2025 MUNICIPAL ELECTION

Covington, Cross running to represent Third Ward on Sedalia City Council

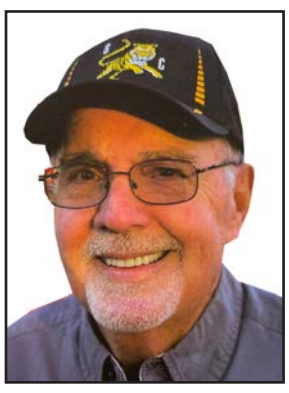

Two people are running to represent the Third Ward on the Sedalia City Council in the Tuesday, April 8 Municipal Election.

Newcomer David Covington and incumbent Bob Cross are running for one open seat.

Each candidate was asked to fill out a questionnaire. Answers were limited to 150 words and candidates are listed alphabetically by last name. The candidates' responses have only been lightly edited for grammar.

David Covington

Bob Cross

Why are you running for office?

Covington: I am running for City Council to serve my neighbors and work hard on their behalf. Sedalia is a great place to live, and I believe we are all in this together. To listen to the concerns and respond to them quickly and effectively.

Cross: I'm running for re-election because this is my home, and I care about the people who live here. I've spent my time on city council making sure our police and firefighters have what they need, that our roads and sidewalks are getting fixed, and that city government is working for the people — not against them. Sedalia has made progress, but there's still work to do.

I want to keep pushing for safer neighborhoods, cleaner streets, and better city services because those things matter to the people who live here every day. I don't make big speeches or empty promises — I just get to work. People who want leaders to listen and follow through, not ones who talk in circles. That's why I'm running — to keep working for you, to keep fighting for what matters, and to keep making Sedalia a great place to live and raise a family.

Sedalia 200, district schools earn Purple Star designation

By Chris Howell
chrish@sedaliademocrat.com

Sedalia School District 200 received the 2025 Missouri Purple Star designation from the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

The designation was also given individually to Heber Hunt Elementary, Horace Mann Elementary, Loftus Early Childhood Center, Parkview Elementary, Sedalia Middle School, Skyline Elementary, Smith-Cotton Junior High and Washington Elementary.

The Purple Star School designation is awarded to military-friendly local education agencies with a major commitment to students and families connected to our nation's military.

Smith-Cotton High School earned the designation last year from the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE).

Assistant Principal Joe Doyle said it is a favored program of Sedalia 200 Superintendent Todd Fraley.

"We proved to the state that these were some things that we do to make that transition easier and how we are accommodating for our military families," Doyle said. "So the high school last year received the Purple Star recognition."

Sedalia 200 administration knew the program for military families was in all their schools, so this year they took it district-wide this year.

"The rest of our buildings will be recognized next week as purple star schools," Doyle said. "Just meaning that we are accommodating to those military families and do what we can. They're an important part of our community, they give so much to us, how can we give back to them?"

Smith-Cotton Junior Trinity Vess's father has been in military security for 17 years and is currently stationed at Whiteman Air Force Base.

"I've been in a total of 13 schools counting this one," Vess said. "It's always a struggle, especially in high school, everyone has their friend group they've been going to school with for years, so it's always hard to jump into that. But you get to share a different story, you're different from other people because you have all these different adventures you've gone on in different states. Sometimes people find that interesting, sometimes people don't.

Asbestos reports released on four code violation homes

By Chris Howell
chrish@sedaliademocrat.com

Asbestos reports ordered by the City of Sedalia are in on four homes, three recently demolished and one still standing.

Sedalia's Chief Building Official, Bryan Kopp, met with the Democrat to share the testing results.

"Asbestos reports back, and of the three houses that have been demolished already, one of them has no asbestos and two of them have asbestos in them," Kopp said. "One of the homes that's just the floor tile and some window caulk, and the other home had a little bit more in it."

The home at 1512 South Prospect Ave., still a pile of rubble, was found to have no asbestos according to a pre-demolition inspection report by an ARSI Incorporated pre-demolition survey dated March 4, 2025.

119 South Stewart Ave. was demolished before it could be checked for asbestos, and its wreckage was found to indeed contain non-friable asbestos in siding and floor tile.

A demolished home at 818 West Fifth St. was also found to contain non-friable asbestos in floor tile and window caulk.

The fourth house the City has not yet demolished is at 830 West Sixth St. and was found to contain the more hazardous friable asbestos in its caulk and floor tile.

"Which gives us the opportunity to remediate that before the house is demoed," Kopp said. "What we found out is that there's a difference between friable and non-friable asbestos and the friable fibers are of the highest concern in that if they get broke up, they can be airborne,

Bothwell earns Acute Heart Attack Ready recertification from The Joint Commission

Bothwell Regional Health Center has been granted continued compliance of its Acute Heart Attack Ready (AHAR) certification from The Joint Commission, demonstrating its ability to quickly diagnose heart attacks, including the most severe type, ST-segment elevation myocardial infarction (STEMI). STEMI occurs when a major artery supplying oxygen-rich blood to the heart is completely blocked.

Developed in collaboration with the American Heart Association, AHAR certification is awarded to hospitals with strong systems for quickly identifying and transferring heart attack patients. Bothwell was designated a Level III STEMI Center in March 2021 and plays a critical role in improving heart attack care and saving lives. Earning continued AHAR certification reflects the teamwork and dedication of Bothwell's staff in providing high-quality, lifesaving treatment.

Michele Laas, RN, BSN, MSN, Bothwell's chief nursing officer, said the recertification highlights the hospital's commitment to high-quality emergency cardiac care.

"Every second matters when treating a heart attack, especially a STEMI, where immediate intervention is critical," Laas said. "This recertification confirms that our processes and protocols ensure patients receive timely, evidence-based care before they are transferred to a facility with advanced cardiac capabilities."

Bothwell's emergency and cardiac teams work closely with emergency medical services and regional partners to provide seamless, life-saving care for heart attack patients. The hospital's protocols ensure rapid diagnosis and transfer for specialized care.

In the event of someone showing signs of a heart attack, 911 should be contacted immediately. These signs can include pain or discomfort in the chest, arm or shoulder, shortness of breath, feeling lightheaded, nausea or vomiting, or jaw, neck or back pain.

ESTATE

"What are we trying to avoid with an estate plan," Buckley asked the audience of around 100 people. "Probate administration. So, how do we eliminate all this? If you came here to get specific advice from me, you're probably not going to get it as I stand before you, but I'm going to give you some ideas as to what you can do."

Buckley suggested a disabled spouse investigate giving their able spouse or children a Durable Power of Attorney.

"The power to make decisions financially," Buckley said. "To sell real estate, to sell cars, to transfer money out of bank accounts, to make decisions regarding retirement accounts to file tax returns, to do all the things that you must do to manage your estate."

Tucker said the best way to transfer ownership of farm property is to have a slow, gradual process of developing the next generation in the responsibilities of farm ownership.

"Where you develop the next successor to be the problem solver that you want them to be, and to slowly take over," Tucker said. "They take a little bit more responsibility each time, and you take a little bit of a step back. Farmers are scared to death of the word retirement, the most important role they will ever have is not the CEO or the star quarterback, but the coach helping the next generation be successful."

Lang noted many farming family heirs have important decisions to make if some of them want to keep working the farm.

"You may have a child that likes the cattle side of it, do that. The other one likes the grain side of things, row crops, do that, and then find a mix," Lang said. "It's got the estate planning side of it as well. At least think about separating the operation from the land. The land is that huge lottery piece out there that we think about, but the operation needs to be a separate concept. The farming heir needs to have ownership shares in the operation and its sustained planning needs to be separated from the land ownership."

The experts agreed that every estate plan was different as were every family's interests. The biggest mistake they said was not having a well-defined plan that is developed early and communicated often to all parties.

The next Ag Forward event, Incorporating Conservation with Production on your Farm, with Dave Niebruegge, Private Land Conservationist with the Missouri Department of Conservation will be at 5:30 p.m. April 22 at the Thompson Conference Center at State Fair Community College.

