translated by Leri Price.

Translation judges also cited three books in Spanish: Layla Martínez's "Woodworm," translated by Sophie Hughes and Annie McDermott; Fernando Vallejo's "The Abyss," translated by Yvette Siebert; and Fernanda Triás' "Pink Slime," translated by Heather Cleary.

The other translation nominees were Linnea Axelsson's "Ednan," translated from the Swedish by Saskia Vogel; Solvej Balle's "On the Calculation of Volume (Book I)," translated from the Danish by Barbara J. Haveland; Fiston Mwanza Mujila's "The Villain's Dance," translated from the French by Roland Glasse; and Yáng Shuāng "Taiwan Travelogue," translated from the Mandarin Chinese by Lin King.

Georgia Stevens joined the quilting group in 2015 after retiring from 28 years as a trucker.

"When I retired and came home, I couldn't sit still anymore," Stevens said. "I like to cook so I make snacks and there's cookies in there for snacks every day. I make something different every week for us to eat. I told them if they'd be my guinea pigs I'd bake, so we do that, we have our coffee and our breaks there."

Stevens noted the relaxing pace of quilting has been good for her health.

"When I came in here and started helping it lowered my blood pressure," Stevens confided. "It was soothing, it's quiet, you visit. If you have something to discuss or want ideas you can bounce them off them, so it was very therapeutic for me. When you're trying to explain what your problem is sometimes that works it out for you because they see it differently, they ask a question and then you bounce one back around and it comes back to where you can answer it."

The amount of knowledge the quilters share allows them to help each other as they happily sew along.

"Therapy, relaxation, visitation, talking to somebody," Stevens said. "It's all visiting, I firmly enjoy it. The hand quilting is just a visit so everybody can talk and talk about what they want to express. Maybe somebody wants to learn how to make the icing on a cake come out right every time, or I have this problem with canning, you can help me? We all express our opinions and go from there."

Taylor Swift wins big at MTV Video Music Awards

By Maria Sherman

AP Music Writer

NEW YORK — Taylor Swift's dominance continued at the MTV Video Music Awards, where she took home seven awards — including the night's biggest, the trophy for video of the year.

In her speech Wednesday night, Swift thanked her "boy-friend, Travis" for being on set of the "Fortnight" music video and cheering her on. Fans rewarded the mention of NFL star Travis Kelce with loud screams.

"Everything this man touches turns to happiness and fun and magic," she said, before shifting gears to the 2024 presidential election and instructing her fans who are over 18 to register to vote.

Swift did, however, avoid discussing Kamala Harris' presidential bid on stage. On Tuesday night, Swift endorsed the vice president, moments after Harris' debate with former president Donald Trump ended.

Swift's awards haul brings her to a career total of 30, tying her and Beyoncé for the title of most-awarded musician in VMA history. Eminem is now the male artist with the most VMAs, at 15.

Swift and Post Malone also took home the first televised award of the VMAs for best collaboration, for "Fortnight," handed to them by Flavor Flav and Olympian Jordan Chiles.

Swift started that speech by giving remembrance to everyone who lost their lives and loved ones during 9/11, 23 years ago.

"I've just been thinking about what happened 23 years ago, everyone who lost a loved one and everyone that we lost and that is the most important thing about today," she said. "And everything that happens tonight falls behind that."

She then turned to discussing Malone.

"There is a reason Post Malone is everyone in music's favorite person to collaborate with," she shifted her attention to him. "It has taken forever for me to get him to stop calling me ma'am."

Chappell Roan won the MTV Video Music Award for best new artist.

"I dedicate this to all the drag artists who inspire me," she said in her speech, while wearing chain mail, reading from a written speech in her diary. "And I dedicate this to queer and trans people who run pop. ... Thank you for listening."

Women dominated the award show, no example greater than an imaginative, medieval set from Roan.

Drag queen Sasha Colby introduced her with "your favorite drag queen's favorite artist," a reference to Roan's now famous Coachella performance, which in turn was inspired by Colby. Real fans no doubt got a kick out of the hyper-referential tidbit.

Roan appeared in armor, shooting a lit crossbow at castles that stood behind her, burning them in the process. Her dancers were knights, battling each other in incredible choreography as she sang her queer pop hit, "Good Luck, Babe."

The other voice of 2024 pop, Sabrina Carpenter, won the trophy for song of the year for "Espresso."

"This is really special," she said in her speech, dedicated to her fans. "And thank you to that me-espresso."

Earlier in the night, she brought her summery-pop to the award show, powering through her hit singles "Please Please Please," "Taste" and "Espresso" while dancing with a moon man and an alien.

Katy Perry received the Video Vanguard Award, performing an eight-song medley spanning her career: "Roar," "E.T.," "California Gurls," "Teenage Dream," "I Kissed a Girl," "Firework," and "Lifetimes."