CONTRIBUTING COLUMN

It takes a school to raise a village, it takes a village to save a school

Liz Schleicher
Contributing Columnist

It takes a village to raise a child.

That's a proverb so old, not even language scholars can trace its origin. It's a controversial one too – the saying has been worn thin by every smarmy politician with an education agenda for decades.

Then-First Lady Hillary Clinton used it as the title of her book back in 1996, and Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole famously retorted: "We are told that it takes a village, that is collective, and thus the state, to raise a child. And with all due respect, I am here to tell you it does not take a village to raise a child. It takes a family to raise a child."

In the present day, it bears asking if such an ancient idea is still worth anything. What does "it takes a village" even mean in 2025? Do we even have villages? We have cities and suburbs and far-flung rural areas, but neither the quality nor quantity of vibrant small towns and neighborhoods that used to make up the United States. Gone are the places where everybody knew everybody and you trusted most of them. Gone are the days when you were so close to your neighbors you let them be involved with the upbringing of your kids. When I was a preschooler in small-town Illinois, I was spanked by someone else's mom for pushing a kid on the playground. I deserved it. Today, that kind of behavior would make an adult the subject of a viral Facebook post, if not a court date.

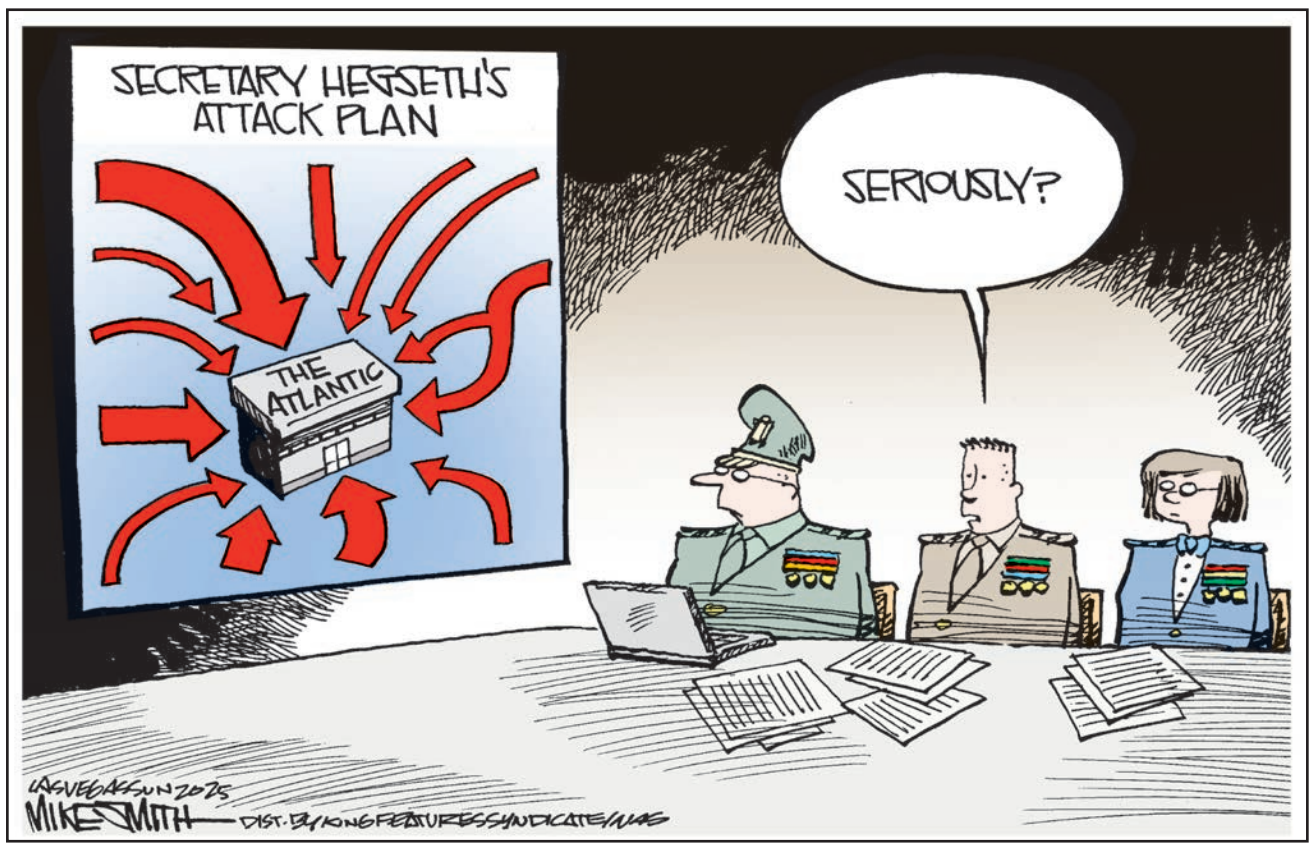

Mayberry is no more. So where do we go from here? Our politicians certainly have ideas. The Hillarys of the world have an expansive vision of a child's village that includes NGOS, businesses, and even the feds. The Bob Dole types counter with a village so small it can fit inside a single house, completely self-contained and dependent on no one. Both of these outlooks have their ardent supporters, but most Americans fall somewhere in the middle: uninterested in the homeschool life, but turned off by the globalist concept of the government being involved in parenting. Most of us still deeply desire a village we can trust. And the best kept secret of all is that they still exist – for now.

America's small local schools, whether public or private, are the villages 21st century parents trust to help bring up their children. A good school district, like the one my family has in our Green Ridge R-8, is not just an education station, although the mission of a school must always be centered on scholarship. A great school district is a grassroots community — built by parents, operated by teachers, and supported by the entire town. It starts by educating kids, but it doesn't stop there, radiating outward to encompass shared values, discipline, friendship, and leisure. A good school's activities and achievements are a source of shared excellence and hometown pride. And in thousands of small places across the USA, the local school is the beating heart of town. If the school disappeared, so would the surrounding gas stations and stores, then the larger businesses, and finally, the people itself.

This village vanishing act is already happening. An average of 1,100 schools per year closed in the United States between the years 2012-2022, leaving empty buildings and neighborhoods in their wake. Costs for everything from textbooks to team uniforms have skyrocketed, with no relief in sight. Teachers' wages have stagnated so much that they make less now than they did in 1990, when adjusted for inflation. Schools struggle to find professionals who want to take on such important work for such a small paycheck. And no one's swooping in to save them. Financial and political pressures on federal and state governments cause them to pass the buck to local taxpayers. In turn, some taxpayers look to shed their burdens too – why should they pay to support a school when their kids are grown, or they've never had children at all?

Vibrant villages. Outstanding schools. Safe places to raise a child. Strong towns with shared values and comfortable amenities and proud achievements. All of these good things go hand in hand. It takes a school to make a village. It takes a village to support a school. We cannot stand by and wait for an impersonal, all-powerful government to take care of us. Nor will we make America great again by shedding all sense of responsibility for each other and our local communities. Mayberry is gone, but there are still towns and schools all over the United States working overtime to maintain their traditions of trust and excellence. They won't survive without everyone pitching in to help. So pick up the trash in the park. Pay to go to the baseball game. Volunteer with the after-school program. Buy from the candy bar fundraiser. Vote for the ballot measure to make sure your school can continue to pay its teachers. It's not the government's responsibility to build the village that raises a child. But it is yours.

But her emails

Deborah Mitchell
Contributing Columnist

The hypocrisy is stunning. The double standard is to be expected. But what leaves me agog is the absolute disregard for national security.

We discovered this week that the U.S. national security team, including the National Intelligence Director and Defense Secretary, were on a Signal chat discussing attack plans in Yemen. Signal is a phone app that deletes messages according to a specified timeline. The Pentagon warned against using it last month because of its vulnerability to hacking by our adversaries. And because it deletes messages, it does not comport with the National Archives requirement of keeping all governmental communications – meaning that if a governmental entity sends messages on it that are set to delete, that entity is violating the law.

We found out about this shocking breach of duty, of the law, of security, because someone on the 18-member chat line invited the editor of "The Atlantic" to join the chat – and no one on the chat noticed. They just blithely continued talking about where, when, and how the attacks were to take place, using adolescent emojis. This is information that, were it to land in a hacker's hands, could endanger every service member taking part in the attacks.

Someone even texted the name of a CIA operative – certainly a way to blow a cover and get people, including our agent, killed or captured.

"The Atlantic" editor, Jeffrey Goldberg, disclosed that he had been invited to join the chat, and did so, thinking that it might be some kind of joke. He read the texts with disbelief, and then waited to see if the attacks happened as the texts said they would – which they did. He was stunned. What Goldberg did not do was disclose the entire chain of messages. He believed that the information was probably top secret/classified.

The Director of National Intelligence and the CIA Director were, coincidentally, set to appear before the Senate the day after the article appeared. Both of them said, in essence, "No big deal. Classified material was not shared on that chat chain."

The Commander-in-Chief was asked about the breach of the plans of attack. His answer? The usual. "I don't know anything about it. It's not a big deal."

Pete Hegseth, the Fox-host-turned-Defense Secretary, was asked by journalists about it. He got mad. "Nobody was texting war plans."

Because the Intelligence chiefs said the information wasn't classified, and because the Secretary of Defense lied about it, "The Atlantic" published the entire chat chain so that the whole world could see the truth of the United States government's incompetence.

But her emails.

In 2016, a similar breach was so bad that the loudest chant at Trump's rallies became "Lock her up!" Remember that?

Hillary Clinton was investigated by the FBI for using a private server when she was Secretary of State to send State Department e-mails. Her offense was so horrible that the then-FBI director, James Comey, broke with protocol and announced not only the investigation, but also that though she had been "extremely careless," charges would not be filed (https://www.cbsnews.com/pittsburgh/news/comey-clinton-email-investigation-report/).

Clinton asserted that she did not send anything with "classified" markings, but some of the e-mails contained material that was later marked as "classified."

The "New York Times" covered the story incessantly. It was all over the news for months. Clinton was asked about it over and over.

Comey's remarks are thought to have cost Clinton the election in 2016.

But now, national defense is so unimportant that anyone with hacking ability can find out when bombs are going to be dropped. Or maybe the people in charge of national defense are totally incompetent.

How far we have fallen.

We should see the "Times" covering this story ad nauseam. If you were up in arms about Hillary Clinton's e-mails, you should be all over this. The news should be just as dedicated to this story as they were about "her e-mails."

Why do I think that won't happen?

To direct our attention elsewhere, the Commander-in-Chief, who knew nothing about this incident (like Sergeant Schulz on "Hogan's Heroes"), has announced new tariffs on cars and car parts made outside the US.

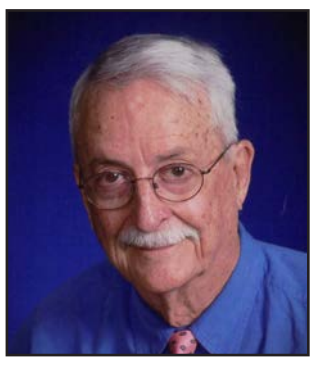

That's so we won't remember the chat chain.

But I will.

CONTRIBUTING COLUMN

If you see my muse, have her call me

Doug Kneibert
Contributing Columnist

As a contributing columnist to the Sedalia Democrat, I usually write two columns per month and sometimes three, as I did in February.

As editor of the Democrat from 1971 to the early 1990s, and then as senior editor for a few years, I had a column in the paper every Friday.

When I calculate my output during those two periods, I estimate that I've written in the neighborhood of 1,350 columns. That I always managed to come up with a subject was a minor miracle.

Until now, that is.

I currently have a bad case of writer's block. I've not heard from my muse, who's always been there for me, for some time. I've reported her disappearance to the Sedalia Police Department and the missing persons squad is on the case.

The manila folder I maintain titled "column ideas" hasn't been any help either. I've repeatedly rifled through it in a frantic search for a workable idea for a column, only to draw a blank.

I've taken comfort from learning that some famous authors also battled writer's block — Ernest Hemingway, F. Scott Fitzgerald and John Steinbeck, to mention a few. Even Mark Twain's pen dried up at times.

But whenever these authors broke up the creative logjam, they wrote books like "A Farewell to Arms," The Great Gatsby," "The Grapes of Wrath" and "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn." I'd be satisfied to pound out my usual 400 words that fill my slot on the Democrat's opinion page.

It's not that I didn't fight back, but try as I might I couldn't get the words to budge from wherever they were being held hostage.

Several authors have offered advice on dealing with writer's block. This from the poet Sylvia Plath: "Every day, writing. No matter how bad. Something will come."

What the heck, I decided to give that a try. I dashed off the bad stuff without a hitch. But I'm still waiting for something good to show up.

I even reread some of my favorite essayists, E.B. White, Joan Didion and Joseph Epstein, in hopes they'd give my creative juices a jump start. They didn't.

So I apologize to my readers, all 12 of them, for not having a column today. If the police are able to run down my muse, I'm hoping things will improve in April.

REPORT

or the non-friable that's generally not the case."

Kopp said the City wants to be transparent with the reports and admits mistakes were made in not checking for asbestos prior to demolition.

"We found that of the two homes that have been demolished that do have asbestos in them, they're both non-friable," Kopp said. "The standing home still it has some friable in it, but again, we get to remediate that before we knock the house down."

Kopp notes DNR exempts single family homes from asbestos abatement requirements as listed as non-regulated structures. The requirements take effect when an entity, such as the City of Sedalia demolishes more than one per year.

"DNR explained to us that if we're doing two or more homes as part of building abatement within a planning year, they defined it as the budget year, then we have to do the asbestos reporting," Kopp said. "As soon as we found that out, we stopped work immediately, we contacted DNR, we've been in great communication with DNR and we have everything we need from them. We're operating in complete lock step with DNR on what the requirements are, total compliance with DNR."

Kopp said he noticed citizen complaints about the home demolitions and lack of asbestos testing, and said The City of Sedalia is adjusting their processes.

"We're always going to get the asbestos reports of any homes that we demo moving forward," Kopp said. "We're updating our model and how we're doing things. There was also some interest from the public to have better notification for the neighboring properties, no problem, we're happy to do it. It may be a door hanger or a letter, but for the immediate neighbors next door, behind it and across the street to let them know when we plan to initiate additional action on this property."

Kopp noted home abatement is an ongoing process with many Missouri homes demolished each year.

"This is something that potentially happens 365 days a year, from corner to corner, statewide," Kopp said. "That's out there, there are homeowners all over the state that can drop their houses without this level of asbestos inspection and remediation, but we know that now and forevermore we'll be in compliance with DNR."

Kopp said communication has been great with the Department of Natural Resources and Sedalia officials intend to act with a sense of transparency and full disclosure.

Cole Camp's Dawson advances to 'The Voice' knockouts

By Joe Andrews
joea@sedaliademocrat.com

Cole Camp native Trevon Dawson, 17, claimed a win in the battle round of "The Voice," on Monday, March 24.

Dawson sang Avril Lavigne's "I'm With You" as a duet with Olympia, Washington's, Tyler Kae Powell, 22, for Team Adam Levine. Levine opted to advance Dawson rather than Powell.

During the show, Levine said Dawson had every right to be skeptical of the song selection.

"I just want to thank you guys [Dawson and Powell] for trusting me," Levine said. "Especially for Trevon. I feel like once he saw the song choice and started doing it, he was like 'what?'"

Levine went on to build off a comment made by judge Michael Buble earlier on, joking Levine was taking over as the "King of Country," referring to former The Voice host Blake Shelton.