"I did that all on the first day of my period, can you believe it?" she joked after accepting the honor from her partner, Orlando Bloom. "There are so many things that have to align to have a long and successful career as an artist. There are no decade long accidents."

She also teased a new song, "I'm His, He's Mine," featuring Doechii, which samples the Crystal Waters classic, "Gypsy Woman (La Da Dee La Da Da)."

Previous recipients of the Video Vanguard Award include Shakira, Beyoncé, Minaj, Madonna, Janet Jackson, Jennifer Lopez, Rihanna and Missy Elliott.

An army of Slim Shady-lookalikes followed Eminem as he kicked off the VMAs, launching into a medley of his hits "Houdini" and "Somebody Save Me," featuring a broadcast feed of Jelly Roll. (The song references Jelly Roll's massive country radio hit, "Save Me.")

Megan Thee Stallion welcomed the crowd as a first-time host Wednesday night, who joked that the VMAs now stands for the "voluptuous Megan awards." She later performed.

Earlier in the evening, Karol G took over, for a fiery performance of her hit, "Si Antes Te Hubiera Conocido." Rauw Alejandro brought Puerto Rico to the stage, running through "Touching The Sky," "DILUIVO" and "Déjame Entrar."

Tyla won the best Afrobeats award.

LL COOL J celebrated 40 years of Def Jam Records with Public Enemy's Flavor Flav and Chuck D.

Halsey took it to the suburbs for her new single, "Ego," channeling garage bands. GloRilla's "Yeah Glo!" and "TGIF" brought style.

Blackpink's LISA, the best K-pop award winner, made her way to the VMA stage for the first time as a soloist, powering through two of her brand-new singles, "New Woman" and "Rockstar." Shawn Mendes made along-awaited return, debuting a new John Mayer-esq. acoustic number, "Nobody Knows."

Anitta performed "Paradise," "Alegria," and "Savage Funk," joined by DJ Khaled, Fat Joe and Tiago PZK and won the award for best Latin. Camilla Cabello performed in a panopticon. Benson Boone seemed as stoked as ever to perform his viral hit "Beautiful Things" on the VMAs stage. Lenny Kravitz proved rock isn't dead with "Are You Gonna Go My Way," "Human" and finally "Fly," in which he was joined by Quavo.

The 40th VMAs were held at the UBS Arena on New York's Long Island.

The night was stacked with celebrities and featured plenty of Swift, who arrived at the award show wearing a green tartan corset with a matching train and long black leather gloves.

Throughout the night, MTV flashed back to history-making across the VMAs' 40-year-run, including Britney Spears' albino python and Madonna's performance of "Like A Virgin."

How social media became a storefront for fake pills

By Barbara Ortutay

AP Technology Writer

Fentanyl overdoses have become a leading cause of death for minors in the last five years or so, even as overall drug use has dropped slightly. In a 2022 analysis of fentanyl-laced prescription pills, the DEA found that six out of 10 contained a potentially lethal dose of the drug.

And social media, where tainted, fake prescription drugs can be obtained with just a few clicks, is a big part of the problem. Experts, law enforcement and children's advocates say companies like Snap, TikTok, Telegram and Meta, which owns Instagram, are not doing enough to keep children safe.

In 2022, two weeks after she turned 17, Coco left home just outside New York City to meet with a dealer she'd messaged through Instagram who promised to sell her Percocet, her mom, Julianna Arnold, recalled recently. She never made it home. She was found dead the next day, two blocks from the address that the guy had provided her.

Whatever the dealer gave Coco, her mother said, was not Percocet. It was a fake pill laced with fentanyl, which can be lethal in a dose as small as the tip of a pencil.

Mikayla Brown lost her son Elijah, who went by Eli, to a suspected fentanyl overdose in 2023, two weeks after his 15th birthday.

His father found him unresponsive on a September morning last year. His cause of death was accidental fentanyl overdose. But he wasn't trying to buy fentanyl, he was looking for Xanax, and, like Coco, ended up with tainted pills that killed him.

A few taps away While data on the prevalence of drug sales on social platforms is hard to come by, the National Crime Prevention Council estimates that 80% of teen and young adult fentanyl poisoning deaths can be traced to some social media contact.

In a sweeping 2023 report on the problem, Colorado's attorney general called the availability of fentanyl and other illicit substances online "staggering."

"Due to their ubiquity, convenience, and lack of regulation, social media platforms have become a major venue for drug distribution," the report said. "Where once a teen might have had to seek out a street dealer, hassle friends, or learn to navigate the dark web to access illicit drugs, young people can now locate drug dealers using their smartphones — with the relative ease of ordering food delivery or calling a ride-share service."

Accidental overdoses in the U.S. have decreased slightly each year since 2021 according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Paul DelPonte, executive director and CEO of the National Crime Prevention Council, attributes this partly to more education and awareness about the issue. Among young people ages 0 to 19, there were 1,622 overdose deaths in 2021, then 1,590 in 2022, and 1,511 last year.

The decline, DelPonte said, is "very small."

Companies respond

In a statement, Meta said drug dealers "are criminals who stop at nothing to sell their dangerous products. This is a challenge that spans across platforms, industries, and communities, and it requires all of us working together to address it."

The company added that it works with law enforcement and proactively took down 2 million pieces of content, 99.7% before they were reported in the first three months of 2024.

Meta says it blocks and filters "hundreds" of terms associated with illicit drug sales and links to recovery and substance abuse resources when possible. But drug dealers and other bad actors constantly shift their strategies, coming up with fresh ways to avoid detection.

Snap, in a statement, said it is "heartbroken by the fentanyl epidemic and are deeply committed to the fight against it."

"We've invested in advanced technology to detect and remove illicit drug-related content, work extensively with law enforcement helping to bring dealers to justice, and continue to raise awareness and evolve our service to help keep our community safe. Criminals have no place on Snapchat," said Jacqueline Beauchere, Global Head of Platform Safety at the company.

Lawsuits and regulation

While it can happen on any social media site, experts often single out Snapchat as a particularly dangerous platform, something the company vehemently disagrees with. In October 2022, a group of parents who say their children bought fentanyl from drug dealers they met through Snapchat sued the company for wrongful death and negligence, calling it a "haven for drug trafficking."

Advocates are hoping that regulation of tech companies could help address the problem, as it might help with other dangers kids face on social media. In July, the Senate passed the Kids Online Safety Act, legislation designed to protect children from dangerous online content. It still awaits a vote in the House. Sen. Jeanne Shaheen, D-N.H., and Sen. Roger Marshall, R-Kan., meanwhile, introduced a bill that would require social media companies to report illicit fentanyl, methamphetamine and fake pill activity occurring on their platforms to law enforcement.

"We must do more at the federal level to combat the flow of fentanyl into our communities, and it starts by holding social media companies accountable for their part in facilitating illicit drug sales," Shaheen said.

WHAT'S NEW ON NETFLIX

"What's Next: The Future with Bill Gates" (2024)

Look toward the future and all its infinite possibilities when the new docuseries "What's Next: The Future with Bill Gates" premieres Wednesday, Sept. 18, on Netflix. Hosted by Bill Gates, the legendary "tech visionary and global health and climate philanthropist" (per Netflix), the series takes viewers on an educational journey through some of the biggest issues facing our world today and how they might grow and change in the coming years. Featuring interviews with and insights from some of the world's "most renowned scientists, politicians, thinkers, journalists, medical professionals, artists and more," the series looks into "the promise and risks of artificial intelligence; the pervasive challenge of misinformation and the underlying complexity of defining truth in an era of social media; the scale of the climate crisis and the potential of cutting-edge technologies to solve it; the injustice of income inequality and the opportunities to tackle poverty; and how science and innovation is leading to cures for deadly diseases" (Netflix). The series comes from executive producer Morgan Neville ("20 Feet From Stardom," 2013).

"Twilight of the Gods" - Season 1

The creative mind of Zach Snyder ("Zach Snyder's Justice League," 2021) expands into new territory with the premiere of "Twilight of the Gods," an animated fantasy series for adults, which makes its debut Thursday, Sept. 19, on Netflix. A new take on Norse mythology, the series follows the story of Leif (Stuart Martin, "Miss Scarlet & the Duke"), a mortal king, who is saved by a warrior named Sigrid (Sylvia Hoeks, "Blade Runner 2049," 2017) on the battlefield. Falling in love after his rescue and marrying, Leif and Sigrid are excited to begin their new life together. But their lives are thrown into chaos when Thor (Pilou Asbaek, "Game of Thrones") goes on a wrathful rampage on the night of their wedding. Banding together with a crew of crusaders, Leif and Sigrid set out on a merciless hunt for revenge. Co-created and written by Snyder, Jay Oliva ("Young Justice") and Eric Carrasco ("Supergirl"), "Twilight of the Gods," from The Stone Quarry and Xilam animation studios, also features of voice acting talents of Rahul

Kohli ("iZombie"), Paterson Joseph ("Wonka," 2023), Jamie Clayton ("The L Word: Generation Q"), Birgitte Hjort Sorensen ("Borgen"), Kristofer Hivju ("Game of Thrones"), Thea Sofie Loch Naess ("Evil"), John Noble ("Fringe"), Peter Stormare ("Fargo," 1996), Jamie Chung ("Big Hero 6," 2014), Lauren Cohan ("The Walking Dead"), Helena Mattsson ("Surrogates," 2009) and Corey Stoll ("Billions").