"I can feel Blake's ridicule all the way from Oklahoma," Levine said. "'What are you thinking? How dare you? This kid is going to get beat up at school because he is singing Avril Lavigne.' Here's why I'm super proud of you man. You killed it. You did prove people that you could be outside of that box."

Two of the three non-voting judges gave their approval of Dawson.

Kelsea Ballerini complimented Dawson on adding a country twist to the rock ballad.

"It's interesting, because in my brain I'm thinking 'OK, this is probably a little more tailored to Tyler,'" Ballerini said. "But Trevon, the way that you showed up, it could have been a song that was a country song at one point."

Michael Buble praised Dawson's stylistic adjustments for the performance.

"Trevon, you have such a sweet voice," Buble said. "I literally think I made a noise. You sang, and I think I said 'awwwwww' Wow, that's beautiful. Because of the potential I see, if I were Adam it would be hard to not choose you Trevon."

John Legend was the lone artist to prefer Powell over Dawson.

"Trevon, it's such a sharp tone. It's really interesting and cool," Legend said. "It just treads through and has a firecracker quality. Tyler, I heard more corners of your voice and more intricacies in your voice. I found them all really appealing. Because of that, I would pick Tyler."

Dawson, who was first selected by Levine on March 4, following his performance of Tyler Zimmerman's "Religiously," moves on to perform in the knockout round, which begins March 31.

The round is a solo performance.

Dawson is also scheduled to perform locally Saturday, March 28, at Welpman Springs Brewing, 517 Hatchery RD., in Stover. The event runs from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The brewery has emphasized on social media that the event is free, and tickets are not being sold.

There will also be a performance by Laik Smith from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

But it's kind of like a conversation starter."

Local education agencies that earn the Purple Star designation will receive a special Purple Star recognition to display onsite and on their website.

"In recent years the Sedalia School District has made it a priority to develop better and more effective relationships with our military families and with Whiteman Airforce Base," Fraley said in a press release, "It is with great pride and honor for the district to receive this recognition in doing our part to not only support our troops but also their families."

Vess will be one of four students chosen from military families invited to speak in Jefferson City.

"I didn't know that there was a chance out there to tell your story until I got here," Vess said. "They introduced it to me and it's just really cool to maybe impact people's life or tell people it is a big struggle, but there's so many different things to help you overcome being a military kid."

Vess offered a bit of advice applicable for anyone entering a new school or situation.

"Just keep pushing yourself into the crowd," Vess said. "Don't wait for people to come meet you, go meet them. Especially in high school it was really hard my first couple weeks because nobody really talked to me, and then I started getting involved in classwork and with partner groups, I pushed myself out there and made really good friends."

The 2025 Purple Star designees will be recognized at the Month of the Military Child Kickoff event at 10 a.m. April at the Capitol Rotunda, hosted by the Military Interstate Children's Compact Commission and Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

COUNCIL

What are your qualifications?

Covington: I have experience with local government for the City of Zebulon, North Carolina. I served four years from 2015-2019 on the Zebulon Planning Department. I oversaw the development within the town such as building permits, zoning, code enforcement and Geographic Information Systems.

Cross: I've served on the City Council, working to improve public safety, fix roads, and make sure city services work for the people. I also served 20 years on the Sedalia Housing Board, helping provide safe and affordable housing for families. I know how to get things done in city government. I've worked closely with our police, firefighters and city crews to support the things that matter — better pay and equipment for our first responders, road improvements like 16th Street, and smart spending that makes tax dollars go further. But what's the most important thing? I listen. When people call me with a concern, I answer. If there's a problem in the Third Ward, I show up and work to fix it. That's what leadership is about.

What are your top priorities in office?

Covington: Community involvement will be a priority of mine, to always be transparent and honest on any concern or issue that is brought to me. Building trust, which is a long term priority because it takes time. To restore trust back to our local leaders.

Cross: Public Safety is my number one priority. If people don't feel safe in their homes and neighborhoods, nothing else matters. That's why I've supported better pay, training and equipment for our police and firefighters. Roads and sidewalks are also a focus. The City's Street survey showed what we already knew — a lot of neighborhood streets are in rough shape. That's why I fought for the resurfacing of 16th Street, and I'll keep working to fix more roads. A lot of sidewalks are in bad shape. We need to keep replacing them so families and seniors can walk safely. I also want to keep cleaning up Sedalia. That means tackling rundown properties, keeping neighborhoods looking good and making sure this is a great place to raise a family. Finally, I believe in smart spending. That's why I supported buying the macro paver, which lets us fix more roads for less money.

What goals do you have for office if you are elected?

Covington: To attract, revitalize, and expand businesses in the downtown area of Sedalia. To work with the community to create a world class quality of life.

Cross: My goal is simple: keep working for Third Ward citizens. Public Safety always comes first. We've made good progress supporting our police and fire departments, but we need to keep investing in the people who protect our city. Fixing roads is a must. Now that we have a street survey showing the worst roads, we can focus on getting the ones people drive on every day repaired … Sidewalks need attention, too … Families should be able to walk safely to school, stores, and work …. Keeping Sedalia clean is also important. No one wants to live next to a rundown property or a trash covered lot. I'll keep working to improve neighborhoods by holding Property Owners accountable when they neglect their properties while also supporting those who are trying to maintain and improve their homes. And finally I'll keep making sure your tax dollars are spent wisely.

Why should people vote for you?

Covington: I have a heart and compassion for people. I am devoted to public service. I believe in the commitment to ensuring the people are involved with their local government. Sedalia is progressing. We need progressive and responsible leaders on our Council and I am that leader.

Cross: People should vote for me because I get things done. I don't sit around talking about problems — I find solutions and fix them. I've fought for better pay and equipment for first responders, road repairs like 16th Street, and smart spending that makes tax dollars go further. When people call me with a problem, I answer. When there's an issue in a Third Ward, I show up to work and fix it. That's how I've always done things, and that's how I'll keep doing them. I want Sedalia to be safe, clean, and a great place to raise a family. That means strong public safety, good roads, and well-kept neighborhoods. I'll keep fighting to make Sedalia a place where people feel safe, where families can grow and where businesses can thrive. If you want a councilman who listens, follows through and delivers results, then I'm asking for your vote.

SHOTS DON'T FALL FOR SFCC WOMEN IN LOSS TO ARIZONA WESTERN

State Fair Community College women's basketball lost to Arizona Western College 67-49 in the first round of the NJCAA Division I National Tournament on Tuesday, March 25, at the Ford Wyoming Center in Casper, Wyoming.

The contest was an offensive struggle for the No. 20-seeded Lady Roadrunners, as they converted just 28.4% (19-of-67) of their shots from the field and 10.0% (2-of-20) of their shots from 3-point range.

For comparison, No. 13-seeded Arizona Western shot 42.6% (23-of-54) from the field and 37.9% (11-of-29) from 3-point range.

"The ball just didn't fall for us," SFCC head coach Nicole Collier said. "But we didn't get in there and mix it up the way I thought we should to create some extra possessions."

The Lady Roadrunners finish the season with a 24-7 record.

This was State Fair women's basketball's fifth trip to the national tournament in program history, but the first in 11 years.

SFCC secured its spot in the tournament by claiming the Region 16 title with a 73-70 win over nationally-ranked No. 2 Three Rivers Community College on March 14.

Collier, who just completed her fourth season as head coach, said the journey to Casper required hard work and dedication from the entire team.

"I'll be real honest with you, we started the season off with a loss against Triton [College] and we didn't look very good, we didn't look very sharp," Collier said, referring to the team's 71-50 season-opening loss. "But the team bought in and was committed to sticking together and competing together and continuing to work as a whole. So they put the time and effort in, they bought in, and they started seeing results."

Sophomore Madison Johnson said it was a blessing to get this far in the season.

"I've never experienced anything like this, which it was really awesome to experience," Johnson said. "I'm very thankful we got here, it sucks a little bit that it ends now, but I'm just thankful we got here."