WHAT'S NEW ON HULU

"Child Star" (2024)

With more and more dark truths about the realities of working as young talent in Hollywood coming to light, another documentary aims to tell their stories. Premiering Tuesday, Sept. 17, on Hulu, "Child Star" catches up with some of the most well-known child stars from the '90s and aughts, exploring the highs and lows that they experienced growing up with a spotlight on their every move. Co-directed by actor and singer Demi Lovato, who came into fame with roles in Disney productions like "Camp Rock" (2008) and "Sonny with a Chance" before launching a wildly successful music career, the film follows Lovato as she sits down with familiar faces including Drew Barrymore ("Never Been Kissed," 1999), Kenan Thompson ("Good Burger," 1997), Christina Ricci ("Casper," 1995), Raven-Symoné ("That's So Raven"), JoJo Siwa ("Dance Moms") and Alyson Stoner ("Camp Rock," 2008), among others, as it "deconstructs the stages of earlier stardom and looks at the entertainment system over the last century" through a mix of celebrity interviews, verite scenes and archival footage (per Hulu). Reflecting on their own experiences and sharing some exclusive stories, "they take a look at the next generation of child actors and how to move forward in an ever-changing landscape" (Hulu). Co-directed by Lovato and Nicola Marsh ("the 12th Victim"), "Child Star" is executive produced by Lovato, Scooter Braun ("Dave"), Scott Manson ("The BeatBuds, Let's Jam!"), Jennifer McDaniels ("Justin Bieber: Our World," 2021), Scott Ratner ("Mountain Queen: The Summits of Lhakpa Sherpa," 2023) and James Shin ("Dave").

"American Sports Story: Aaron Hernandez"

Explore the life and career of one of professional football's most notorious players when "American Sports Story: Aaron Hernandez" premieres on Hulu Tuesday, Sept. 17. A professional football player from 2010 to 2012, having played for the NFL's and their legacy in sports and American culture" (per FX). The series also stars Jaylen Barron ("Blindspotting") as Shayanna Jenkins, Lindsay Mendez ("All Rise") as Tanya Singleton, Ean Castellanos ("Tommy") ad D.J. Hernandez, Tammy Blanchard ("Bibi," 2023) as Terri Hernandez, Tony Yazbeck ("Billions") as Urban Meyer, Patrick Schwarzenegger ("Gen V") as Tim Tebow, Thomas Sadoski ("The Newsroom") as Brian Murphy, Norbert Leo Butz ("Dan in Real Life," 2007) as Bill Belichick, Jerry Levine ("Hawaii Five-O") as Robert Kraft and Ross Jirgl ("Butch vs. Sundance," 2023) as Tom Brady. Developed for television by Stuart Zicherman ("The Americans"), the series is directed by Paris Barclay ("Billy Preston: That's the Way God filmmaker Matt Reeves' "The Batman" (2022), the new crime drama miniseries "The Penguin" premieres Thursday, Sept. 19, on Max. Following the events of the original film, the series follows Oswald Cobblepot, aka the Penguin (Colin Farrell, "The Banshees of Inisherin," 2022), as he works to take control of Gotham's underworld. Directed by Craig Zobel ("Mare of Easttown"), the series is written by Lauren LeFranc ("Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D."). Cristin Milioti ("The Wolf of Wall Street," 2013), Rhenzy Feliz ("Runaways") and Michael Kelly ("Tom Clancy's Jack Ryan"), Shohreh Aghdashloo ("The Expanse"), Deirdre O'Connell ("Outer Range"), Clancy Brown ("The Shawshank Redemption," 1994), James Madio ("The Featherweight," 2023), Scott Cohen ("The 10th Kingdom") and Michael Zegen ("The Marvellous Mrs. Maisel") also star.

WHAT'S NEW ON PRIME VIDEO

"A Very Royal Scandal"

In 2019, journalist Emily Maitlis (portrayed by Ruth Wilson, "His Dark Materials") sat down for an interview with Prince Andrew (Michael Sheen, "Prodigal Son") over "the scandalous accusations he faced regarding his involvement with Jeffrey Epstein [John Hopkins, "Poldark] and Virginia Giuffre" (per Prime Video), which shocked the world. Premiering on Prime Video Thursday, Sept. 19, the drama miniseries, "A Very Royal Scandal," is a dramatized retelling of the events that took place in the days leading up to the interview, the interview itself and the life-changing aftermath. Based on Maitlis' book "Airhead: The Imperfect Art of Making News," the series is written for the screen by Jeremy Brock ("Casualty") and directed by Julian Jarrold ("The Crown"). The series also stars Joanna Scanlan ("Notes on a Scandal," 2006) as Amanda Thirsk, Alex Jennings ("The Crown") as Sir Edward Young and Éanna Hardwicke ("The Sixth Commandment") as Stewart Maclean.