Johnson gave the Lady Roadrunners their only lead of the game against Arizona Western (26-4) with a basket-and-one in the opening minutes of the first quarter to make it 5-4.

The Lady Matadors responded with an 11-0 run to gain a 15-5 lead, but SFCC was able to cut the deficit to five at 17-12 by the end of the first period.

Arizona Western led by as many as 12 in the second quarter and took a 38-27 lead into halftime.

Freshman Ellie Buscher made a basket and sank a pair of free throws to trim the deficit down to single digits to start the third quarter.

However, freshman Nyah Hardy and sophomore Rita Gomes combined for four 3-pointers in the period for the Lady Matadors to help them take a 56-38 lead into the fourth.

Arizona Western's lead peaked at 20 three separate times in the final frame. Sophomore Kimora McClure added the finishing touches to the score at the stripe for SFCC.

FOR THE LOVE OF WORDS

New languages can be fascinating, fun

Debbie Noland

Guest Columnist

Call me weird, but one of the first things I look for when I travel to a new country is a bookstore. I love to buy those little pocket-size phrasebooks that give a word-happy tourist like me some common expressions and pronunciation tips for whatever language is spoken there. Usually, these little gems include a basic bilingual dictionary and a few fundamental grammar rules, as well as interesting facts about the country's history and culture.

The universal human construct of language has always fascinated me. It blows me away to imagine how, ages ago, little pockets of civilization all over the world recognized independently the need for a system of spoken utterances they could use to communicate with one another. Because this kind of verbal connection is a basic human need, languages were born to fill it. According to the linguistic encyclopedia "Ethnologue," over 7,000 languages are spoken in the world today.

Although I have always had a penchant for reading and writing, my love affair with languages began when I took Latin during my freshman and sophomore years of high school. Much later, I completed college courses in conversational French and Spanish. For the past two years I have been using an online language-teaching platform to learn Dutch, the language of windmills (windmolen) and tulips (tulpen).

"Why Dutch?" you may wonder. It's a long story. In 2016 my husband Gary and I hosted an American Field Service (AFS) student, Julie Kleijweg, for a semester while she attended State Fair Community College. The following year she returned for a visit, along with her parents. Then, in 2023, the family invited us to visit The Netherlands (Nederland) and stay in their home in Voorburg, located near The Hague. In preparation for our trip, I set out to learn some Dutch just for fun, and I have continued my study ever since.

Over these past two-plus years, the game-oriented language-teaching platform Duolingo has taught me more about the Dutch language than I would ever have imagined. Two years ago, my daughter was using this online program to learn Spanish, and a couple of her kids had also picked out languages to explore. Although the basic Duolingo is free, she had a family plan going and was kind enough to add me to it. The cost, if a person chooses that approach, is nominal and well worth it.

The fact that the basic Duolingo is free is one of its benefits. I used that arrangement myself before joining the family group. The disadvantages of the free version are frequent ads and the penalty of having to wait to play again if you make too many mistakes. That can be annoying when it disrupts the continuity your learning. Nevertheless, the free version is a reasonable place to begin if you want to try the program out. Then, if you like the Duolingo concept but the disadvantages drag you down, you can choose to go with the paid version.

In my experience, the positives of Duolingo far outweigh the negatives. The relatively short lessons, grouped by a grammatical concept (past tense, for instance) or subject (like food or travel), average about 15 minutes. They incorporate both oral and written language skills, providing practice in speaking, listening, reading, and writing.

Duolingo's game format appeals especially to members of the video game set who thrive on competition. Personally, I prefer to compete only with myself and therefore ignore statistics like my ranking among players, my standing in a "promotion" or "demotion" zone, or how many XP (experience points) I can accrue. The only statistic I try to maintain is my "streak, or the number of consecutive days I am active on the site. The desire to keep my streak going has made learning Dutch a daily habit. Another motivator is the Saturday "progress report," telling me how I did compared to the previous week in lessons completed and time spent.

For me, a weakness with Duolingo is that it doesn't explain the rules for word order in a sentence. Dutch sentence structure varies a bit from English, leaving me to learn as best I can from sentences the program writers use as examples in lessons. This is challenging, but not a deal breaker. From two years of sample sentences and Duolingo's built-in review cycle, I am getting a feel for the word order used in Dutch sentences.

Soon I will leave my writing of this month's column to complete Day 761 of my Duolingo streak. If you find yourself wanting to try a new language in a motivating but non-competitive format, I strongly recommend Duolingo.

Good luck, and, for now, "Goedendag."

Three different denominations come together to promote unity

By Faith Bemiss-McKinney

faithb@sedaliademocrat.com

A unique concept of spreading Christian unity and the love of God is taking place with three Sedalia churches as they celebrate Sunday morning worship together as one.

Burns Free Will Baptist Church, Broadway Episcopal and Christ & Trinity Lutheran will come together for the second time Sunday, March 30, to worship.

Burns Free Will is pastored by Bishop Paul Jones, and Broadway Episcopal and Christ & Trinity are pastored by Pastor Anne Kyle. The congregations, all of different faiths, worshipped together for the first time on Sept. 29, 2024, at Broadway Episcopal, with Jones giving the message.

This Sunday, Kyle will give the message at Burns Free Will.

The idea of bringing different denominations together to worship began about a year before the first service. Kyle and Jones had met at the Mayor's Prayer Breakfast a couple of times and got to know each other.

Whenever they met, Kyle would suggest doing a pulpit swap.

"'We need to do a pulpit swap,'" Kyle said about their conversations. "'You can come wake up my congregation, and I can come let yours rest.' I was joking that he's probably a more lively preacher than I am."

Jones added this was something they had talked about from time to time for a while.

On Thursday, March 27, Pastor Anne Kyle and Bishop Paul Jones stand at the pulpit of Broadway Episcopal Church. Kyle pastors Broadway Episcopal, and Christ & Trinity Lutheran, and Jones pastors Burns Free Will Baptist Church. All three churches will come together to worship at Burns Chapel this Sunday, March 30.

"One of the times that I said we need to do a pulpit swap, Bishop Paul said, 'No, sister, we don't, we need worship together,'" Kyle said. "And that's what we ended up doing, and it did take us about a year to plan it."

Jones said Kyle contacted him in early June last year about doing a fifth Sunday fellowship. Since June was already full, they slated the date for September.

"My two churches started probably two years ago, and we always worship together on the fifth Sunday," Kyle said. "And we usually have a meal."

Artistic Isle offers art supplies, classes

By Faith Bemiss-McKinney

faithb@sedaliademocrat.com

Artist Lindsey Starr has returned home to Sedalia to offer others the opportunity to be creative.

Starr, a 2004 graduate of Warsaw High School, received an associate's degree from State Fair Community College and a degree in education with a minor in art to teach kindergarten through eighth grade from the University of Central Missouri, Warrensburg.

After a stint of living in Hawaii, getting married, and living for a time in Georgia, she returned and opened an art shop, Artistic Isle, in downtown Sedalia on April 6, 2023. Starr is married to Daniel Starr and has three children, Annabelle, 7, Isabelle, 3, and Mathias, 18 months.

She fondly recalls taking art classes with Don Luper at State Fair Community College and Mick Luehrman at the University of Central Missouri. She began Artistic Isle 10 years ago in Hawaii and has created her own line of watercolors over the years, which at one point reached 200 colors and were shipped worldwide.

"Watercolor is my jam," Starr said on Wednesday, March 26, while talking with a customer.

Starr currently carries around 50 colors at her shop, which caters to artists and those who wish to learn about art.

"In Georgia is where I started paint making on the side at the end of 2017," Starr said. "I actually make the paint from scratch. I've been doing that commercially for eight years now."

She sells her paint online at ArtisticIsle.com. In the past, she's shipped to Australia, Germany, Greece, France, Ireland, India, Denmark, the U.K., and Africa.

However, due to the increasing tariff prices during the previous presidential administration, she had to stop shipping abroad, although she still ships throughout the U.S.

"I spent a lot of time testing and perfecting the recipe," Starr said. "So, I did create the base recipe from scratch, and it's really good — your paint matters so much."

She carries watercolor caps, half-pans, and mini sets. Artistic Isle also offers watercolor canvases. Starr teaches an introduction to watercolor for ages 12 and up at the Sedalia Area Homeschool Coop and also teaches classes at the shop.

Artistic Isle offers classes from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. each Tuesday. One can register for classes on the website. Upcoming courses include Splatter Flowers on April 1, Watercolor Peeps or Bunnies on April 8, Fillable Painted Eggs on April 15, Watercolor Bookmarks on April 22, and Model Magic Gift Tags on April 29.

Missouri Senate passes bill exempting certain health insurance plans from federal protections

By Clara Bates
Missouri Independent

The Missouri Farm Bureau would be allowed to sell health benefits plans that exclude people with pre-existing medical conditions and limit benefits to less than what's permitted by federal law for health insurers, under legislation that passed the state Senate Thursday.

Sponsored by Republican state Sen. Kurtis Gregory of Marshall, the bill would give the farm bureau a carve-out to skirt the consumer protection requirements set by the Affordable Care Act, in an effort to provide affordable coverage options to members.

The bill was passed by the Senate by a vote of 24 to 6 on Thursday.

"This is not something where this organization is asking for government dollars to put this program into effect," Gregory said during debate Tuesday. "They want to put this on themselves. They want to help cover their members' lives."

The Farm Bureau is a nonprofit agricultural membership organization which partners with for-profit companies to sell various kinds of insurance to its members. Anyone can join — the fee is $30 per year. Historically the group has been primarily made up of people in farming communities.

Missouri Democrats and patient advocates have staunchly opposed the proposal, raising concerns that consumers could be left with inadequate coverage and without proper protections.

"These insurance companies are for-profit companies," state Sen. Tracy McCreery of Olivette said during Tuesday's debate. "And I think that there needs to be some basic guardrails to make sure that there's some parameters that are consistent amongst providers."

Ten other states have passed similar laws. This is the third year the proposal has been pursued in Missouri.

The bill characterizes the plans the Farm Bureau would offer as a "health benefit plan" or "contracts for health care benefits" rather than "insurance," to skirt state and federal regulations on insurance.

Democrats won some concessions, including requiring a written disclaimer in contracts that states the contract "is not health insurance and is not subject to federal or state laws relating to health insurance."

The disclaimer also states that the contract offers fewer benefits than a federally-compliant plan and may exclude coverage for pre-existing conditions. It adds that the individual may qualify for federal insurance subsidies. Under the latest version of the bill, the state's Department of Commerce and Insurance must receive and review complaints from Farm Bureau members.

After hours of negotiation earlier this week, Senate Democrats finally allowed the bill to move forward, with several of their health-related priorities added as amendments as well.

Those additions include provisions that require Missouri Medicaid to cover hearing aids, which is also a freestanding bill passed by the House, expand access to treatment for sexually transmitted infections, and require insurance companies that provide birth control to provide extended supplies.

The bill now heads to the Missouri House, which has passed its own versions of the bill in recent years.

Gregory has estimated around 15,000 Farm Bureau members lack health insurance and would be the target audience to enroll in the benefit plan.

Many farmers and other members of the Farm Bureau, proponents say, are uninsured because they can't afford to buy an individual plan on the Affordable Care Act marketplace or make too much money to qualify for subsidies.

Republican state Sen. Sandy Crawford of Buffalo, who sponsored the legislation in previous years, said she's heard from farmer constituents who can't afford health insurance for several years in support of the bill.

"It's hard for them to get coverage, and health insurance costs are through the roof," Crawford said Tuesday.

"And I think anything that we can do to help… anytime we can give them one more tool for their tool box to at least help them get covered, I think that it's a good thing," she said.

Several farmers and agricultural organizations testified in support of the legislation at the public hearing in January.

Missouri Farm Bureau lobbyist Emily LeRoy called the bill "simply another option to provide coverage for more people."

The Farm Bureau would offer lower prices by reverting to the pre-ACA practice of what's called medical underwriting, carefully evaluating applicants' medical history and risk, to determine whether to cover them and at what price.

Tennessee enacted a version of the law exempting the Farm Bureau from regulation in 1993

Benjamin Sanders, representing the Farm Bureau of Tennessee, said enrollees in states with the program report high levels of satisfaction. The Farm Bureau in other states doesn't need to abide by data transparency requirements of regulated insurance companies. But the organization says internal numbers show a high retention rate.

Missouri lifts poultry event suspension following avian influenza decline

By Jack Payne
Special to the Democrat

Missouri poultry producers and enthusiasts can once again participate in live bird auctions, shows and swap meets as the state Department of Agriculture has lifted its temporary suspension.

The decision, which took effect on March 24, comes after a decline in cases of highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI) that had previously prompted restrictions.

The suspension was initially implemented in January in response to a series of outbreaks that affected poultry flocks in several counties across the state. As HPAI cases surged, the Missouri Department of Agriculture took proactive measures to curb the spread of the virus and protect both commercial and backyard poultry operations.

According to a press release from January, "To help prevent the spread of highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI), the Missouri Department of Agriculture has suspended all poultry and waterfowl auctions, shows and swap meets in Missouri counties containing control areas or surveillance zones as determined by the Department".

These restrictions, while necessary for biosecurity, had a significant impact on the state's agricultural community, particularly small-scale farmers and exhibitors who rely on poultry events for business and networking opportunities.

Recent epidemiological data indicate a marked decrease in new HPAI cases, allowing state officials to reassess and lift the restrictions. Improved containment efforts, including enhanced biosecurity protocols and close monitoring of poultry populations, contributed to this decline. Officials have credited the cooperation of farmers, producers, and event organizers in maintaining strict hygiene measures and adhering to state guidelines, which ultimately helped control the spread of the disease.

The lifting of the suspension means poultry-related gatherings such as fairs, exhibitions, and sales can resume as usual. This change is expected to provide economic relief to poultry farmers and event organizers who faced disruptions over the past several months. Many small farmers depend on swap meets and auctions to buy and sell birds, while exhibitions serve as an important venue for showcasing breeding stock and promoting local businesses.

Although the restrictions have been lifted, state agricultural officials continue to urge caution. Poultry owners are encouraged to remain vigilant and report any signs of illness in their flocks to veterinarians or state officials. Biosecurity measures, such as limiting contact between domestic and wild birds and regularly disinfecting equipment, remain highly recommended to prevent future outbreaks.

The impact of HPAI on Missouri's poultry industry has been substantial, leading to culling efforts that affected commercial operations and individual breeders alike, with cases being reported in Newton, Jasper, Lawrence, and McDonald county. Farmers faced financial losses due to decreased production and market disruptions caused by movement restrictions. The return of poultry events is expected to bring renewed stability to the industry, allowing producers to recover from the economic strain experienced over the past few months.

Despite the improvement in the state's avian influenza situation, national and global concerns about the virus persist. Other states continue to monitor and manage outbreaks, and the risk of future flare-ups remains. The Missouri Department of Agriculture has assured stakeholders that it will continue to monitor poultry health trends and respond swiftly should any new threats arise.

For now, the reinstatement of poultry events is a positive development for Missouri's agricultural community. It not only marks a step toward normalcy but also reinforces the importance of biosecurity and disease prevention in sustaining a resilient poultry industry. As farmers, breeders, and exhibitors gather once again at auctions, shows, and swap meets, there is a collective sense of relief and optimism for the months ahead.

Pasture renovation or repair: native warm season grass options

By Gene Schmitz
University of Missouri Extension

It's no big secret that cool-season grass pastures have taken a beating the last couple of years. Questions regarding complete renovation or repair by interseeding more grass seed come to mind. Below are several things to consider when deciding whether to repair or renovate and which forage types to consider in this process.

We are still early enough in the year that seeding perennial grass seed is an option this spring or fall. The first decision to make is repair or renovate. Take stand counts to estimate the percentage of desirable and undesirable plants growing in the pasture or hay field. I like to lay out a 100-foot tape, then mark down what type of plant is touching the tape at each one-foot mark. When you have taken all 100 readings, you will have a percentage of the types of plants growing in the field. It is wise to take multiple readings across the pasture to get a more accurate picture of what is actually growing in the pasture.

Management recommendations are based on: 1) Complete renovation if 40 to 50 percent desirable plants are present, 2) Repair by interseeding grass and/or legume seed into the existing stand if 50 to 70 percent desirable plants are present, or 3) Greater than 70 percent desirable plants can generally be managed with grazing or harvest management, fertilizer applications, or adding legumes.

To simplify the issue, I will just focus on option one, complete renovation. First, get a soil test as soon as possible. Apply appropriate fertility and lime. If fertility and lime are extremely low, it may be best to work on increasing fertility and pH several months in advance of actually planting seed. Second, manage weed pressure, especially if hard-to-control weed species are present.

Deciding what forage to re-plant is the next major focus. Determine what holes you currently have in your forage production system and evaluate options to fill those deficits. Native warm season grasses (NWSG's) will provide high yields of high-quality forage in summer months. They can also give cool-season grass pastures some vital rest during a time of the year when they won't be growing much anyway. Recommended seeding time for NWSG's is mid-April through May, so there is time to get fields ready for planting this spring.

Weed control is crucial to the successful establishment of native warm season grasses. There are species differences in weed control measures, so be aware of those before selecting a particular species or species mix. Additionally, harvesting, whether haying or grazing, requires leaving a taller residual than many producers are used to with cool-season forages. These grasses generally require less fertilizer after establishment than cool-season forages. Producers need to understand the management differences between cool-season and warm-season perennial grasses and be willing to correctly manage the forage type chosen to renovate pastures.

Information on NWSG selection, establishment and management can be found by searching for "Center for Native Grasslands Management" at the University of Tennessee. In addition to the above web site, contact me by email at schmitze@missouri.edu or call the Pettis County Extension Center at 660-827-0591 for more information on native warm season grass selection, establishment and management.

Economics of drone ownership for agricultural spraying

As the 2025 growing season approaches, many growers will consider using drones to spray their fields.

A new University of Missouri Extension publication, "Economics of Drone Ownership for Agricultural Spray Applications," introduces cost-estimating tools for farmers and custom operators interested in investing in drones for spray applications.

"These tools enable producers to calculate their own drone application costs based on their specific circumstances, helping them make informed decisions about whether drone ownership or contracting out spray services is more cost-effective," said Adauto Rocha, Jr., assistant extension professor in MU's Division of Applied Social Sciences.

The publication provides a detailed analysis of the costs associated with owning and operating drones for agricultural spray applications, with a focus on the Agras T40 model. The study evaluates both ownership and operating costs per acre for farmers and custom operators, considering factors like depreciation, interest, maintenance, labor and battery costs.

The findings suggest that for farmers spraying 1,000 acres a year, the total cost per acre for drone applications is about $12.27. This contrasts with custom hire rates, which are typically around $16 per acre. Based on these calculations, owning a drone could be cost-effective for farms spraying at least 980 acres annually. However, for custom operators spraying 4,000 acres annually, the cost per acre is around $7.39.

Battery replacement contributes significantly to the overall expense of drone operations. The study emphasizes that ownership costs such as depreciation, interest and battery replacement constitute the largest part of the total cost per acre. This highlights that the feasibility of drone ownership largely depends on the scale of operations and the number of acres sprayed annually.

Jones and Kyle said everyone is invited to this Sunday's service, and those attending are encouraged to bring a dish so everyone can have fellowship together after the service. Kyle noted that the service in September wasn't changed; it was a traditional Episcopal service, and the service on Sunday will be a traditional Free Will Baptist service.

This concept of worshipping together has morphed into a more significant idea with the help of Free Will member Brian Smith. Kyle said he came to her with the idea at the September service.

"He said, 'there is something I have been dreaming about,'" Kyle sad. "And I think he said this is something God has called him to do. He had so much excitement …. As lunch was finishing up, Brian, Bishop Paul, and (Dr.) Brent Bates and I all sat down. Brian told us that his dream is to have a worship service where every congregation in Sedalia comes together one Sunday morning at 10 o'clock."

They began working on the idea and have been meeting once a month since December, with a projected date for the service to be hosted on Sunday, Jan. 25, 2026, at the Mathewson Exhibition Center.

The event will be county-wide and now includes Burns Free Will, Broadway Episcopal, Christ & Trinity, First Christian Church, small Baptist Churches under Pastor Nathan Crow, Bethel Family Church, and possibly First United Methodist Church.

Kyle and Jones said there is a particular reason they want to have the worship on a Sunday morning.

"When I spoke here (Broadway Episcopal), one of the things we talked about is unity in coming together," Jones noted. "One of the things that I said was the most segregated hour of the week is Sunday morning because we all go to our separate churches — and that kind of stuck."

Kyle added that everyone works, goes to school, and has recreational activities with various nationalities, but when it comes to church, people often stick with their own ethnic groups.

"When it comes to Sunday morning, we're very divided and segregated into our groups," Kyle said. "We would like to have a Sunday where all the Christians come … and raise their voices in praise to God together and remember that anything that separates us is very small, truly. The thing that unites us is the biggest thing of all, the love of God in Christ."

She cited Psalm 133:1, which says, "How very good and pleasant it is when kindred live together in unity."

Jones and Kyle noted that by bringing three different denominations together to worship, they have learned "there is no difference" and that they "love each other."

"The scripture says that God has no respect of person," Jones said. "Meaning that we're all the same in his eyes — children of His."

Kyle added that when she came to Sedalia and began serving Broadway Episcopal and Christ & Trinity, they became sister congregations.

"And I feel like now, Burns Chapel is a part of the family," Kyle said. "And really Christians everywhere are all part of this one beautiful family — and I guess we've all become closer siblings."

Jones added all Christians are part of the "bloodline of Jesus Christ."

"So, that automatically makes us kindred," Jones said. "We're all as one. What we want to do is to continue to educate people — the bottom line is we're all serving one God."

He added he believes this is "a great move for Sedalia."

The multi-denominational service at Burns Free Will Baptist Church, 207 E. Pettis St., will begin at 11 a.m. Sunday, March 30. Everyone is welcome to attend, and a fellowship meal will follow the service.

To learn more about the Psalm 133 Committee for the Jan. 25, 2026, service, email Kyle at officecalvarye@gmail.com.

The concept of bringing different denominations together to worship has now morphed into a more significant county-wide worship service, with a church service scheduled for Jan. 25, 2026, at the Mathewson Exhibition Center.

Artistic Isle is also involved in the community. Starr is sponsoring the annual Sedalia Citizens Against Spouse Abuse (CASA) Art Exhibit, which will be hosted at the Sedalia Home & Garden Show in the Mathewson Exhibition Center on Saturday, March 29. She is sponsoring the event with art supply prizes.

Starr has also participated in the Sedalia Area Farmers' Market by giving Friday art classes and participating in the Downtown Sedalia's First Thursday events. She plans to donate to the Sedalia Area Literacy Council Tea and Auction, an annual fundraiser, which will be held in April.

"I'm really excited for that," Starr said.

Artistic Isle offers watercolors, journals, pens, art how-to, and watercolor books.

"(Artists) can come in and do in-studio time," Starr said. "And just come paint and use my watercolor and brushes for $10. They just have to buy or bring their own paper," she continued. "I do a $1 a sheet for watercolor paper — I have a whole art menu. I'd be happy to do birthday parties and showers. I just want to make it an available space for anybody."

She added that children can come in with an adult and create make-and-takes for $5. The base price is $5, but they can create 6 for $10. Make-and-takes include "Kindness Rocks," wooden butterflies, journals, and wood blocks. They also make nice small gifts.

Artistic Isle, 120 E. Sixth St., is open from noon to 5 p.m. Monday through Wednesday and by appointment Thursday through Saturday. For more information, call 660-851-0291 or visit ArtisticIsle.com.

Artistic Isle in Sedalia specializes in watercolors and offers classes with owner Lindsey Starr. Starr creates and sells watercolors and has sold them internationally in the past. PHOTOS BY FAITH BEMISS-MCKINNEY | DEMOCRAT

Lindsey Starr, owner of Artistic Isle, holds a painting she created. She plans to enter it in the Sedalia CASA Art Exhibit, which will be hosted during the Home & Garden Show on Saturday, March 29, at the Mathewson Exhibition Center.

Lindsey Starr holds a painted "Kindness Rock," a journal, and butterflies, all of which can be painted at her downtown Sedalia shop, Artistic Isle. Starr has several art classes coming up at the shop in April.

WHAT'S NEW ON PRIME VIDEO

"The Bondsman"

A different kind of reaper takes center stage in Prime Video's new limited series "The Bondsman," premiering on the streamer Thursday, April 3. After he is murdered, bounty hunter Hub Halloran (Kevin Bacon, "City on a Hill") is resurrected by the Devil to take on his old job — but with a wild new twist. Hub won't just be going after any wanted individuals, he'll be hunting down demons that have escaped from Hell. As Hub takes on his new way of life, he "learns how his own sins got his soul condemned — which pushes him to seek a second chance at life, love and country music" (per Prime Video). Created by Grainger David ("The Chair," 2012) and helmed by showrunner Erik Oleson ("Carnival Row"), "The Bondsman" comes from Blumhouse Television, Marker 96, CrimeThink Production Company and Amazon MGM Studios. The series also stars Jennifer Nettles ("The Righteous Gemstones"), Damon Herriman ("Mr. Inbetween"), Maxwell Jenkins ("Lost in Space") and Jolene Purdy ("Orange is the New Black").

WHAT'S NEW ON AMC+

"The Last Anniversary"

Based on the bestselling novel by Liane Moriarty, the new AMC+ Original mystery drama "The Last Anniversary" premieres Sunday, March 30, with new episodes streaming weekly on Sundays. The series stars Teresa Palmer ("A Discovery of Witches") as Sophie Honeywell, a young woman whose life takes a turn when she inherits a house on remote, picturesque Scribbly Gum Island. After her arrival is met with hostility, making it abundantly clear that her presence is unwelcome, Sophie begins to investigate the many mysteries that Scribbly Gum holds — from the disappearance of a young couple decades ago to a web of her own family's complex, long-held secrets. Directed by John Polson ("Elementary"), the series is written by Samantha Strauss ("Dance Academy"). Miranda Richardson ("Good Omens"), Danielle Macdonald ("The Tourist"), Claude Scott-Mitchell ("Hotel Portofino"), Helen Thomson ("Elvis," 2022), Uli Latukefu ("Young Rock"), Susan Prior ("The Rover," 2014), Jeremy Lindsay Taylor ("Playing for Keeps"), Xavier Samuel ("Apple Cider Vinegar"), Angela Punch McGregor ("Troppo"), Charlie Garber ("Spirited"), Nikki Shiels ("Ten Pound Poms") and Ines English ("Last Days of the Space Age") also star.

WHAT'S NEW ON HULU

"Dying For Sex"

Based on the Wonder podcast of the same name, FX's new limited series "Dying for Sex" premieres Friday, April 4, on Hulu. Inspired by the story of Molly Kochan, as detailed in her podcast with her best friend, Nikki Boyer, this dramatization of her life begins when Molly, portrayed by Michelle Williams ("Manchester by the Sea, 2016), receives a Stage IV metastatic breast cancer diagnosis. Determined to live her life to the fullest for as long as she is able, Molly decides to leave her husband, Steve (Jay Duplass, "Transparent"), and take a deep dive into her untapped sexual desires. As Molly gets unabashedly down and dirty, her ride-or-die friend Nikki (played by Jenny Slate, "I Want You Back," 2022) cheers her on all the way. Also starring Rob Delaney ("Catastrophe"), Kelvin Yu ("The Afterparty"), David Rasche ("Succession"), Esco Jouléy ("State of the Union") and Sissy Spacek ("Bloodline"), "Dying for Sex" is co-created and written by "New Girl's" Kim Rosenstock and Elizabeth Meriwether.

WHAT'S NEW ON NETFLIX

"Jurassic World: Chaos Theory" - Season 3

The enduring tale of modern meeting prehistoric continues in Season 3 of "Jurassic World: Chaos Theory," premiering Thursday, April 3, on Netflix. Inspired by Michael Crichton's 1990 sci-fi novel, Steven Spielberg's 1993 smash hit "Jurassic Park" and the many subsequent films, this animated youth series is itself a spinoff of "Jurassic World: Camp Cretaceous," another entry in the expansive Jurassic World franchise. The series picks up six years after the events at Camp Cretaceous, with dinosaurs now roaming wild in the world. In this new era of chaos, "The Nublar Six" grapple with tragedy as they face threats from humans and dinos alike, "the Camp Fam goes global on a search for answers — and an elusive villain — that takes them all over the world" (per Netflix). Helmed by showrunners Scott Kreamer ("Cleopatra in Space") and Aaron Hammersley ("Star vs. the Forces of Evil"), the series also features the voice acting talents of Paul-Mikél Williams ("The Upshaws") as Darius Bowman, Darren Barnet ("Anyone But You," 2023) as Kenji Kon, Raini Rodriguez ("Austin & Ally") as Sammy Gutierrez, Kausar Mohammed ("Monster High") as Yasmina 'Yaz' Fadoula, Peter Arpesella ("Guillermo del Toro's Pinocchio," 2022) as Vito and Kiersten Kelly ("Emergency Contact," 2024) as Brooklyn.

"Gone Girls: The Long Island Serial Killer"

A long-awaited hunt for answers unfolds in "Gone Girls: The Long Island Serial Killer," premiering Monday, March 31, on Netflix. In 2010, human remains were discovered along a stretch of Ocean Parkway in Suffolk County, Long Island, New York. This discovery led to a shocking number of other bodies, unearthing a gruesome connection between the victims — and leading investigators to suspect that it had been the work of a serial killer. Meanwhile, for over a decade before, young women who worked in the sex industry in New York City and nearby Long Island had been disappearing, leaving their loved ones desperate for answers they thought they might never receive. Stretching out for another decade, the case remained unsolved until 2023, "when a major break came after corruption was rooted out within the police responsible for the case" (per Netflix). Detailing the harrowing story from the initial disappearances to the long-awaited arrest, "Gone Girls," directed by Liz Garbus ("All In: The Fight for Democracy," 2020), features interviews with journalists, law enforcement officials, and friends and family of the victims and accused killer alike.

WHAT'S NEW ON DISNEY+

"Oklahoma City Bombing: One Day in America"

Revisiting one of the deadliest acts of terror in modern American history, the new three-part National Geographic documentary "Oklahoma City Bombing: One Day in America" premieres Wednesday, April 2, on Disney+. On April 19, 1995, the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City claimed the lives of 168 people, including 19 children, with countless others injured. Told in vivid detail by those who lived through it, this series details "an unprecedented moment-by-moment account" of the bombing, "including extraordinary stories of survival, heroic rescue efforts, the nationwide search that followed, and a city's need for justice and healing after the tragedy," according to National Geographic. With rare archival footage and firsthand accounts, "One Day in America" relives this harrowing day with those most affected by it. Meanwhile, as a community worked to bring themselves back together, the FBI, led by Special Agent in Charge Bob Ricks, embarked on a frantic race to bring the bomber to justice. The series is produced by National Geographic and 72 Films.
